300 Theatres Start "Romeo" Roadshows

More than 300 roadshowings of "Romeo and Juliet" were started this week, that many theatres having booked the film from Loew's on two-a-day policies. The dates run into February and March. In most cases the bookings are on a 50-50 basis but the company will take over a number of legitimate theatres for the short runs.

Hild Elected by Musicians

Oscar F. Hild has been elected president of the Cincinnati Musicians Local No. 1. Other officers are William Bell, vice-president; Volney L. Hofman, secretary and Charles Joseph, treasurer. Directors are Arthur Bowen, Theodore Hahn, Joseph Lugar, Robert P. Moore and Robert Snyder. Frank Yago is sergeant-at-arms.

Carl Laemmle Foundation

Carl Laemmle, Sr., has filed articles of incorporation of the Carl Laemmle Foundation, a non-profit organization to encourage and provide for charitable, social and educational and recreational endeavors and works. Carl Laemmle, Jr., and Rosabelle Laemmle Bergerman are directors of the foundation.

Nuovo Mondo Offices Moved

Nuovo Mondo Pictures has moved from the RKO building, Rockefeller Center, New York, to the Film Center Building, 630 Ninth avenue.

Fox Action Halted By Supreme Court

A stay of proceedings in the eastern Pennsylvania district court has been ordered by the United States supreme court pending its decision on the petition for review filed last week by Hiram Steelman, trustee in bankruptcy in the William Fox case.

The court granted Mr. Steelman's petition for a temporary restraining order and injunction against further proceedings in the suit brought by the All-Continent Corporation as a creditor of Mr. Fox, until a decision is reached on the petition for review.

Examination of witnesses in the bankruptcy hearing has been adjourned to February 17th.

Expansion Program Planned by Kallett

A program of expansion to include the opening of dark houses and the building of ten new theatres will be decided upon at the annual meeting of Kallett Theatres, Inc., in Oneida, N. Y., on January 28th, according to M. J. Kallett, president. A modernization program calls for expenditure of more than $500,000. The Regent, Syracuse, is to be rebuilt and in Oneida the Madison and Regent are to remodeled and a new house constructed on Main Street. Two or more of the seven Utica houses will be remodeled and in June remodeling will start on the Strand in Canajoharie.

Columbia Buys Broadway Play

Columbia, according to Jack Cohn, vice-president, has closed for the motion picture rights to "You Can't Take It With You," current Broadway stage hit by George Kaufman and Moss Hart. The purchase price, which was not divulged by Mr. Cohn, was $200,000, the highest paid by any producing company in recent years for a stage property and one of the highest on record.

Hoshor Opens Offices

John Hoshor has opened offices at 110 East 42nd Street, New York, to engage in the business of motion picture financing. Mr. Hoshor claims a background of 15 years of Wall Street experience and in the financing of a number of Broadway legitimate productions.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS FAVOR NEW QUOTA PLAN, BUT NOT 50% TOP

Present Principle of Flexibility and Preference to Exhibitors Over Distributors in Latest Moyne Report, Are Indorsed Favor Quality Clause, Oppose Abolition of Advance Booking, Object to Commission with Personnel from Outside

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association in its official statement to the Board of Trade on the Moyne report suggesting revision of the Films Act, which expires in 1938, welcomes the suggested institution of a preference to exhibitors in the quota over distributors, but reserves comment on the figures presented. The Moyne report suggested an initial new quota of 15 per cent for exhibitors and 20 per cent distributors, against the present 20 per cent for both.

The exhibitor organization deprecates the Moyne recommendation for a graduated quota, reaching 50 per cent in 10 years, declaring it impracticable, but favors the principle of flexibility involved. The group approves the quality clause in the report, but suggests that the recommended viewing committee for determination of quality should be composed of two exhibitors, one producer, one distributor and an independent chairman.

It declares its belief that the abolition of the advance booking restrictions would be ill advised and a retrogressive step. The suggestion is vigorously opposed in the statement.

Oppose Outside Commission

The statement says, "We are emphatically opposed to a film commission vested with executive powers and composed of people entirely independent of the industry. In similar schemes applied to other industries it is noted that the main essential of their personnel is long and intimate experience in the business concerned."

The statement indicates that the statutory machinery suggested for the disposal of trade disputes amounts to compulsory arbitration. Any trade dispute, says the organization, should be reported to the Board of Trade by any trade association, and the participants should be free to refer for settlement to the special new official arbitration court suggested or to individual arbitrators. The arbitration court, it is said, should have "executive powers to settle points in dispute which relate to questions of policy."

The official CEA statement says that an offer was made to the Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors) for an additional voluntary conciliation committee but that the KRS objected to statutory arbitration, and the CEA general purposes committee came to the conclusion that the arbitration machinery is useless unless enforceable by statutory authority.

The CEA council has appointed a new overbuilding committee in place of the old redundancy committee, and has decided to drop the word "redundancy."

British Production Increases

A considerable increase of British production, of films of all lengths, is recorded in official figures released by the Board of Trade, of the registrations under the Cinematograph Films Act in the twelve months ended December 31st.

TELEVISION SHOWN ON THEATRE SCREEN

Television as a regular program feature has been inaugurated at the Dominion theatre, London. The images are 8 feet in height by 6 feet 6 inches wide and are clearly visible in all parts of the theatre which seats 3,000. The first performances were conducted by land line from a studio in the theatre building but engineers claim that the pictures would be just as clear if the impulses were transmitted by radio.

The program is sponsored by Gaumont British in cooperation with the Baird Television Company.

In the year 24 more British features (films over 3,000 feet) were registered than in 1935 and shorts increased by 51.

The percentage of British features to total features registered was 29.5 and the British percentage of features and shorts combined was 27.9 (The official Quota of British films to be handled by distributors and shown by exhibitors is 20 per cent.)

Here are the main items in the report, with the figures for 1935 added for comparison:

FEATURES:
Nationality	Subjects	Footage
British	222	1,428,281
(1935)	198	1,277,857
Imported	530	3,453,473
(1935)	503	3,304,086
SHORTS:
British	196	213,253
(1935)	145	165,166
Imported	612	784,943
(1935)	611	786,452
TOTAL (ALL FILMS)
British	418	1,641,534
(1935)	343	1,443,023
Foreign	1,142	4,238,416
(1935)	1,114	4,090,538
GRAND TOTALS:
Features	752	4,881,754
(1935)	701	4,581,943
Shorts	808	998,196
(1935)	756	951,618

Total Footage, all films of all Nationalities: 5,879,950 against 5,533,561 in 1935.

(Most of the Foreign footage, in all tables, is American)

The increase in British subjects is the greatest for several years, as will be seen in the following comparative figures:

FEATURES:	1934	1935	1936
Subjects	190	198	222
Footage	1,283,841	1,277,857	1,428,281
SHORTS:	87	145	196

To a certain extent the increase in British shorts registration is due to the fact that some types of interest—news films, now valid for quota, previously were regarded as outside the Act.

The British footage was, to a very large extent, produced before the big new studios at Denham and Iver became operative. Allowing for this space being fully occupied during 1937 and for full use also being made of the new Amalgamated studio at Elstree and of additional floors which have been added to other plants, it is probable that the British industry is physically equipped to make 400 features a year without any difficulty and that easily could extend the total to 500 if there were a market demand.

The following comparisons, not shown in the official figures, are of interest:

British Feature Increase	24
Foreign Feature Increase	27
British feature footage Increase	150,424
Foreign feature footage Increase	149,387

These figures demonstrate that the British increase is absolute, as compared with that of imports. In 1935, an increase of British features from 190 to 198 was balanced by an increase in foreign features from 480 to 503, a ration of 8:23. This year the subject ratio is 24:27 and the comparison on a footage basis is very favorable to the British industry which, to maintain a "Quota" ratio, needed to increase its footage by, in round figures, only 37,000 feet against the increased imports of just under 150,000 feet. It is probable that this increase in British production, over the scale demanded by the Films Act, will be cited to support the policy of a gradual increase of the British film quota, up to a final figure of 50 per cent, expressed in the recent Moyne Report.

Columbia's Plans

Paul Soskin on Monday cancelled the press reception at which he was to reveal details of Columbia's production plans in London. The delay was believed to be due to the lack of confirmation so far on MGM's intention to use the Amalgamated Studio.

It is understood, however, that Columbia will occupy the Amalgamated plant, and exercise direct supervision of the Soskin features to be made for Columbia release. Robert Riskin will approve all scripts and William Perlberg will be in charge of casting. The directors from Hollywood who will be loaned are understood to include Ed Ludwig, Richard Wallace, Elliott Nugent, Eddie Buzzell, Harry Lachman and possibly Tay Garnett and Howard Hawks. Writers will include Barlett McCormack and Nat Perrin, and players, Jean Arthur, Melvyn Douglas, Walter Connolly, and possibly Miriam Hopkins, Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer and Edward Arnold.

Heading MGM-British Unit

For MGM's British production unit, S. C. Balcon, former production manager of Gaumont British, will be associate producer; Harold Boxall, former general manager of GB production, will be production manager, and Angus MacPhail, former story supervisor of GB, will be scenario editor.

All the new appointees will work under the general supervision of Michael Balcon.

Confirm J. A. Rank Resignation

Resignation of J. Arthur Rank as chairman of the board of directors of British National, Ltd., was officially confirmed over the weekend. Mr. Rank has retained his 45 per cent of the total shares of British National.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea—I advise exhibitors to "lay off" this picture. It was one of the sorriest shows I have ever seen, and had to play it on my Christmas date, December 24-25. The stars are okay, when in good stories. I trust this one did not kill them at the box office. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 24-25.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: Rosalind Russell, John Boles—Some of our patrons were a bit disappointed in this picture, although I think it was liked by most everyone who saw it. Have seen John Boles in better roles. He is always fine. This picture drew good business two days. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 29-30.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

UNKNOWN RANGER, THE: Robert Allen, Martha Tibbetts—I did not get to see this picture, as I was too busy trying to take care of the crowd that came to see it. Where they all came from I don't know, and it's Bob Allen's first picture for us. If the rest draw this well, Bob Allen will rank with Buck Jones for us. Good business and the Friday-Saturday customers thought it great. Played January 1-2.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

First National

CAPTAIN'S KID, THE: Guy Kibbee, Sybil Jason —This is a fair picture. Good on a double bill. Running time, 72 minutes. Played December 14-15.—Richard Arthur, Richards Theatre, Fayette, Ala. General patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—Our patrons all like airplane stories. Very good picture, but ruined by playing during holiday week. Played December 27-29.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Ross Alexander, Beverly Roberts—A very fine airplane story which proved to be a very gratifying box office attraction with us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—Joe E. Brown is well liked here and has a drawing power. Pleased our patrons 90 per cent. Running time, 69 minutes. Played December 20-21.—Clifford Deane, Dunbar Theatre, Dunbar, W. Va. General patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Jeanne Madden—Excellent. Dick Powell's best for a long time and the new star Jeanne Madden, is great. Hope she plays in another show soon. She has a mighty pleasing personality. Good musical numbers, good story and good cast. All I needed for this one was good weather, and struck three stormy nights. Did not make expenses, but it is a swell picture. Running time, 91 minutes. Played January 1-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Dick Powell will have to beat this if he is popular any longer. We had some disappointed customers. As they have always liked Dick, I hope his next picture will be up to his standard. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 29-30.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Jeanne Madden—Did a very good business and audience well pleased. Would recommend it to any exhibitor.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

NINE DAYS A QUEEN: Nova Pilbeam, Cedric Hardwicke—One woman made the remark that the house was full of drunks passed out. (They were sleeping; what few were there).—Richard Arthur, Richards Theatre, Fayette, Ala. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart—This is the type Sunday nighters eat up. Good, popular stuff. Very bad print streaked down the center all 12 reels. Metro's trailers are improving. Running time, 12 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—Excellent in every respect. Work of Mickey Rooney best juvenile performance we have seen in long time. Above average business. Running time, 92 minutes. Played December 27-29.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—Died at the box office. Perhaps the picture was too old; if so, the fault isn't ours. Played first available date according to the exchange. Running time, 105 minutes. Played December 27-29.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. General and rural patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—We expected a good house, but they didn't turn out. Personally, we think it is a wonderful attraction. Running time, 102 minutes. Played December 27-28.—Clifford Deane, Dunbar Theatre, Dunbar, W. Va. General patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Lionel Barrymore—Played this on New Year's Eve midnight show only, and I wish we had played it for two days, if for no other reason than to enjoy Lionel Barrymore's fine acting. No comments from patrons, but who would expect to get any comments on New Year's Eve—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—Some favorable comments on this but personally I do not think Joan Crawford and Robert Taylor suited to play in this type of story. They are both excellent but I prefer them in a modern story. A wonderful picture of its kind. Running time, 105 minutes. Played November 15-16.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer, Fanny Brice—Show much too long. Gross second day only 13 per cent of first day, and third day only 9 per cent of first day. Had several kicks about advanced prices. However, we did not lose any money on it, and it is a personal pleasure to show such a fine picture, even if our audience didn't like it. Played December 13-15.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Good comedy drama that pleased our audience. Played fairly new, so business above average. Running time, 98 minutes. Played December 25-26.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. General and rural patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery, Cecilia Parker—First night fair, second poor, and then they all came on the third night. You can't tell a thing about this business. Personally, I thought it fine. It's Beery's picture all the way through, and he surely makes a good job of it. Played January 3-5.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—What a cast! What a picture! What else could you ask for? Good pictures, and it looks like Paramount's got them. Patronage. Oh, boy! Running time, 98 minutes. Played December 3-5.—Richard Arthur, Richards Theatre, Fayette, Ala. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—The first of the "Broadcasts" that has really pleased and drawn extra business. Some good music and singing and clever sketches in connection with more story than usual. Played December 13-14.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen—Held this one for New Year's date and it worked. Did a grand business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played January 1-2.—Sam Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen—A good picture and a good draw at the box office. Our customers like pictures with plenty of comedy with music and that is what you get in "The Big Broadcast." Did nice business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, Mary Boland, Burns and Allen—Just plumb OK. Bear down on it. Running time, 76 minutes. Played January 5.—Sam Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

COLLEGIATE: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks, Frances Langford—This is one of the oldest pictures we booked on our current program, also one of the funniest. Paramount favored us with an excellent print and who could ask for more? Eight reels of laughs, music, song hits, dancing, and everything it takes to make a hilarious evening. Any picture that Ned Sparks is in needs little else, and this one has plenty else! Joe Penner must be seen to be appreciated. He had the boys rolling in the aisles. The jailhouse sequence and Joe's several run-ins with the law were especially funny to our type of audience. Paramount should give Betty Jane Cooper more opportunity to display her talents, for she is, in our opinion, Eleanor Powell's closet rival. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 9th.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

EASY TO TAKE: Marsha Hunt, John Howard—The rendition of "Love in Bloom" made a swell little show out of this mess. The audience wants more of that little fellow who sang the song. Played January 6-7.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

HIDEAWAY GIRL: Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Robert Cummings—Good mystery with plenty of laughs. All I'll say is, it has Martha Raye in it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 25.—Richard Arthur, Richards Theatre, Fayette, Ala. General patronage.

HIDEAWAY GIRL: Shirley Ross, Robert Cummings, Martha Raye—Picture pleased. Light stuff, but Shirley Ross, well supported by Martha Raye, who grows in popularity, and young Cummings, put the story over. Played January 3-4.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

I'D GIVE MY LIFE: Sir Guy Standing, Frances Drake, Tom Brown—Was rather afraid of this sob story, but most pleasantly surprised. While it's very sad, the picture has something and the young stars, ably supported by Sir Guy Standing, did splendidly. Played January 6-7.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS, THE: Ray Milland, Dorothy Lamour—Push this picture for all it's worth; its good. Did extra good business. Patronage O. K. and how! Running time, 84 minutes. Played December 7-8.—Richard Arthur, Richards Theatre, Fayette, Ala. General patronage.

LADY, BE CAREFUL: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—A surprise for us. Played right ahead of Christmas, and it did business, and they really liked it. Played December 20-22.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: Charles Ruggles, Alice Brady—A regular show which needed no double featuring, but with "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" it broke my Friday and Saturday record here. Running time, 71 minutes. Played January 8-9.—Sam Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Right down our alley. Everybody pleased. Did not break any records but well satisfied with business done. A very smooth running production. Be sure and play it.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

SPENDTHRIFT: Henry Fonda, Pat Paterson—Paramount made us eat this one, and it didn't taste so bad as we thought it would. It's just a picture, but some people came to see, and we did not lose money. Played December 30-31.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER: Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke, Andy Clyde—A mine run program picture, with a lot of the scenes of the "Trail" in it, so I am told. No comment good or bad from patrons. Played December 23-24.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

THREE MARRIED MEN: Roscoe Karns, William Frawley, Lynne Overman—We thought this a nice little comedy offering. Did not do a lot of business. We should not have played it on Sunday, but it was set on short notice, to replace another picture. Audience reaction very good. Played December 6-8.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE: Gladys George, Arline Judge—Entirely too long for this type picture. Bogs down after auspicious start. Not boxoffice and played to lowest gross in months. Running time, 109 minutes. Played January 3-5.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE: Gladys George, Arline Judge—Don't know which—this or "Mind Your Own Business"—was to blame for cracking the house record. January 1 to January 10 seemed to be a Paramount period with me and it was a period of "Joy" for both me and my patrons. Check this: not a walkout for the period. Running time, 109 minutes. Played January 8-9.—Sam Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BIG GAME, THE: Philip Huston, James Gleason, June Travis, Bruce Cabot—This is what we call a masterpiece. For box office, book this one. Those football fans who have seen it will see it again. Played January 3-4.—Clifford Deane, Dunbar Theatre, Dunbar, W. Va. General patronage.

BIG GAME, THE: June Travis, Philip Huston—A swell show for college towns, but a big flop for 'way out here in the Dakota sticks. Anwyay, we did not take in 50 per cent of the film rental. Running time, eight reels. Played December 30.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S D. Small town patronage.

$3 ENOUGH FOR A FULL YEAR'S BOOKKEEPING

QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP
ROCKEFELLER CENTER, NEW YORK

DON'T TURN 'EM LOOSE: Bruce Cabot, Louise Latimer, Lewis Stone—A very good action picture which did mediocre business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta—Oh boy, here is a honey for all, young and old, rich or poor, and Bobby Breen and Henry Armetta put it over to a satisfactory entertainment. O. K. Bobby, here is hoping you can play in more of such plays. We are for you 100 per cent. Opposition big storm. Running time, seven reels. Played January 6.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MARY OF SCOTLAND: Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March—One of the best pictures of this kind I believe we have played. Enjoyed by the majority. Fredric March was the draw as Hepburn not liked very well. Fredric March always fine and even the gentlemen customers admit he is handsome. Running time, 123 minutes. Played December 15-16.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson, Charles Butterworth, Louise Beavers—Here was a wonderfully nice picture, with the boy doing some good singing and good acting. Drew two bad nights and barely got by, but not fault of the picture. Don't forget the Negro lady, Louise Beavers, in your billing. Her work stands out. Played January 1-2.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Add Helen Broderick and Eric Blore to the two leads and this quartet will hold up any picture. That is what happened in "Smartest Girl." Plenty of snappy lines and not a dull moment. Made a good show for New Year's, and played to good business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 1-2.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BACK TO NATURE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—These Jones Family pictures please our patrons. In this the family start for the West with one of the new style house trailers and have many seri-comic adventures. Played December 30-31.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple, Frank Morgan—Some liked this; others did not. Heard so many say that it was not near so good as Shirley's other pictures. Personally, I did not think so, as I like her in modern stories. Business not quite as good as on her previous pictures. Running time, 78 minutes. Played December 17-18.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennet, Loretta Young, Simone Simon—Our patrons expected to see a good picture with such a cast; nothing to it except the price. If this is a special, what will the program pictures be like? Running time, 97 minutes. Played December 13-15.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hackinson, N. D. General and rural patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Loretta Young, Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon—This picture does not have anything except stars, and they are not much in this. Our customers like Gaynor and Young, but cannot say much for Simon and Bennett. Our business terrible. The few who saw it thought it very "punk." Running time, 97 minutes. Played December 13-14.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. Geenral patronage.

LAUGHING AT TROUBLE: Jane Darwell—not a bad little programmer. Running time, seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley—The best football picture I believe we have ever played. Played this one a week ahead of RKO's "Big Game," and "Pigskin Parade" was far ahead of it in every way, including draw at box office. Every star did excellent. Running time, 93 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—One of the best. I will have to hand it to Twentieth Century-Fox. When they made this they did a fine job. Everyone thought it wonderful. Scenery beautiful and each star perfect. Give it your best playing time. Running time, 84 minutes. Played December 6-7.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—Pleased our patrons very much and did a fair business, but nowheres near the business that the first Quins picture did.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO GLORY, THE: Fredric March, Warner Baxter—A very serious war drama, the story dealing with a French captain, Warner Baxter, and his lieutenant, March. Pleased our people. Played in cooperation with V. F. W. June Lang, as the heroine, did good work. Played December 18-19.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou, Ritz Brothers—One that Fox ticketed Class A. Did not draw nor please enough to warrant that classification. Alice Faye was O. K., however. Played December 20-21.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

STATE FAIR: (Re-issue) Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor—A great show but who can run any kind of business when Mother Nature is against you? We ran into the worst kind of storm we can remember since 1936 January and February. Two below and a big blizzard made them stay at home. Running time, 10 reels. Played January 1-2.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

UNDER YOUR SPELL: Lawrence Tibbett, Wendy Barrie, Gregory Ratoff—I certainly must have been under Fox's spell when I booked this one. Especially when I remembered what a flop "Metropolitan" was. Lawrence Tibbett may suit the Metropolitan Opera directors, but not an audience bent on entertainment. Played January 10-11.—L. B. Jarrell, Ritz Theatre, Columbia, La. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DARK ANGEL, THE: Fredric March, Merle Oberon, Herbert Marshall—A show good enough for anybody's house. Little late to run this but we are glad we still can get a show once in a while that will make your cash customers come back to your theatre after they have seen a good show like this. Running time, 11 reels. Played January 3.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GHOST GOES WEST, THE: Robert Donat, Jean Parker—A very pleasing picture. Enjoyed by everyone, with satisfactory box office returns. Thought it might be somewhat heavy for a small town but found it to be quite popular. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

CONFLICT: John Wayne, Jean Rogers—Made for our town. A lumber camp picture, and many of our patrons are "logger men." Gave excellent satisfaction, and a very fair return at box office. Played December 25-26.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN I MARRY, THE: Doris Nolan, Michael Whalen—No names to help the box office. But Miss Nolan has what it takes to become a great star. Fair patronage. Running time, 76 minutes. Played December 23.—Richard Arthur, Richards Theatre, Fayette, Ala. General patronage.

MY MAN GODFREY: William Powell, Carole Lombard, Alice Brady—Enjoyed by most everyone. William Powell always good and Carole Lombard lovely, as usual. Alice Brady good in her role. Our business was satisfactory for the two days. Played on our best days. Sunday-Monday. Running time, 93 minutes. Played December 27-28.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

MY MAN GODFREY: William Powell, Carole Lombard—Worst business for a long time. What few came were about 50-50 divided in their opinions as to entertainment value of picture. Will go in bigger towns but wish I had not played it. —L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

SUNSET OF POWER: Buck Jones—These Buck Jones westerns are sure fire at the box office. We receive often more favorable comments on these "western" pictures than we do on some of the so-called specials.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

CAIN AND MABEL: Marion Davies, Clark Gable—A good picture with some fine musical numbers and plenty of comedy. Clark Gable is still a favorite. Marion Davies did well in the picture but of course it was Gable they went to see. Did nice business. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

ISLE OF FURY: Margaret Lindsay, Humphrey Bogart—A surprise picture. Do not think anyone expected much from this one but it is good and pleased. Fair story, good cast and some excellent sequences of the sea. This one deserves a better title. Running time, 60 minutes. Played December 30-31.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SING ME A LOVE SONG: James Melton, Patricia Ellis, Zasu Pitts—just right for a small town audience. Comedy with music. Better than the socalled specials. Running time, 79 minutes. Played January 3-5.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. General and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COURT OF HUMAN RELATIONS: No extra draw. Mediocre audience reaction.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Educational

SCREEN TEST, THE: Buster West, Tom Patricola—A knockout. These two goofs are our best comedy bets. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odeobolt, Iowa. General patronage.

SPOOKS: Cabin Kids—Good one-reeler. These kids sure are good singers and always please the spectators. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALL-AMERICAN TOOTHACHE: Patsy Kelly—A very good football comedy, worth playing in football season.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: These News are not as good as the Fox Movietones we have just finished. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME: Musical Comedies—Terrible. I was surprised at MGM making such a bad film. The worst I have seen from this company. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

OLD HOUSE, THE: Happy Harmonies—A Happy Harmony ghost story, packed full of thrills and action.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PUBLIC PAYS, THE: Crime Does Not Pay Series—A good "Crime Does Not Pay" short, but not quite as good as the previous ones. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

SUNKIST STARS AT PALM SPRINGS: Musical Comedies Series—Excellent; many favorable comments. Running time, 2 reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

TWO TOO YOUNG: Our Gang—Fine. You can always depend on "Our Gang." Our customers dislike the one-reelers. They like Our Gang so well they preferred the two-reelers. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

Paramount

BREEZY RHYTHM: Hal Kemp and Orchestra—Hal and his "Suth'n" accent presents his University of South Carolina orchestra in a rather novel manner. Highlights of the reel are Maxine Gray's rendition of "I'm Building Up to an Awful Let-Down" and Saxie Dowell's "Bottle" number. When Maxine kicks open the magazine leaf with a "Hey, that's my number," our audience of numbers spoke up as one with "You're our number!" Sweet? Oh, my, yes! Runing time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HAWAIIAN BIRDS: Color Classics—An exceptionally fine Color Classic. Running time, 1 reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

IN OLD WYOMING: Musical Romance—A very pretty short in color with beautiful scenery and music. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

MOSCOW MOODS: Yasha Bunchuk and Orchestra—Something different in the way of shorts. Unusual and excellent music in the Russian style, featuring "Dark Eyes" and "The Volga Boatman." Was given a big hand at each of our performances. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RAH, RAH, FOOTBALL: Will Osborne and Collegiates—Will Osborne and orchestra accompanying the singing of numerous college fight songs with shots of the teams in action. The finest black and white single we have ever run. Running time, 1 reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

SPINACH ROADSTER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—A fine Popeye cartoon. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER: Grantland Rice Sportlights: Ted Husing asks the audience fourteen questions relative to sports events and Grantland Rice depicts the answers. This will give your audience something to think and talk about. Entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FOUR MORE WRITING REPORTS ON FILMS

The South and the near Northwest contribute new reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week. From Alabama and Louisiana come the following, reporting for the first time:

Richard Arthur, Richard's Theatre, Fayette, Alabama

L. B. Jarrell, Ritz Theatre, Columbia, Louisiana

Returning to the contributors' fold after more than a year of absence are these exhibitors:

S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, North Dakota

P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, North Dakota

Mr. Backer formerly contributed reports from the Roxy Theatre at Brown's Valley, Minnesota. Mr. Estee, it will be recalled by readers of the department, was one of the first showmen to cooperate.

RKO Radio

BUGLES FROM BLUE GRASS: Sports with Bill Corum—The complete details on training and raising running horses. Very interesting.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FIGHT IS RIGHT: Tom Kennedy—A good laugh provoker. Fun and thrills and excitement. O.K., Tom. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

HEART OF THE SIERRAS: World on Parade Series—In color this would have been outstanding, but worth running even in black and white. Running time, 1 reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LISTEN TO FREEZIN': Superba Comedies—Terrible. I have noticed that this company cannot seem to put out a good two-reeler with the exception of the Gene Austins. His are fine.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: Issue No. 5—Good super newsreel but it wouldn't draw flies. Running time, two reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

NEVER CATCH THE RABBIT: Sports With Bill Corum—An interesting short subject on dog racing. Makes a good filler.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NIGHT LIFE: Headliner Series—A very clever musical of Gene Austin, showing the happening during an evening at a night club.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOMORROW'S HALFBACKS: Sports With Bill Corum—A very interesting football subject, suitable and acceptable to any situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

VOCALIZING: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—So terrible we stuck it back in the can after the first day. Running time, 2 reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

WAIF'S WELCOME, A: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Another colored single worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

WEST INDIES CRUISE: Magic Carpet Series—Interesting and instructive. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S MAN FRIDAY: Mickey Mouse—This is the kind of cartoon that builds business and satisfy all who see them. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

ORPHANS' PICNIC: Mickey Mouse—All of the Mickey Mouses in color are good, and good at the box office. This one is exceptionally good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

THREE ORPHAN KITTENS: Silly Symphonies—One of the best cartoons I have ever seen. Our patrons thought so too. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

Universal

FLIPPEN'S FROLICS: Mentone Musical Comedies About all of these Mentones are good. Our customers like musical comedies. Running time, 19 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BACKYARD BROADCAST, THE: Broadway Brevities Series—Rates extra billing as it is an unusually fine subject with talented youngsters. Running time, 2 reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

CARL HOFF AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very good college musical. Exceptionally good entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

"GIVE ME LIBERTY": John Litel—All in color. The story builds up to the tremendous climax where Patrick Henry launches into the famous "Give me Liberty or give me Death" speech. The outstanding short subject of 1937. Running time, 20 minutes.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. General and rural patronage.

PICTORIAL REVIEW: Just fair. I do not see much in these Pictorial Reviews. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

The Bluebook School

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 52

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Question No. 52 was: (A) What is inter-electrode capacitance? Feed back? Oscillation? (B) List roughly the varieties of electric power required to operate the average sound system. (C) What is meant by "mil-foot" and how is it used in calculating resistance of conductors?

The following made acceptable answers: C. Rau and S. Evans; W. C. Brown; C. Oldham; J. R. Prater; G. E. Doe; R. A. Hooker; P. and L. Felt; C. L. Loft; L. Cimikoski; S. O. Sears; W. Limroth; F. Bochert; H. B. Smith; C. Lonie; F. Barkey; A. L. Cooper; H. Edwards; J. A. Zachritz; J. Wentworth; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; F. H. and L. Savlor; D. Morgan; G. N. Guidotti; D. Pollock; F. L. Birch; C. and S. E. Gay; D. and W. Porter; S. Q. Mallaby; C. Hawkins; C. B. and L. M. Traxler; C. L. Mosier; W. L. Bancroft and S. D. Manning; T. L. Redhouse; L. B. Masters and H. Todd; O. Hunt; E. N. Soloman; T. T. Golley; H. A. Aims, R. Dennis and F. E. Dorp; G. Caldwell; R. and K. Wells; F. M. Brown and D. Davis; L. E. Dodson and H. T. Todd; L. Greenhouse; T. T. Brontson; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; E. and G. E. Lomax; H. T. Plum, R. V. Manning and C. L. Davis; W. H. Edmonds; D. H. Purcell; J. G. Brown; D. L. Johnson; C. L. Lowrie and H. Lathrope; M. F. Robinson and L. A. Beachwood; M. and B. Walker; W. R. Baxter and R. N. Davis; T. W. Wilson; F. H. and L. Klar and T. H. Morton; H. W. Matthews, J. R. Davidson and L. B. Jones; U. S. Logan; B. B. Donaldson; R. Tompkins and H. J. Abernathy; W. R. and L. Matthews; W. Winkle and R. R. Robbins; H. L. Lilly; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; L. L. Lasser; E. L. Stanford; T. R. Tomlinson; T. L. Brown; J. K. Robinson; P. F. Maxwell; H. P. Richardson; G. Lantry and W. L. Bolton; B. L. Sanderson; S. True.

W. C. Brown answers Section 4A as follows: "The inter-electrode capacitance is the capacity due to the condenser action between the electrodes of a vacuum tube. The electrodes act much the same as do the plates of a condenser with the glass and vacuum as the dielectric separating them. Feed-back is the term applied to a condition existing when variations in the plate produced by variations in the grid voltage are fed back to the grid by inter-electrode capacitance. Oscillation is a stage where the feed-back is excessive, so that the tube oscillates, causing a whistling sound."

C. L. Loft puts it briefly, thus: "Inter-electrode capacitance is the ratio of an electrical charge in an isolated conductor to the resulting potential. Feed-back is a condition where changes in plate voltage resulting ultimately from changes in grid voltage are fed back to the grid by grid-plate capacitance. Oscillation occurs when an attempt is made to secure excessive amplification. A three-element tube will, under this condition, distort the sound by amplifying some frequencies more than others, thus causing the tube to act as a converter that employs its d.c. plate power supply to generate an a.c. of audible frequency."

C. Oldham says: "In a vacuum tube there are three elements mounted close to, and facing, each other. As the lead-in wire, tube prongs and socket prongs are all close together, some capacitance exists between them, they all being at different potentials. In the three-electrode tube the grid and plate form a small condenser, as also do the filament and plate; the first named two usually the larger because of the elements having the greater exposed area. None of these internal tube capacitances cause as much trouble as that existing between the plate and grid. That between the grid and filament or cathode affects the constants of the grid circuit, though because the value of this capacitance is small, the effect is slight. The plate to filament or cathode capacitance is not determined, since it serves as a very small bypass for the radio frequency currents to the plate return or negative filament circuit.

"The presence of the grid-plate capacitance is highly objectionable, since it permits the transfer of energy through the tube in a direction opposite that desired, resulting in feed-back, which in amplifiers is caused by an impedance that is common to two or more circuits, and where part of a signal has been amplified by the last tube is fed back to the tubes that have already amplified this same signal and passed it to the last tube, if the grid-plate capacitance is large enough and the resistance of the circuit through which the energy flows is low, so that little of it is dissipated in the form of heat, considerable energy will be transferred back and forth through the circuit between grid and plate. Therefore, during each signal impulse the tube is in a slight state of oscillation, hence acting as a generator or oscillator."

I invite discussion of the various points of the latter reply by readers, if any differ with Brother Oldham's analysis. Now as to Section B. J. R. Prater says:

"Roughly, the varieties of electric power needed to operate the average sound system are:

"Exciter lamps—d.c., sometimes a.c., usually from 8 to 12 volts and 2 to 7½ amperes. A.C. cannot be used satisfactorily with modern sound systems of extended frequency range.

"Photoelectric cells—smooth d.c. only, usually 90 but sometimes 135 volts; practically no amperage (about one millionth of an ampere).

"Microphones—smooth d.c., or in some types none. Usually between 3 and 12 volts, ¼-ampere or less.

"Drive motors—preferably a.c. at 110 volts, although special motors can be provided for practically any current available.

"Amplifier A (filament or heater)—a.c. for indirect heaters, d.c. required with small filaments. Usually less than 10 volts, ¼ to 12 amperes.

"Amperage B (plate)—smooth d.c. only; 90 to 1000 volts, but usually less than ¼-ampere.

"Amplifier C (grid bias)—very smooth d.c. only; 50 volts or less at practically no amperage.

"Speaker fields—d.c. always; 7 to 110 volts, or sometimes more. Generally between one-tenth and 5 amperes.

"These are merely very broad general requirements, and special designs of any unit of equipment may require still different current supply."

(C) J. G. Brown says, "As applies to electrical conductors, particularly wires, a mil-foot is a wire one one-thousandth of an inch in diameter and one foot in length. Such a conductor of commercial copper offers 10.5 ohms resistance. [The mil-foot resistance of 10.5 is not precise. The exact resistance is 10.79 ohms. In the Bluebook, to simplify calculations, it is stated as 10.5, that being sufficiently accurate for calculation of any theatre circuit.—F. H. R.] Length and diameter of any commercial copper wire being known, the resistance of such wire may be calculated by multiplying the length of the conductor, in feet, by 10.5, and dividing this product by the cross-section of the conductor, in circular mil. Page 66 of our Bluebook of Projection sets forth the formula, thus: equals resistance of the circuit if the temperature of the conductors is 75 degrees Fahr. (24 degrees Cent.) If the temperature is greater or less, the temperature coefficient (see page 36 of the Bluebook) must be considered."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 57

(A) Manufacturers and dealers in spherical, parabolic and elliptical mirrors such as are used in connection with certain types of projector light sources, state their focal lengths. Have such mirrors any exact focal length? Explain.

(B) Does current generated in a dynamo or battery seek earth? Explain.

(C) Define a "short circuit"; a "ground".

WIDENED FILM OUTLET SEEN IN CHICAGO DEAL

B. & K.'s McVickers Acquisition Points to Release of 52 More Pictures a Year

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Acquisition of the McVickers theatre, one of the largest in Chicago's loop district, gives Balaban & Katz almost virtual control of the first-run business here. The only opposition are the RKO-Palace and the State-Lake theatre operated by Jones, Linick and Schaefer. The Estate-Lake has been purchased by B & K and will come under its control May 1st.

The granting of a 30-year lease on the McVickers to B & K by the Chicago Board of Education ends a long contest for control. The theatre has been dark for more than a year, except for a few special film showings. Prior to 1936 the theatre was operated by the McVickers Theatre Company, headed by Aaron Jones, Sr. The board took over the building last February.

Granting of the lease to Comet Amusement Company, a B. & K. organization with John Balaban as president, discloses that a minimum rental of $2,075,000 is asked for the 30-year period. Should the theatre be operated on a film policy with 15 per cent of the gross totaling more than the amount of the rental guarantee, the rental will be increased proportionately. If the theatre is operated on a stage show policy, the percentage will be reduced to 10 per cent. The rental figures set forth are the minimum guarantee.

For the first five years the rental will be $60,000; the second five, $62,500; the third five-year term, $70,000; the fourth five-year period $72,500, and the last two five-year periods $75,000 a year.

Need of another first-run theatre in the Loop is most imperative. Many films get their first showing here as much as 90 days behind national release dates. Practically all product with the exception of RKO Radio and Universal pictures, which the RKO-Palace plays first, shows for the first time locally in the B & K theatres. This situation gives B & K almost full control of the film release dates in Chicago. Thus it is by their bookings that the subsequent runs are determined and the independent theatre operator has little choice as to what pictures he can have for his dual programs. Futhermore, dozens of theatres in the same release classification must release the same pictures on the same dates.

The policy of the McVickers theatre is expected to be the same as now is used at the Oriental and State-Lake theatres, a vaudeville-stageshow plus "B" pictures first-run. This plan is thought to be logical policy for the McVickers, which is on West Madison street, slightly out of the Loop theatrical area. If this plan is adopted it is assumed that B & K will turn the State-Lake into an extended run theatre. This would still leave the Chicago, Roosevelt, United Artists, Apollo and Garrick available for first-run product and account for a possible release of 52 more pictures a year, which is something that would prove a boon to distributors as well as exhibitors.

B & K officials have denied reports that they plan to dispose of the Roosevelt and have the theatre turned into office store and space.

Chance Games Ruling

When Bank Night and other giveaway games were ousted from Chicago theatres by Judge Niemeyer's decision in superior court that they violated the city ordinance concerning theatres, 250 exhibitors using the games felt they had received a hard blow. Comparison of receipts after the games had been stopped with receipts when the games were in progress show the income 15 to 25 per cent lower. It is estimated that in the B & K circuit grosses for the 28 theatres playing the games have fallen off as much as $50,000 a week. The smaller independent exhibitors have been hurt least.

Following the filing of a request for appeal to the state supreme court, several exhibitor leaders are said to have started plans to agitate for a new city ordinance to permit the games. Nothing came of it, however. Further attempts are expected soon.

Exhibitors are hoping that the double features will make up for the losses.

Henry Herbel, of Universal, retiring president of the Chicago Film Board of Trade, is being honored with a banquet at the Congress hotel on Friday, January 22nd. Allen Usher of Paramount, the incoming president, will be installed with the other new officers: Tom Gilliam of Vitagraph, is vice-president, Emma Abplanalp, re-elected secretary-treasurer, and Clyde Eckhardt of 20th-Century Fox, named chairman of the board. Others on the board are Irving Mandel of Republic and Mr. Herbel. Felix Mendelssohn will serve as toastmaster.

Miss Beulah Livingstone, Universal exploiteer, is here assisting for the premiere of "Three Smart Girls" at the Palace Friday. Jane Withers will headline the stage show.

Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied Theaters of Illinois, left last week to spend three or four weeks at Miami. Just before leaving he appointed Miss Elizabeth Morganstein as successor to Miss Ann Hausman, who has left the Allied offices to become the wife of Morris Rubin, Chicago businessman.

Another Chicagoan headed for a Southern clime to try to find some winter is Morris Leonard, head of the Chicago Exhibitors Association, who is taking a boat trip to South America.

Two pioneer Chicago exhibitors, George and Harold Gallos, owners of the Midway and Ray theatres, are among the recipients of Adolph Zukor Anniversary medals, for having played "Queen Elizabeth." The Gallos Brothers are building their newest theatre, the Woodlawn. The contract for the entire construction and equipment job was let to Joe Goldberg, theatre equipment dealer, all in one contract. Mr. Goldberg is to turn over to the Gallos Brothers a completed theatre from basement to roof, even including the soap in the washroom and tickets in the ticket machine, by April 1st. The theatre is being built at a cost of approximately $70,000. Herman F. Jensen is in charge of the construction work for Mr. Goldberg, while Irwin Frederick is the architect.

"We have every reason to expect that the amusement world will have one of its most successful years, and that goes especially for Paramount," said Barney Balaban, between trains, en route from Hollywood to New York. John Balaban was with him.

Telephone Meeting Opens Columbia's Sales Sweepstakes

What is believed to be the first telephone conference ever called in the motion picture industry opened the "Columbia Montague Sweepstakes" in the 31 sales territories. With an estimated 1,500 Columbia employees waiting before loudspeakers in the 31 branch offices, the New York Telephone Company engineer, sitting before his portable amplifier in the board room of the home offices, two minutes before the broadcast was scheduled to start, reported "Detroit doesn't answer."

A few extra rings, however, brought the Detroit exchange into the hookup and the sales meeting was opened by Jack Cohn, vice-president of the company, who sat on the edge of a table and talked confidentially into the microphone with the air of a veteran broadcaster.

The mechanics of the elaborate set-up involved simultaneous long distance calls to each of the branch offices and the connection of all the calls on a single trunk line to the home office in New York by means of 26,722 miles of telephone wires. Amplifiers in each of the offices carried the voices to public address systems. Cooperating for the network were 15 associated telephone companies, 30 technicians and about 100 operators.

Mr. Cohn in his opening talk urged the men in the field to function at top speed for the remainder of the selling year. He reviewed some of the coming Columbia productions, including the new Grace Moore picture, "When You're in Love," and Frank Capra's "Lost Horizon," starring Ronald Colman. He was followed by Abe Montague, general sales manager for whom this drive is designated, Joseph A. McConville and Rube Jackter who gave brief talks expressing confidence that the campaign would be successful.

The broadcast lasted 14 minutes instead of the scheduled 10 minutes and the rate was quoted at $51 a minute, a total of $714. The equipment, including microphone, amplifiers and loudspeaker installations, is charged separately.

The speeches were carried to a central radiating station in Chicago from where they were distributed to the branch offices. A special line was run into the Columbia studio in Hollywood where the west coast executives and staff listened in.

Ayer Opens Publicity Office

Frederic W. Ayer, co-producer with Robinson Smith last season of the play "Parnell," has opened publicity offices at 11 West 42nd street, New York, under the name of Exclusive Artists, Inc. Mr. Ayer formerly was associated with various newspapers in this country and in England and was for several years on the editorial staff of Motion Picture Herald.

PORE OLE PRESSBOOK

Well, doing a daily column and keeping it up to par is not what might exactly be termed a pushover. Column takes a lot of words and when it has to be done six or even seven times every week, there may be reason for the temptation to reach out and use something of less than 100 per cent reader interest. But that something should not include blasting the motion picture pressbook which was done recently and thoroughly in the widely read "Our Town" column of the Atlanta Georgian, authored by Dudley Glass who also serves as that paper's motion picture critic.

That the poor ole pressbook is put on the pan is not of the greatest concern. But where this panning takes place is something else again and we say the criticism does not belong in a newspaper column written for the average reader.

At its best, or worst, the pressbook is meant to be nothing more than a publicity, advertising and exploitation manual—a trade "directions for using" to aid theatremen in putting over their attractions. The pressbook is also supposed to supply motion picture editors and/or critics with information on cast, story synopsis and other pertinent material from which it is assumed each editor and/or critic will take what he finds fitted for his needs on that particular picture.

However, should it so happen that the pressbook does not conform with individual newspaper requirements, the inadequate or offending parts may be discarded and this procedure is being followed generally by newspapers in cities and small towns without recourse to unwarranted indignation in the public prints.

If Mr. Glass' blast succeeded in stirring a demand among his many readers for better pressbooks, that might justify his vigorous denunciations. But no such protest has arisen nor is there any likelihood of it.

To the general newspaper public, and Atlanta should be no different, a column on pressbook weaknesses is so much Sanskrit and hardly as interesting.

Every now and then up jumps a couple of campaigns from men in the subsequent-runs to shoot some extra rounds into the tottering school of opinion that there is little exploitation gravy left in the pot after the first-runs finish "chow".

F'rinstance, there's what John Burhorn did on "And Sudden Death" at the Gayety, Chicago, in the steel yards district where he plays way behind the premiere house in his area. But Burhorn went ahead as though the picture was making its initial screen bow and put together a drive that landed him a well-deserved First Mention in the December Quigley Awards. Writes John:

"The campaign . . . has been a great experience to everyone that had a hand in it. To myself it has demonstrated that a number of pictures used in the first-runs can be repeated with good boxoffice results if they are backed with the exploitation they deserve."

And over in Paterson, N. J., the newspapers tied in with the first-run houses on a Christmas benefit and thus expressed themselves as unable to work with George Patterson, at the subsequent-run State. Having taken over the house recently and realizing the need of building community prestige, Patterson refused to sit in a corner and immediately hooked up with four local posts of the American Legion to put on his own private party.

It so happens that most of the local police are members of the Legion and with their aid, plus uniformed marchers and brass bands the party kicked up so much excitement that the papers had to fall in line and give Patterson a fair shake in publicity. Writes George:

"We are still running the subsequents and business is building. . . . The town knows this theatre is in existence and is behind the house. They came to me and also sent many letters of thanks."

Lots of birds go hungry at the boxoffice because they take it for granted the food's all gone after the first-runs are through. But not the lads who refuse to leave off until they've sopped up a lot of the gravy the other fellow missed.

IT'S SURE NICE TO KNOW

On another page of this section will be found notice of Round Tabler Art Abelson's new Roxy Theatre, in Langdon, N. D., third unit in his young but vigorous circuit. And to Abelson congratulations are distinctly in order for he has come up from the ranks to demonstrate his ability to operate on his own.

The transition from manager to exhibitor does not happen every day but, as in Art's case, it's nice to know that, given the opportunity, theatremen doing a good job for someone else can do as well for themselves.

Grand National Promotes Caravan For Tiein on "Great Guy" Date

Through arrangements made with the New York City Department of Weights and Measures, traveling caravan of confiscated measuring devices was created for the date on "Great Guy" at the New York Criterion. Promotion came about through the role in the picture played by James Cagney, a weights and measures inspector, which placed the tieup right in line to build up the Broadway engagement. New York dailies went for the stunt, the Evening Sun mentioning the picture and referring to Mayor LaGuardia, who started the caravan on its way, as another "great guy".

Direct tie-in at the Criterion was made by planting photos and tear sheets on display in the lobby. The hookup, applicable to other spots, was arranged by Harry Blair of Ed Finney's exploitation staff in cooperation with Matthew J. J. Diserio, Deputy Commissioner, Department of Public Markets, Weights and Measures.

"Brigade" Poem Blowup Used for Lobby Display

Three weeks ahead of opening of "Charge of the Light Brigade," Roscoe Hopkins, Chief Theatre, Gallup, N. M., used an oversized easel on his mezzanine with poem printed on it and stills used all around the border.

Invitations were mailed to teachers, ministers and the press, with municipal band and boy scouts parading to theatre opening day. For his bally, Roscoe dropped passes from airplane circling the city and for lobby display a mechanical arrangement was made with endless belt on which toy-led soldiers were stationed, constantly moving through mountain scene which was dubbed "the Valley of Death." Miniature forts were placed at either side of display with cannons and charging soldiers.

Railroad Runs Excursion

Persuading a railroad to run a special excursion so that the folks in the woods can enjoy a day in the city is reported by Sid Scott, at the Capitol, up in Sudbury, Ontario, Canada. Idea was to stimulate business locally and with this in view the Canadian National ran ads in the Sudbury papers carrying list of things to do and see including the matinees at the theatres. Sid reports this a "first" and successful.

March of Time Features Monthly Paper for Schools

Special folder and directions for use has been put out by March of Time to publicise "The Photo Reporter," a monthly four-page tab size newspaper for attention of students, teachers and others interested in the study of contemporary times as covered in each new issue of the Time news service.

Created for the direct attention of theatremen, the folder points out the possibilities of school tieups on distribution of the "Reporter." This is done with sixstep-cards placed in pocket inside of folder, each card carrying copy under different heads referring to the school tieup, how to introduce and use it, how to keep it working, indorsements from educators, etc.

Mailing piece was created by Ralph Rolan, March of Time advertising manager, and Al Sindlinger, director of exploitation.

"They're From Heaven"

When patrons at Loew's Poli, New Haven, Ct., were given change at the ticket window, some of it came in the form of bright new pennies wrapped in bank wrappers. When the folks queried the why of the sudden circulation of the copper money, the answer was:

"Why, it's Pennies from Heaven," referring, of course, to the Columbia picture.

County Baby Week Put On By Dallas for 'Reunion' Date

Given official recognition by the Mayor and other civic heads, it was County Baby Week in Holdenville, Okla., for the seven-day period just ahead of "Reunion" at the Grand Theatre. And to make the "week" doubly important, Manager Dave Dallas put on a number of special events at the theatre to attract children and adults from all over the drawing area.

The premiere event was a personal appearance of the county health superintendent credited with bringing into the world over 5,000 babies during his 36 years of medicine. The doctor was presented with a pad of passes to present among these for the purpose of staging a reunion of his own.

The next gathering was a "safety pin" matinee where children were admitted for 10 safety pins given to the local Red Cross and WPA sewing room for distribution to needy families. On the night before the opening of "Reunion" the largest family at the theatre was presented with passes and a sack of flour. This was followed by a twin and triplet personality contest on the stage for prizes.

Cooperation of the Baby Week was received from all quarters. Local daily ran a special baby issue in which all leading stores took space, displayed photos of the Quints and local children in windows. On a special preview tied in with Carnation Milk, grocers handling this product gave admissions to women buyers and leading laundry was tied in to give customers calendars, in imprinted envelopes bearing pictures of the Dionnes. Theatre copy was carried on the face of the envelopes.

These mediums of advertising, plus a countrywide distribution of heralds stressing all the extra features—as to be expected, built up a lot of interest in the attraction, reflected gratifyingly in the grosses.

On "Light Brigade," Dallas had the local high school superintendent write letters to teacher and students praising the picture and suggesting attendance especially for classes in English, history and the drama. Lower admissions were arranged for school groups with the letter serving as the coupon when presented at the theatre.

JANUARY DEADLINE FOR QUIGLEY AWARDS

From date of this issue, exactly two weeks and three days remain for entries in the Quigley Awards for January, the first month in the 1937 Competitions. Deadline has been set for midnight of Tuesday, February 9th, when all campaigns must be at Committee Headquarters.

The following have been asked to serve as judges: W. Ray Johnston, Monogram Pictures; S. Barret McCormick, RKO Radio Pictures, and W. G. Van Schmus, Radio City Music Hall.

Speaks Over 'Mike' To Classrooms On 'Romeo and Juliet'

Assigned as special representative on MGM's "Romeo and Juliet" road show dates in New England, Manager Ben Cohen, Loew College Theatre, New Haven, in Harry Shaw's division, reports some of his activities in Bridgeport and Waterbury. In touch with the local managers before his arrival, plans were laid to cover as much territory as possible in the shortest time. With this in view, Morris Rosenthal at the Majestic, in Bridgeport, where the picture was dated arranged a lot of appointments for the traveling exploiteer, had stories in the dailies breaking on the day of Ben's arrival, planted plugs on the radio.

With Rosenthal, Cohen visited every school in Bridgeport to interest principals on the date and lectured before student bodies. At the Harding high school, from a microphone in the principal's office, hooked into each classroom, Ben introduced by the principal gave a 15-minute talk on the show, dates, prices, theatre parties, etc. to 3,000 pupils.

In addition, all papers were visited and Cohen credits Rosenthal for securing a fine break on publicity with daily plugs in advance of opening. Special student discount coupons were distributed at all schools and at a midnight pep meeting of the personnel of the three Bridgeport Loew theatres, the various managers addressed the gathering and with Cohen discussed ways and means to plug the picture to the fullest.

The same buildup in advance was effected by Manager Fitzpatrick in Waterbury, Ct., for the date at Loew's Poli. Visit was made to the superintendent of schools who recommended the use of the Study Guide for English classes and through Fitzpatrick's contacts on the Board of Education, other arrangements planned. Calls were also made at all schools within a 15-mile radius where the special coupons were left, announcements made to students and bulletins posted.

Cohen also spoke before the weekly meeting of the Waterbury Lions' Club and with the secretary of the local YMCA worked out plans to distribute coupons and literature to all "Y" members during the weeks in advance of the Waterbury engagement.

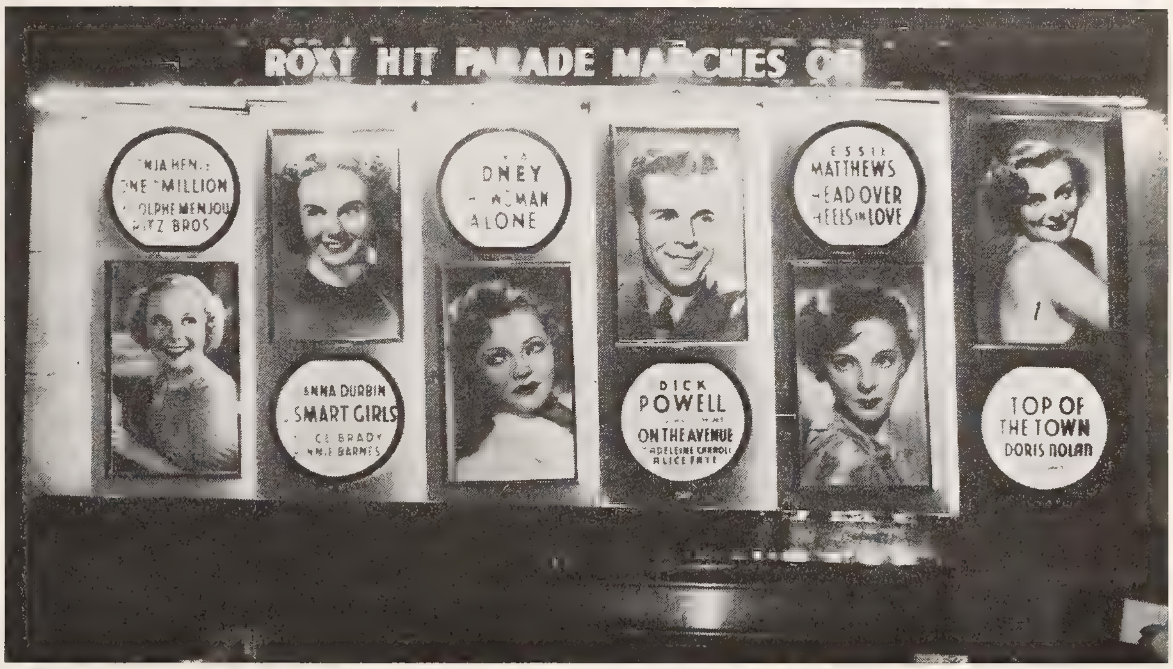
Roxy Theatre Rotunda Transparency Display Plugs Coming Film Attractions



Illustrated above is working plan and photograph of new lobby display prepared to advertise important forthcoming film attractions at the New York Roxy. Created by ad chieftain, Morris Kinzler, display is 13 feet wide by 6 feet high, and prominently spotted in the Roxy rotunda over the candy stand. In addition to its own illumination, it is also illuminated by two spotlights played on it from various angles.

The copy for the pictures is on transparent celluloid, behind which the light shines, giving an easily readable effect. As each new picture comes in, the signs are moved forward, of course. More copy than this can be added if dates are already set.

Souvenir Folder Underwritten By Automobile Dealer Ad

Out in Lincoln, Neb., Pat Patchen, Lincoln Theatres ad chief, has been putting out a lot of smart booklets on coming attractions paid for by advertisers and his latest recently received is in keeping with his usual high standard. It's a fan-fold idea with cover about three and a half inches by six deep carrying copy "Souvenir Scenes from the Big Hits of the New Season."

First page inside carries further buildup on dates at the Stuart and Lincoln Theatres and when opened, pages unfold to show star and scene shots with explanatory captions on the coming pictures. Additional photos are printed on reverse side of pages, top shot showing one of the new Oldsmobiles which, of course, is the pay-off. It's all done class and while the advertiser gets a nice run for his money, the car photo fits in neatly and does not offend.

Another publication idea that has been clicking for Patchen is a four-page regular newspaper size "Theatre News" with stories and photos plus outside ads. Same slant is also used on a tab size sheet, one of which carried a department store ad layout on the two inside pages that no doubt paid printing costs.

Weinberg Contacts Board On "As You Like It"

Featured in Maxwell Weinberg's campaign for the film version of "As You Like It," at the Little Theatre, Baltimore, was a contact with the 2,500 college men and women now in Baltimore to direct the work of the Social Security Board. These were circularised and posters planted in the office building.

Book store tieups, mailing list and special rates to clubs were also utilized and the campaign topped by Weinberg's address to local Shakespeare society on history and analysis of the play.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Abelson's Special Section

Recently opening the newest unit of his enterprising circuit, Art Abelson planted a 14-page special issue of the weekly in Langdon, N. D., to celebrate the premiere of his new Roxy in that spot. Paper ran banner front page head with three-column story including shots of Abelson and Manager John B. Cliplef. Rest of issue was given over to publicity and co-op ads. Art also runs the Lake and Hollywood Theatres, in Devils Lake, Neb., his headquarters.

SWEDISH NAVY AIDS ON "FLEET" CAMPAIGN

Stockholm Theatremen Screen Picture on Flagship; Tars Bally Date in Water Stunt

The annual maneuvers of the Swedish fleet come to an end with a parade in the harbor of Stockholm and as this event came just about the time of the date on "Follow the Fleet" at the Spegeln Theatre, in the capital city, Olof Andersson, general manager, and Wilhelm Sorensen, RKO Radio publicist, conceived the idea of a special preview for the naval personnel to take place on the fleet's flag-ship. Through the cooperation of the fleet admiral, permission was obtained with commanders, officers and part of the crew from the different ships invited together with reporters from all newspapers. Stunt involved considerable technical difficulties as portable sound equipment had to be brought on board, all of which was commented upon in the generous and favorable publicity in all the newspapers on the screening. Preview was considered highly important as Swedish naval authorities are reported to be very conservative on publicity of this nature.

This slant was followed by another navy tiein in which for an entire week a navy rowboat was promoted to be sailed around the Stockholm waterways for five hours daily. Boat was decorated with the American flag and picture banner (see photo below) and propelled by crew of nine Swedish marines dressed in exact copies of American sailors' uniforms. Wherever the boat appeared crowds gathered.

Advance outside publicity also was ingenious. Ten days ahead, poster advertising pillars in prominent spots were rented and instead of just posting theatre billing, a young artist dressed in American sailor uniform for three days went from pillar to pillar lettering the posters with a line of teaser copy each day finishing with the title, theatre and date. Then at the famed Sandham regatta and other popular resorts, picture banners were displayed and girls dressed in naval togs paraded the various beaches carrying lettered life preservers enclosing photos of the stars.

Further regatta tiein was made with foremost department stores which features in five of the biggest windows (see photo below) enlargements of Ginger Rogers in admiral's cap as a background for yachting apparel and equipment. Windows were also secured on the Swedish Crawfish Week, a yearly and popular event when the locals throw all kinds of hilarious crawfish parties followed by fireworks. Included in this was the largest window in town.

Opening night at the theatre was in keeping with the picture's atmosphere. Ushers were all dressed in gobs' uniforms and the lobby decorated with porthole and life-boat cutout effects. During the run, in a tiein with popular weekly magazine, a tap dance contest was put on with the winner given a trip to Paris and a four-day stay in that city. Other prizes also were awarded. Some 24 entries appeared in the finals held at a midnight show as a benefit performance for the Swedish sailors' union with the house sold out a day ahead and many turned away. Much publicity was obtained.

Other exploitations that helped build interest in the date embraced all manner of music tieins with smart windows in 20 of the best music shops in town. Leading orchestras played the hit numbers, during which the musicians wore lettered sailor hats. Various broadcasts were also employed, including a novel program supposedly coming from the studios on the set where the picture was being made. In addition to excellent newspaper breaks and ads, some of which are shown on a following page, fan magazines and other widely-read publications carried frequent mentions.

Photos of Messrs. Andersson and Sorensen, creators of the December Silver Plaque campaign, will be published upon their receipt from Stockholm.

GILMAN'S TAP DANCERS

Gilman Dances Along With Street Tap Stunt

Reported as one of his outstanding campaigns was the drive put behind his date on "Born to Dance" at Loew's Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., by Manager Sam Gilman. And as to be expected, dance tieins were heavily featured, among the toppers being a street stunt that clicked. Above is illustrated the gag of man and woman in evening clothes "nonchalantly dancing along the sidewalk" as Sam puts it. Regular dance routines were performed and as a crowd-stopper it was tops. The dancers would break into a routine as they walked and when the crowd collected, take off to another busy spot and repeat the stunt.

In connection with tap dancing contest at leading ballroom, Gilman received permission to hang banner right across the stage where it could not be missed. And going this just one better, the Loew-man pulled another fancy by installing a boxoffice right on the dance floor from which tickets were sold to a special midnight show at the theatre. These were just a few of the many items put over and Gilman reports the date backed up with a very thorough drive of over 50 different slants.

GEORGE HUNTER

Merchants Salute Bannan

Follows-up on Manager George Bannan's Christmas Star Merchants campaign put on with the aid of L. A. Edwards, Prudential circuit general manager, for month before Christmas in Easthampton, N. Y., was a flock of congratulatory letters from participating merchants. All were highly satisfied with results and all set to go again this year.

"Tell Us What You Did."

Famous Horse Shoes

For "Charlie Chan at the Race Track," Manager H. A. Wiedmeier, Rialto, Pekin, Ill., promoted for lobby display a collection of horseshoes worn by famous steeds, race and otherwise. Among these were shoes worn by Kentucky Derby winners, horses owned by General Pershing, the late King George, Will Rogers, Rudolph Valentino and others.

IRENE DUNNE TIEINS FEATURE "WILD" DATE

Bronze Plaque Winner Obtains Personal Autograph of Star for Newspaper Tieup Prize

Playing his date on "Theodora Goes Wild" the week before Christmas, George Hunter, manager, Fox-Orpheum, Atchison, Kan., was faced with the necessity of digging up an angle sufficiently strong to break in on the Christmas shopping and found it by obtaining from Irene Dunne the star's personal autographs (something impossible for the fans in that section to obtain, says Hunter) to be offered as prizes in a "name-the-picture" contest put on with the Atchison Globe. Paper ran two-column scene cuts, one each day for four days, with contest copy and theatre credits. After the contest the four cuts were run again with the winning titles.

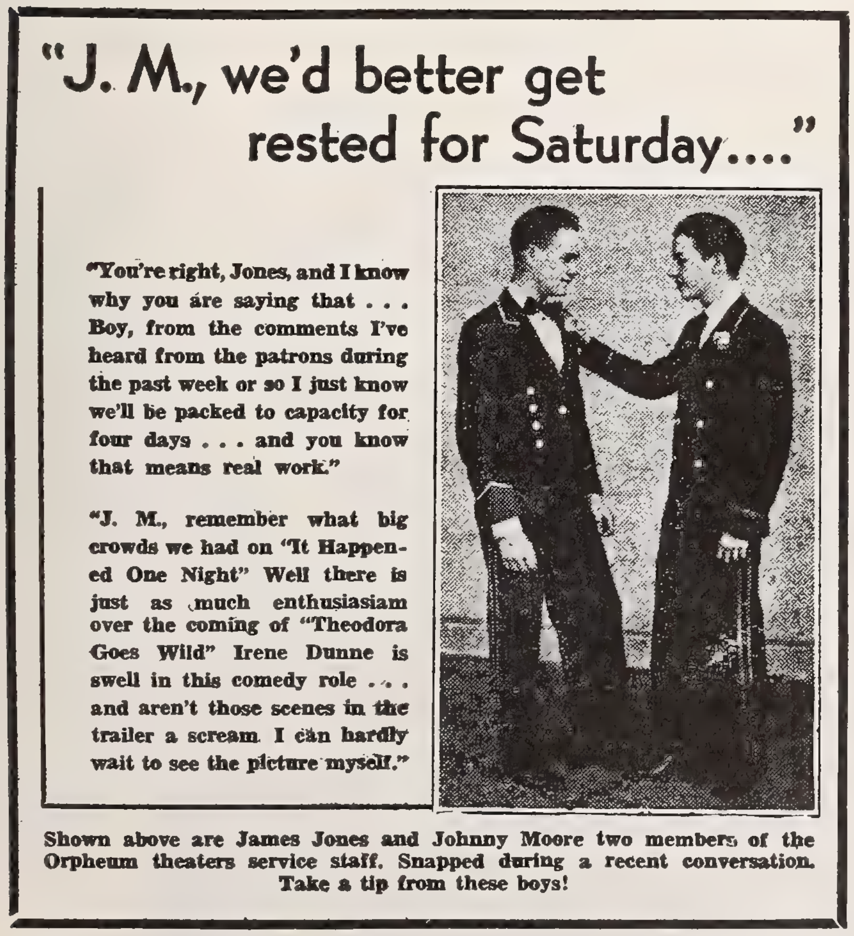
The idea was given an ingenious opening with what was supposed to be a letter from Miss Dunne to the editor in which the star explained her light comedy role as the first of this kind she had essayed and asked for opinions from Atchison picture patrons. To encourage these reactions, the star offered the personal autographs in the title contest, all of which was included in the letter. At the bottom of the letter notice of the contest, starting on the following day, was carried.

The "personal column" slant was also utilized gainfully by Hunter. Two weeks ahead he arranged with his brother in Kansas City to send copy direct to the paper signed by "Theodora" so that the stunt would not be revealed and the same arrangements were made locally for copy to be signed "Michael."

Personals started with a reproach from Theodora to Michael reproaching him for believing the talk about her. This was followed by one from Michael breaking the engagement because Mother had read "those spicy novels" and refused her consent. The next three, all from Theodora, warned Michael he would rue the day that he turned her down, that he would be sorry, as Theodora was going to make his life a torment and that under the name of Theodora Lynn (name in the picture) her novels had made a fortune. The "topper" to the series was the last personal in which Theodora invited Michael to meet her at the Orpheum at two o'clock on opening day to "go wild" together.

Hunter's ad campaign was also novel, using the personalized slant in his first three displays, all two column. First was headed with a cut of Melvyn Douglas saying: "Let's You and I Get Personal About a Mutual Friend" and praising Miss Dunne for her work in the picture and urging readers to see the feature. Second and third ads, reproduced below, illustrated cashier and ushers discussing the picture with actual photos used. Another direct star stunt was a lucky number contest for an oil painting of Miss Dunne painted by a Kansas City artist, with one of the autographs added. Picture was 30 inches by 36 and displayed in the lobby.

To tie in windows difficult to obtain during the holiday shopping rush, Hunter had cards made up in form of a holly wreath. At the top, picture copy was lettered with regular stills and below was placed merchandise copy for the cooperating stores.



"J. M., we'd better get rested for Saturday...."

"You're right, Jones, and I know why you are saying that . . . Boy, from the comments I've heard from the patrons during the past week or so I just know we'll be packed to capacity for four days . . . and you know that means real work."

"J. M., remember what big crowds we had on "It Happened One Night" Well there is just as much enthusiasiam over the coming of "Theodora Goes Wild" Irene Dunne is swell in this comedy role . . . and aren't those scenes in the trailer a scream. I can hardly wait to see the picture myself."

"They're Keeping Me Busy, But It's Fun!"

"This phone rings constantly; people asking about "Theodora Goes Wild" . . . If Saturday is the correct opening date? . . . If Irene Dunne really plays a light comedy role . . . and is the leading man the same Melvyn Douglas they enjoyed so much in "She Married Her Boss" . . . Can they ask questions?

From the advance interest I know I'll hardly have time to breathe during these four days . . . but I like it because when you're busy the time flies by . . . and it makes you feel good, too, to hear so many fine comments on one of your pictures. I just know it's going to be perfectly adorable.

OVERSEAS AWARDS ENDORSEMENTS

"EACH SECTION IS MOST INTERESTING"

We are always looking forward to receive the Motion Picture Herald, of which each section is most interesting for everybody working in the motion picture trade all over the world.

We here in Holland read always first the section, "Managers' Round Table".

We intended to send you, some time ago, a letter, expressing our great admiration for the way this section is edited, especially about the Quigley Awards which we think are at present the finest institution as a method and a medium of stimulating exploitation activities on the part of exhibitors and others.

We know that there is many an exhibitor in Holland who follows always with the greatest interest anything connected with these Awards, which is also in our interest as distributors, because the more the exhibitors over here can learn from your paper, the better they can exploit our pictures.

—J. WESSEL, Managing Director,
Warner Bros. F. N. Picture N. V.,
Holland.

D. E. GRIFFITHS

Manager Director

First National Film Distributors, Ltd.

On the eve of yet another year, I should like to take this opportunity of congratulating you on the very useful work you have performed through your feature, the Managers' Round Table and the introduction of the Quigley Awards.

Exploitation and advertising is the main spring of our Industry, and you have done great work in fostering it.

May you, and your encouraging and enterprising efforts on behalf of exploitation, gain greater strength in 1937.

LUIS LEZAMA

General Manager

Radio Pictures of Mexico, S. A.

The interest of the exhibitor in Mexico has been aroused by the encouragement you have given to originality in the exploitation of a picture. The good results of your Awards to the motion picture industry in the world will be far reaching and the means of discovering new talents and original ideas.

MARIO ZAMA

General Manager, Italy

Warner Bros. - First National Films, S. A. I.

Permit me to congratulate the Motion Picture Herald on its past accomplishments in connection with the Quigley Awards and to express my appreciation of this method of stimulating exploitation activities which benefits the motion picture industry as a whole and which has proved of great interest to foreign exhibitors.

I am sure that in this country this movement will have moral and active support.

C. L. CONRADSEN

Scandinavian District Manager

Warner Bros. - First National Film A. B.

. . . As the Scandinavian district manager for Warner Bros. I am making plans for the future in order to encourage our men to further efforts. . . . I use the word "encourage" and my mind turns automatically to your activities in the past in connection with the Quigley Awards. I consider this a splendid method and a medium of stimulating exploitation activities on the part of exhibitors and others and thus representing a force for the good benefit of our industry.

The moral and active support of the purpose of these Awards are now internationally known and I beg you to accept my sincerest congratulations for what you have done. . . .

MANAGERS APPRECIATE ROUND TABLE CLUB

I thought you might like to know how keenly your "Managers' Round Table" is appreciated by the Trade, and particularly by exploitation men and managers throughout the United Kingdom. Hence this note of congratulation for the manner in which you are stimulating showmanship, not by theory, but by actual practice.

Any man who gains the honour of an Award must feel honoured indeed. The incentive thus generated grows into a strong box-office force that must gratify exhibitors, and at the same time create that healthy competitive spirit to which the industry owes its present high status.

I hope that during this New Year more and more Knights of the Round Table will draw up their seats—and, by doing so, fill the seats of Cinemas all over the world.

—M. MILDER, Managing Director,
Warner Bros. Pictures, Ltd.,
London, England.

JULES SIMMONS

Branch Manager, Cardiff, Wales

Radio Pictures, Ltd.

(Via Cable) Exploitation drives in Motion Picture Herald much appreciated by exhibitors in South Wales area. Great interest taken as all managers anxious win Quigley Award.

HARRY BURGESS

Publicity Director

Radio Pictures, Ltd.

(Via Cable) Congratulations on yet another distribution exploitation Award. Showmen here inspired by your efforts. Keep up the good work.

SAM SEIDELMAN

Mexico Manager

United Artists Corp.

More power to your Quigley Awards. With such a splendid pace-setting example in the trade as you provide with your excellent weekly reports of actual cases of superlative promotion work and with such a fine stimulus as the Silver and Bronze Plaques, it is no wonder that showmen everywhere are striving for recognition in your pages, even in countries such as Mexico, where, until the Quigley Competitions were established, the exploitation technique was little known. Today, Mexico is exploitation conscious, thanks to your Managers' Round Table and your Quigley Awards.

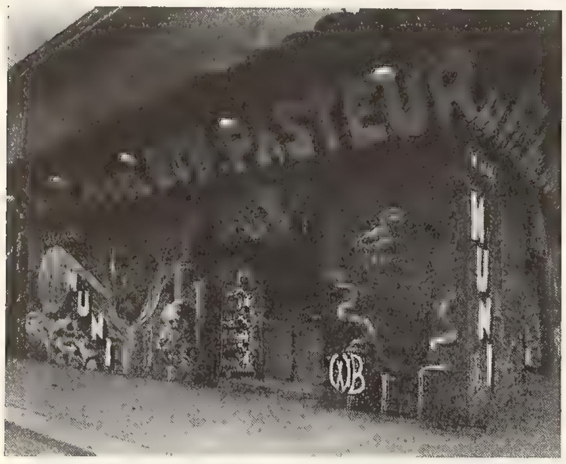
FRONTS AND STUNTS FROM OVERSEAS



Atmospheric Front for "Pasteur" in Milan

Ship Float Bally on "Blood" in Java

(Right) Concurrently with the premiere of United Artists' "Mohicans" at the London Pavilion, this Indian encampment was shown at Selfridge's. Indian braves were at the exhibit for four days and were said to have created quite a stir. EDMUND QUARRY, U.A. publicity director, is credited for the tieup.

Float on "Last Outpost" in India

(Right) All set for the occasion was this float drawn by oxen for date on "Dinner at Eight" at the Regent Cinema, Nagpur, India. Cutout stars for cast names bordered the display and clock at rear was set for the correct hour. N. J. NAYUDU, proprietor, created the ballyhoo.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

McAllen, Texas

Dear Herald:

A McAllen newspaper says over fifteen hundred northern folks have registered at the Chamber of Commerce here in McAllen. The most of them left their snow shovels at home but they're all wearing flannels and wondering when they'll shed their B.V.D's. Whenever we get a letter from home we always warm it over the gas range for fear we will find a snowdrift in it when we open it. So far this winter the mercury has not been below 45, and 45 is considered pretty cold down here. If these Texas folks should ever see a Nebraska blizzard they would have more sympathy for the Sioux Indians. Sometimes we wonder how the Sioux ever pulled through until spring anyhow.

Did I tell you that down here they celebrated Christmas like the weakminded folks celebrate the Fourth of July up north, by shooting firecrackers and making a lot of noise without knowing just why they did it?

We celebrated New Year's eve just as it ought to be celebrated, by attending a dinner with a company of friends and trying to do a man's work on a gobbler. If we had that doctor here who put us on a diet when we were home we'd tell him a few things that are not commonly expressed in good society. Just imagine sitting down to a dinner of turkey, cranberry sauce, escalloped oysters, fish, olives, huckleberry pie and a lot of other things besides ice cream and cake and remembering that you have been placed on a diet by a guy who should have been in the front ranks at Bull Run.

After dinner we sat out on the front lawn in our shirtsleeves and told a lot of our experiences, the most of which were imaginary, but we recited some fish stories for the boys to tell to their grandchildren provided there were no questions asked.

There was a fellow from Arkansaw in the company and after he listened to us for a while he said that over in Arkansaw the people built their hog pens out east of their residences. Being a hammerhead (like Bonnie Benfield of Morris, Minnesota, says we are), we said, "Why, what do they do that for?" And he replied, "Oh, just to put their hogs in." And there wasn't a corkscrew in the crowd! Now, if that Arkansaw traveller had been related to H. J. Longaker of Glenwood, Minnesota, we wouldn't have thought anything of it.

Today we got the Brownsville paper and it had a picture of J. C. Fanning, manager of the Brownsville theatres, holding up an eight pound trout he had caught in the ship channel, and he had a smile like the one he had when the doctor told him he was papa.

We don't blame J. C. for being proud of that fish. The one who wouldn't be is found in front of a cigar store with a hatchet in his hand. J. C. has a reputation in the Rio Gande Valley for knowing just where to find the big ones and the kind of bait to use. He has promised to give us a few lessons gratis if we will come down to Brownsville, and we are going to go down to school before long.

Our very good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Huffman of Denver, Colorado, sent us a very nice letter wishing us health and happiness and a lot of other good things. Harry, you know, is the manager of the most of the Denver theatres, and Hollywood don't make 'em any too good for Denver. We send them our sincere thanks for remembering us.

And then we received a nice letter from Mary Walthall of Hollywood. But maybe you don't know who Mary Walthall is, so we will introduce you. Mary was the wife of the late Henry B. Walthall, and when we first knew Mary her name was Mary Charleson and she was Henry's leading lady, and she came with Henry when he came out to our place to go hunting, and Mary hunted along with us just like an old veteran, and it was certain death to every hen grouse that got up in front of her. She was mighty tough on hens, and when they went back Henry took about 30 grouse to Chicago with them to give a grouse dinner to their friends.

We remember writing some poetry regarding Mary's shooting ability for Henry to read at that dinner, and we remember that one verse ran something like this—

And when a male grouse would go up like a rocket
She would calmly assume a studio pose,
Then a powder pull from her right trousers pocket
And quickly dust powder all over her nose.

Mary says she is hoping that her daughter, Patricia, will get an assignment to play in the movies. We hope so too, and if she is as good as her mother and father were the public will soon be hollering for her.

We were delighted to get a note from our old friend Phil Rand of Salmon, Idaho. It had been so long since we'd heard from Phil that we were afraid he had forgotten us or something had happened to him.

Phil, you know, was at one time a contestant in that "Exhibitors Beauty Contest" that ran in the HERALD some years back, and it has always been our belief that he was the handsomest man in the bunch (outside of ourself) and that he should have been awarded the blue ribbon. But he picked the wrong judge. He picked Ben Turpin, and Ben got one eye focussed on Fred Meyer of Hamilton, Ohio and the other one on Ernie Sprague of Goodland, Kansas, and that left Ben out on a limb and neither of us got first place. Ernie Sprague picked Bill Rogers for his judge, and Bill said that the judges couldn't judge that bunch of mugs without being furnished with plenty of liquor. We chose Constance Talmadge, and to insure getting her decision we sent her this—

Miss Constance is the girl for me;
She surely is a dream.
It really is a joy to see
Her face upon the screen.
She plays with such a queenly grace,
Such innocence shines in her face,
No other girl can take her place
That I have ever seen.

But in spite of that I'll be darned if she didn't turn the whole bunch down flat. But speaking of Phil, we remember that his backyard runs right down to the bank of the Salmon river, and he can stand on the bank and catch bigger salmon than that trout J. C. Fanning caught at Brownsville. Thanks, Phil, we were glad to hear from you.

We are with this letter a whole lot like the boy was when the lady asked him how he liked her dinner, and wanting to be polite he replied, "Oh, there was plenty of it." And wanting to be extra nice he added, "such as it was."

A POX OF PHOTOGRAPHY

ONE of the screen's loveliest ladies, on the screen, has a "dead pan" and is really cock-eyed. Another has a left-handed face and mostly, here and there, there's something less than perfect about all of them. That is why make-up is an art and cinematography is a miracle. By the alchemy of Hollywood all are made glorious.

Now comes the new journalism, the lads of the Time-Life-Look-and-Shudder school, bearing vivisecting cameras, sometimes called candid, and hell is to pay in the goldfish bowl.

For quite a while, publicity hunger and rivalry being what it is, there has been plenty of cooperation from the studios, through both players and the professional cooperators of publicity departments, to assist the accredited cameraman, with access to print, in getting most any kind of picture down to the Plimsoll mark or even up to the garboard strake—but always, mind you, pretty and in a nice way.

That, for some of the more enterprising pictorialism of the day, is not quite enough—if more can be had.

The super-realists of the new-idea-press are not content at all with going as far as possible. They want pictures of that, too.

So there is a pox of photography upon us.

To give a thrill to the buyers of the new pictorial penny-dreadfuls, lynx-eyed shutter snappers armed with concealed Leicas lurk in the poinsettias of Hollywood, and Beverly, among the dunes of Malibu, behind the cacti of Palm Springs, at train and airport, to catch and record the Veni and Adoni picking their teeth, blowing their noses, or doing most anything less than elegant.

To an industry engaged in the tediously delicate process of converting some very mere humanity into jewel-eyed demi-gods for the boxoffice, at terrific pains and price, the results are proving alarming.

Like a bubble, one prick and it is gone, the iridescence of glory can be lost to a personality of fragile, half fictional allure, by the cruel fact of one sensational picture of unsympathetic off-stage fact.

That is the kind the Leica looters lust after, the kind that makes full-page copy and sends the caption writer pearl-diving into a vocabulary of artful innuendo.

The primitive formula of sensationalism, in both word and picture, is to make the little one big and the big ones little. Violent, swift contrasts and transitions are as much a property of the printed page as of stage and screen. They come more quickly and more cheaply to the printed page.

It is to be known that the printed page of most of today's journalism is just exactly a piece of amusement enterprise, making merchandise of all who come to fame or ill-fame alike. The stars of Hollywood purveyed from the screen of the theatres are also being converted into printed page shows and copy, morning and night, weekly and monthly by the press which collects its wares just as darkies catch driftwood in the Mississippi.

Hollywood is now taking certain precautions about the making of pictures on the studio lots. Candid cameras are supposed to be barred. All the rest of California is wide open. Also, to supplement the bag of the sharpshooters of the Leica corps, still hunters are abroad excavating archives and files. For instance, there's a hotel up the coast from Hollywood with a publicity file of many years accumulation. It was long the custom there to photograph for promotional purposes many visiting notables, especially from Hollywood. It was agreed that only approved pictures would be released. That was the practice, too, but some way now a great store of the unreleased, unapproved, perhaps unsubmitted, negatives has passed to the possession of an enterprising publication. Hollywood's fearing anticipations are tremendous.

Photography without benefit of dramaturgy may be murder.

The one place for the Hollywood face is on the screen where they pay to see it.

FLOWERS FOR GIRL

SOMEWHERE off to the northwest "in the blue" beyond Nairobi in British East Africa a wild and alien American garden blooms in gay remembrance of "Bwana Tumbo," the name that the black ivory hunters had for Martin Johnson.

The place is Lake Paradise, a little cup of water, jungle rimmed, in an ancient volcano crater. It is on no map and its name came out of a motion picture conference in a film cutting room of the old Craftsman Laboratories in New York. Crumbling huts and the remnants of a thorn bush walled compound mark the place that for the years of their African wanderings Martin and Osa called "home." And home it was, for there they spent more time on one spot than ever before in their adventuring lives.

It was for Osa's joy that Martin imported, through Mombassa and a thousand miles of desert and lava trails, seeds for a garden "like back home in Kansas." Elephants and baboons came to pilfer the strange, new, succulent vegetables, but the flower heads were left to the birds and the African winds,

This Week

Radio Wooing

A significant aspect in the evolution of a logical relationship between radio and the screen is the increasing attention paid by producing and distributing companies to using the air as an outlet for advertising and exploitation. The publicity departments in the home offices are planning or have created special departments to prepare ideas and material for use on radio programs and by radio commentators.

The methods used and the material are described on page 13.

Flooded Theatres

Flood waters in the Ohio Valley this week rose to new high levels and inundated towns from Cincinnati down to below Huntington, W. Va., with heavy damage to theatre business, as most of the houses were forced to close, and to necessitate the change of film delivery points to adjacent towns. Conservative estimates are that the damage done to the industry by this year's high waters will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars as over 300 theatres were closed.

A description of the damage done so far by the high waters is found in the story on page 15.

Stage Show Bid

What with the police department of Chicago setting out in earnest to eliminate chance games, and exhibitors' own misgivings accompanying their return to double features, some showmen are seeing a possible avenue to increased grosses in a revival of a stage show and pit band policy.

New Union Denounced

A new organization formed in New York, the United Theatrical and Motion Picture Workers of America, has been repudiated by the leaders of established unions in the theatrical field who claim that the group is not authorized by the American Federation of Labor or by the Committee for Industrial Organization. The new union is said to be planning an attempt to organize theatrical workers into a vertical union.

Comments of labor leaders on the plan are on page 34.

Loach Elected

Thomas P. Loach, former assistant treasurer of Pathe, has been elected treasurer by the board of directors to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Willis C. Bright. Mr. Loach has been with the company five years.

Yamins Reelected

Nathan Yamins unanimously was reelected president of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors at the annual meeting of the board of directors in Baltimore. Mr. Yamins repeatedly had refused to accept the post again. Milwaukee was selected as the scene of the annual convention and the date was set tentatively for April 1st.

A report of the meeting is on page 14.

More Laws

Congress, with a dozen bills affecting the motion picture industry introduced and thousands of others, will have little time for the consideration of anything but the "must" legislation which crowds its agenda, Washington observers believe. State legislatures now in session have under consideration many bills affecting the industry directly or indirectly, and municipal bodies in several cities are turning their attention to matters of interest to theatre men.

News from the legislative halls is on page 26.

Germany's Film Decline

The true state of motion picture affairs in Germany is disclosed in a report received by the United States Department of Commerce from R. M. Stephenson, its trade commissioner at Berlin, who reveals a serious economic condition, further moves toward complete "centralization," and a 25 per cent decline in film exports attributed to various causes.

Mr. Stephenson's official report starts on page 63.

Court Actions

Eight distributing companies and two Texas circuits, defendants in a suit brought by the Federal Government to test the legality of exhibition contracts which include minimum admission and double featuring clauses, are scheduled to file answers to briefs on February 1st. Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO are facing, respectively, a copyright violation action and a plagiarism suit.

The status of the suits is reported on page 18.

Academy Awards

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science has begun the consideration of nominations for its annual award for pictures, directing, acting, writing and the technical field. Committees are studying nominations now and the entire membership of the Academy will vote by secret ballot on the final selections.

The Pickford Plans

Pending more detailed announcement on her return from Europe about June, Mary Pickford has made public her plans for reentering production. They include formation of a screen stock company composed of relatively unknown but promising players, who will be available to other producers by loan.

More about the Pickford plans on page 31.

California Freeze-Out

The cold spell in California, now admittedly somewhat more than "unusual," has depressed theatre attendance to such an extent that unannounced previewing has been temporarily discontinued for lack of patrons in sufficient numbers for purposes of checking response.

Details are on page 31.

Tax Exemption

Amplifiers and loudspeakers used in theatre sound systems and public address systems are exempt from the five per cent manufacturers excise tax under a ruling handed down this week by the Treasury Department on a claim by the Sales On Sound Corporation.

The claim is explained on page 32.

Hungarian Cartel

Distributors in Hungary are planning to form a cartel to prevent the small exhibitors from obtaining lower film rentals by designating one of their number to buy product for them all. Exhibitors plan to block Governmental permission for the cartel.

The dispute is reported on page 24.

Production Splurge

Production moved forward with abrupt celerity as fourteen new pictures, many of them considered significant, went into work while seven were being taken from the stages. Warners led the upturn, placing five productions before the cameras.

Titles and personnel of the pictures started and completed are available on page 31.

Italian Gains

Indications in Rome are that the 12 months from June, 1936 to June, 1937 will show a production of between 40 and 45 features in Italy. The figures compare with 36 in the previous year and 32 in 1934-35. An increase in the number of wired theatres is also expected. The conclusion of negotiations between American companies and the Italian Government was greeted with enthusiasm.

Washington Opening

Adolph Zukor and Paramount home office executives attended the opening of "Champagne Waltz," in Loew's Palace, Washington, at which diplomatic and Congressional notables were present. A dinner for Mr. Zukor preceded the premiere.

The story is on page 34.

which spread them far around that chalice of a valley in the "Never-never land," way out back of beyond.

Martin has gone on his last safari, into that other and outer-most of the never-never lands, let those hope who may, to another Lake Paradise, as sapphire blue and rimmed, too, with the gold and scarlet of the poppies, the zinnias and the marigolds that he planted for Osa.

Some archeology of the misty tomorrow will find Lake Paradise, and, like as not, there will be a monograph about some esoteric theory of the principle of the diffusion of cultures, supported by the fossil flora there.

From now till then, when Simba comes creeping, stalking to surprise Dik-dik drinking at the water's edge, that nightly twilight tragedy of the wild will be but a stir in a thicket of Kansas gayfeather, the tall purple spikes of liatris, the flower so mad that it blooms from the top downwards.

For science, for history, let us record thus simply, that here was where Boy planted flowers for Girl.

Census Statistics

Publication of figures covering amusement establishments in 19 states by the Census Bureau this week brings the total reports published to date to 33 states with aggregate receipts of $282,625,000 from 17,841 establishments. The figures cover motion picture and other theatres, shows, circuses, amusements parks, dance halls, bowling alleys and other resorts.

Summaries by states are on page 24.

Extras

Figures released this week by Campbell McCulloch, vice-president and general manager of the Central Casting Bureau, showed that 268,436 Hollywood extras earned a total of $2,420,453.55 in 1936. The extras include men, women and children.

Statistics are on page 54.

WPA Films

Works Progress Administrator Hopkins told the House Appropriations Committee that 16 WPA films produced represented an expenditure of $101,055.56 and that no difficulty has been experienced in persuading the General Accounting Office to okay this outlay.

Mr. Hopkins' statement is quoted on page 25.

Chance Game Fights

Important court actions on the legal status of chance games and giveaways are being waged in Illinois, where Chicago police have made additional arrests of theatre operators and have banned the games, and in Missouri where a test case is pending in the state supreme court. State and municipal authorities, too, are taking further action.

Developments are recorded on page 23.

Kennebeck Dead

John E. Kennebeck, 39, managing director for Paramount in Australia and New Zealand, died last Saturday in Sydney. He had gone to Australia in 1923 after having served a year on the Paramount exchange staff in Omaha and his ability and popularity brought him the appointment as managing director there in 1934.

An obituary is on page 25.

Marie Prevost Passes

Marie Prevost, one-time Sennett bathing beauty, subsequently star in her own right and recently a bit player, was found dead in her Hollywood apartment on Saturday under circumstances indicating illness and impoverishment.

Tally, Corbar Claim

Claims made against Fox West Coast by T. L. Talley and the Corbar Corporation in connection with the receivership of the theatre circuit have been definitely rejected with a refusal by the United States circuit court of appeals in San Francisco to reverse the decision of a lower court.

The case is reviewed on page 24.

Warner Earnings

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and subsidiaries revealed in a report made public this week a net operating profit of $2,047,936 after amortization, depreciation, normal federal taxes and all charges but without provision for surtaxes on undistributed earnings for the quarter ended Nov. 26, 1936.

Other features of the report are set forth on page 32.

Sales Tax Appeal

A New York State court of appeals decision on the appeal brought by New York City from a lower court ruling on the applicability of a two per cent sales tax to film rentals is not expected for three weeks. Arguments were heard in Albany this week and decision was reserved.

The case is explained on page 54.

This Week in Pictures

FILM COMPANIES BLANKET RADIO WITH EXHIBITOR AIDS

Distributors Large and Small Provide Stations with Material for Sustaining Features and Tieups with Showmen

News Letters Sent Weekly to Commentators; Scripts with Excerpts from Pictures Go to Local Broadcasters

Evolution of a working relationship between radio and the screen, marked in the last year by an unprecendented increase in the use of motion picture talent by the purveyors of air wave entertainment despite loud and long protests from exhibitors that such use constituted unfair competition, has been given indications of further advancement by new developments.

Increasing attention is being given by producing and distributing companies, large and small, to organized use of radio facilities as an outlet for publicity, either institutional or for a particular picture. The home office publicity forces have geared their machinery to manufacture ideas and material designed to turn the air outlet to best advantage and in many cases the radio release bureau has become one of the most important cogs in the department.

The most direct advantage accruing to the individual exhibitor from these activities of the companies is the supplying of brief scripts, covering excerpts from current pictures, to local broadcasting stations. The scripts are written so that they can be used by the station program director either as a sustaining feature or as a sponsored program tied in with the local exhibitor. In this case the play date and the name of the theatre are incorporated in the opening and closing announcements.

The popularity of the news and "chatter" commentators with radio audiences has facilitated matters for the motion picture companies to some extent. Regular weekly releases covering industry news of general interest are sent out by the companies to long lists of such commentators, and much of the material is used by the broadcasters.

Widen Use by Exhibitors

These activities are designed to enlarge the field of usefulness of radio as an exploitation outlet for exhibitors, a field already tested in many places by theatre owners and managers who sponsor local radio programs as advertising and publicity for their shows or merely obtain flash announcements on the air through tieups involving contests or by distributing passes. The wide and growing extent of this practice was shown in a survey in Motion Picture Herald issue of December 26th.

The importance attached to radio tieups by the distributing companies is evident in the present organization of their radio departments or their plans in this connection. The method of operation, in the case of most of the distributors, is very similar.

Appoint Special Staff

Columbia has appointed a special staff to handle radio publicity. A five minute script covering late news of general interest and edited for radio use is sent out weekly to 135 stations for use by commentators. Dramatizations from pictures are not prepared regularly but the staff cooperates with radio station program directors if requested. The press books for the more important features carry spot radio announcements and suggestions to the exhibitor for radio tieups with his local station.

RADIO-NEWS FIGHT SEEN AS PARALLEL

Norman Corwin of Twentieth Century-Fox, from his personal experience as a former news commentator over two New England stations, sees a parallel between exhibitor protests over the use of stars on radio programs and the dispute between newspaper publishers with broadcasters. His program was forced off the air as the result of a ruling by American Newspaper Publishers Association against supplying news to radio stations. Hundreds of letters were received by the stations protesting that the listeners' appetite for news was whetted rather than dulled by the broadcasts.

Information Supplied

Gaumont British is setting up a service to supply radio stations with information on its pictures, its stars, its directors and other personalities. The plan is to send a weekly radio letter to the smaller stations around the country and to arrange special and exclusive broadcasts with the larger stations and chains. In the exploitation department special attention is being given to radio possibilities. Press books and other material sent to exhibitors point out opportunities for air exploitation and means of obtaining it are suggested.

An entirely new department to contact the radio field has been created by Grand National Films, with Harry N. Blair in charge. Regular releases concerning the activities of the company and its players will be sent to radio stations using such material and a special section of each press book will contain material of special interest to film-news commentators.

A radio news service conducted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sends material to a mailing list of 575 persons. The releases include a 14 page script especially adapted for broadcasting purposes, a four page section of timely personality notes, fashion hints by the stars, beauty talks and a weekly biography. Many stations use much of the material intact. In addition to this regular service dramatizations, 10 to 15 minutes in length, of outstanding releases are prepared in the home office and supplied to stations throughout the country.

In New York City there are two weekly programs over WHN featuring MGM stars and attractions. A brief program is given on Monday mornings at 11:45 and a longer one at 8 P. M. Friday evenings when the MGM Radio Movie Club meets under the supervision of Radie Harris. On this program dramatized scenes from coming attractions are presented and stars from Hollywood who are visiting in the east make frequent appearances.

Feature material is supplied for the WABC program called "The Panorama of Broadway," for WOR's Macy Morning Parade and for a number of outstanding radio commentators who are invited to attend eastern and western previews. These commentators review MGM product and use the company's press material to good advantage. Among them are Jimmie Fidler, Elsie Schallert, Gabriel Heatter, Adele Rogers St. John and Dale Carnegie.

Loew Managers Cooperate

In addition, Loew theatre managers throughout the country have been successful in capitalizing on radio activity and "air-mindedness" on the part of the public. Not only have transcriptions of picture dialogue been used for all forms of local station tie-ups but in many cases managers have arranged broadcasts from the lobby of the local house or hook-ups with local merchants.

In Kansas City a regular morning program featuring Loew attractions has been broadcast over W9XBY. One of the most active stations in the South featuring a similar program has been WGST in Atlanta. George Hunt, Jr., Louisville manager, sold Station WAVE a 26-week series based on radio transcriptions. In Jersey City J. E. Egberts completed arrangements for a star-photo tie-up with WAAT. There is a daily organ broadcast from Loew's Rochester theatre over WSAY and in Memphis Loew's has been featuring an organ recital Sunday afternoons from 12:45 to 1 o'clock.

In Providence, R. I., Howard Burkhardt started a "man-on-the-street" broadcast, and in Springfield, Mass., George Freeman arranged for a half hour WMAS program devoted exclusively to Eleanor Powell, who comes from that city.

Cooperates on Scripts

Paramount has no special routine for tying in with radio publicity but the channel is by no means neglected. The publicity department's regular daily press copy is sent to the larger broadcasting stations and commentators are provided with all the material they can use. The department cooperates with network program directors on such regular broadcasts as the Lux Theatre of the Air in the preparation of scripts and the appearance of stars, but no scripts are prepared by the distributing company's publicists. Important news stories are specially edited for radio use and sent out to the wire services supplying the studios. The activities are divided between the publicity departments in New York and on the Coast.

RKO Radio three years ago initiated a special radio service which was sent to 400 radio stations. The service comprised a specially edited resume of the entire week's news releases together with 15 minute radio dramatizations which were sent to stations specifically requesting them. In August of 1936 a return postcard was sent to the entire list, asking whether the recipient wished continuation of the service and inviting suggestions. The result is an active list of 180 radio commentators having current programs who incorporate RKO material in their broadcasts.

The releases are carefully timed in order to facilitate their use. A special service is avail-

ALLIED DIRECTORS RE-ELECT YAMINS; REDOUBLE BLOCK BOOKING FIGHT

Promote Selling of British Lloyds Liability Insurance to Exhibitors; Ask Members to Delay Signing for 1937 - 38 Films

Nathan Yamins of Fall River, Mass., will continue as president of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors. He heads the list of officers reelected at the annual meeting of the board of directors at the Emerson Hotel in Baltimore.

Mr. Yamins repeatedly had refused reelection to the post but finally accepted when the directors insisted. Abram F. Myers continues as chairman of the board and general counsel; Herman Blum as secretary and treasurer, and H. M. Richey as corresponding secretary. The executive committee includes Mr. Yamins, Sidney Samuelson and Arthur B. Price. The five regional vice-presidents are expected to be renamed by Mr. Yamins.

The board directed that a warning be issued to all exhibitors to delay signing contracts for 1937-38 product until the annual convention, pointing out that certain distributors already were seeking to sell next year's product. The directors held that early buying encourages excessive rentals and onerous conditions of sale.

After a prolonged contest, in which three polls were taken, Milwaukee was selected as the convention city over Pittsburgh. The session, tentatively set for April 1st, depending on what arrangements can be made for hotel accommodations, will be earlier than usual, the purpose being to enable officers in the respective territories to canvass members on selling conditions and report fully at the convention. P. J. Wood of Columbus, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, was elected chairman of the convention committee.

The board unanimously resolved that Allied should redouble its efforts to obtain passage of the Neely-Pettengill bill against compulsory block booking and blind selling and each director pledged the support of himself and his regional association in the campaign. The bill has been reintroduced in the Senate and House.

The directors heard explained a plan under which 100 New England exhibitors were said to be taking liability insurance through Lloyds of London at less than half the rates charged by American companies, and it was agreed that the plan should be made available to all members of the association. Arthur Howard of Boston is handling details for that territory, but the directors were instructed to tell their members to make their applications directly to London.

A committee is studying the matter of publishing a house organ or of making arrangements with some existing publication to act as liaison between the officers and the members and to contact individual exhibitors and public groups.

Copies of a bill divorcing exhibition and production were distributed to the directors, who will bring up the subject for consideration before their local units for reports and action before it is introduced in state legislatures. W. A. Steffes was continued as chairman of the special defense committee appointed at the convention in Cleveland last June.

The board favored the Duffy copyright revision bill containing the Allied amendments limiting copyright owners to a single charge against exhibitors for the right to exhibit pictures and publicly perform the recorded music, and abolishing the arbitrary statutory penalty for infringement and requiring proof of actual damage. An increase in the federal admission tax exemption to include admissions of 50 cents was also favored.

The report of the financial committee showed the association free of debt and with a substantial balance.

Edward Golden, sales manager of Monogram, addressed the directors on the first day of the meeting, and that evening the delegates were guests at a banquet given by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland.

Boston Unit Meets

Independent Exhibitors, Inc., the New England Allied unit, at a meeting this week unanimously elected Mr. Yamins president, Max Levenson, first vice-president; Francis Lydon, second vice-president; Adolph Bendsley, secretary, and Harold Stoneman treasurer.

Members voted to support legislation for the divorcement of production and exhibition and to pledge a sum equal to one year's dues to be assessed one-eighth quarterly for two years. Mr. Lydon, George Ramsdell, Jack Findley and Mr. Howard were named as a local defense committee.

Funeral Services Held For James Field of RKO

Funeral services for James B. Field, head of the RKO theatre legal department in New York for the past year, were held Wednesday morning at the Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue. Burial was private, at Princeton, N. J.

Mr. Field died Sunday night in Polyclinic Hospital of complications resulting from operations which he underwent several weeks ago. He was unmarried, and is survived by his sister, Mrs. E. C. O'Brien. He came to RKO from the law firm of Goldwater and Flynn, which has been counsel to Keith-Albee-Orpheum for several years.

Mountain Exhibitors Elect Rugar President

John A. Rugar this week was elected president of the Intermountain Theatres Association in Salt Lake City at the organization's annual meeting. He succeeds Stanley Robbins. Other officers elected were Vincent A. Gilhood, vice-president; Beverly S. Clendenin, secretary and treasurer. Directors chosen included M. F. Harris, Stanley Rich, Joseph L. Lawrence, A. B. Johnson and J. J. Gillette.

Companies Assist Theatres on Radio

able for any radio editor requesting additional material. In addition to the weekly dramatizations which are sent out every Monday special scripts are sent to a list of 54 stations which have organized local stock companies.

The radio department of Republic prepares 15 minute sketches adapted for broadcasting on each new picture, playing up the dramatic moments and highlights of the film. These scripts are supplied to radio stations and to exhibitors who, booking the attractions at their theatres, take an active interest in placing the radio dramatization on local stations. The various Republic exchanges cooperate and in many instances plant the script before selling the picture, creating a demand for the product.

Newspaper radio columnists and commentators are supplied with timely news of Republic production. Every press book contains a special section advising exhibitors how to cooperate successfully with local radio stations. Special scripts and transcriptions of musical numbers of dialogues are supplied on request to stations planning programs on which they can be included.

Exhibitors Use Service

Twentieth Century-Fox provides a regular broadcasting news service to stations which have either requested material or replied favorably to questionnaires concerning the desirability of Hollywood news. Frequently exhibitors planning commercial tieups request the service and the company includes optional radio scripts in each of its press books.

Distinction is made between scripts to be used on a commercial program bought and paid for by the exhibitor, or on a sustaining program of the "Round the Town" or "Where to Go" type. Transcriptions of dialogue or musical numbers are used infrequently.

Nearly every radio station in the country is on the release list used by United Artists in mailing material for commentators, radio transcriptions, dramatizations, special news letters compiled from timely news of personalities and human interest fan information.

Beside this general coverage the leading screen commentators are provided with specially prepared material, general news commentators are given stories sympathetic with their style and fashion editors receive special bulletins.

Universal prepares radio scripts for all important releases and makes up special service copy for commentators which is sent to approximately 230 stations. The press books sent to exhibitors contain a few paragraphs of comment which can be clipped out and given to the local station or stations for a theatre-radio tie-up at the time of the showing.

Warner Brothers considers radio publicity one of the major instruments for ballyhooing an attraction. Radio commentators throughout the country are serviced with weekly news releases on stars and new productions. Two of these releases, sent out regularly, are "Hollywood on the Air" and "Hollywood Fashion Parade."

For the more important feature pictures the company prepares and distributes to radio stations 15 minute radio scripts dramatizing the highlights of the film. The suggested announcements mention the playdate and theatre. The press sheets carry announcements of the availability of this service and exhibitors are encouraged to use it. Ideas also are suggested for radio tieups on all musical productions.

300 THEATRES ARE CLOSED BY FLOOD IN FIVE STATES

Money Loss to Exhibitors and Exchanges Estimated in Hundreds of Thousands; Many Houses Under Water

With 300 theatres closed by the flood waters of the Ohio river, monetary loss to exhibitors and to distributors and auxiliary services by the middle of the week was estimated as high in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, in Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Indiana and Missouri. Throughout the entire Ohio Valley theatre operation was at a standstill.

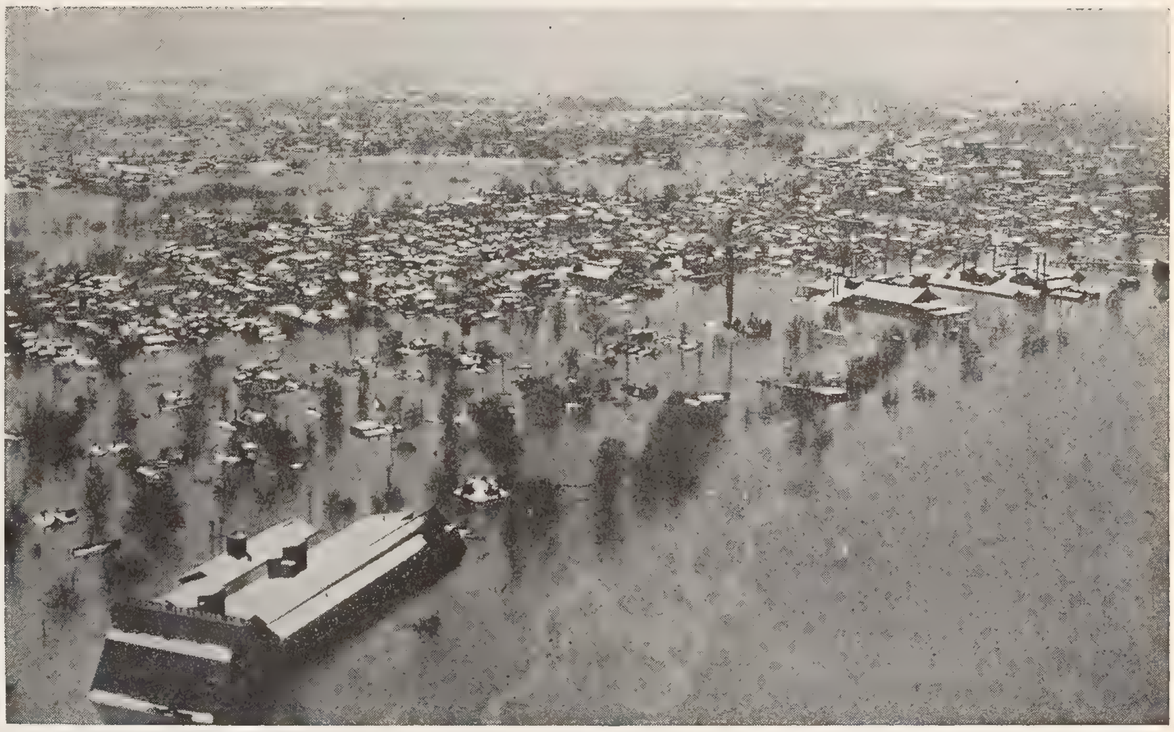
In the Cincinnati territory alone, more than 200 theatres ceased operation. Many theatres were under water; others closed their doors when power and water supplies were shut off or curtailed. Thirty-two theatres served by St. Louis exchanges were dark. All theatre operations in Louisville and adjacent towns halted, bringing the total of darkened houses above the 300 figure. In addition, exchanges in Cincinnati and Louisville were paralyzed. Several companies shifted the seat of operations to other cities for deliveries to theatres outside the stricken communities.

With the Ohio river at 79 feet and still rising on Wednesday, every Cincinnati theatre, affiliated and independent, was closed indefinitely and electric current was curtailed. Four business blocks were inundated. The Albee, the theatre nearest to the path of the flood, was in no danger, however, because of its high elevation. Among the darkened first-runs were the Palace, Shubert, Capitol, Lyric, Grand, Family and Keiths, as well as eight RKO suburban theatres.

In Louisville, where half the town was under water, all theatres were closed and the Kentucky, National, Drury Lane, Uptown and Ohio were turned over to authorities for the sheltering of flood refugees. All film deliveries from local branches were discontinued Monday and operations shifted to Washington, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

In Pittsburgh, flood waters were on the rise again, and a 40-foot stage was expected, which would put most of the downtown houses under water. The staffs of the Penn, Alvin and Barry were operating at top speed pumping out the cellars, but the Stanley was not so fortunate and temporarily halted operations. Preparations were made, however, to remove all engines, carpets and seats should the waters continue to mount, and the damage was not expected to equal that in last year's flood when there was no warning. All Pittsburgh exchanges were working on double shifts to supply theatres usually taken care of by the shipping offices in Cincinnati.

Why Louisville's Motion Picture Public Isn't Attending Theatres



The devastating effect of the flood in the entire Ohio River Valley, with the consequent closing of at least 300 theatres, with huge money losses in damage to the buildings and loss of business to distributors as well as exhibitors, is evidenced in this airplane view of Louisville.

Approximately 32 theatres in 28 towns served by St. Louis exchanges were reported out of service, with the totals expected to be higher when full returns were in. Theatres in the following cities were reported closed: three at Cairo, Ill.; three at Paducah, Ky.; one each at New Madrid, Mo.; Rosiclare, Ill.; Shawneetown, Ill.; Bardwell, Ky.; Wickliffe, Ky.; Morganfield, Ky.; Dixon, Ky.; Marion, Ky.; Cave-in-Rock, Ill.; Calconda, Ill.; Senath, Mo.; Kennett, Mo.; Hornersville, Mo., and East Prairie, Mo.

The greatest damage to theatres by the flood waters, according to John A. Goodno, secretary-treasurer of the Palace Theatre at Huntington, W. Va., would be in the Ohio Valley region from Parkersburg, W. Va., all the way down to Cairo, Ill. Indications were that the damage would far exceed that of 1913 when the river flooded surrounding territory to a record level.

Thirty theatres in 26 towns in southern Illinois, south-eastern Missouri and Kentucky, seven suburban Cincinnati houses, all in Middletown, Ohio, and New Albany and Jefferson, Ky., theatres ceased operations. The schine circuit was reported in New York as being one of the most affected circuits. The company has many theatres in the Ohio and Kentucky regions which are in the center of the flooded areas. The Comerford circuit and National Theatres, which were hard hit by the high waters last year, have no units in the affected areas at present.

A large portion of the theatre loss will be in the area from Huntington, W. Va., down to Louisville. In Parkersburg, W. Va., Market street, the main thoroughfare, is under several feet of water. Two Warner Brothers houses there have been closed. Pomeroy, Ohio, where the principal street parallels the Ohio river for seven miles, was under several feet of water, and a new theatre erected there recently and two others were under 10 feet of the torrent.

Down the river at Point Pleasant, W. Va., usually high town, the Ohio was rising rapidly Tuesday and the crest was only four and one-half feet under the record 1913 level.

Over the river at Point Pleasant, W. Va., the town was completely cut off, with the 500-seat theatre there reported to have been seriously damaged.

In Huntington, 10 theatres with seats totaling 10,000 were all closed and all seven downtown theatres were under from two to 10 feet of water. The heaviest loss probably will be sustained by the newly remodeled Palace, which just last week completed a

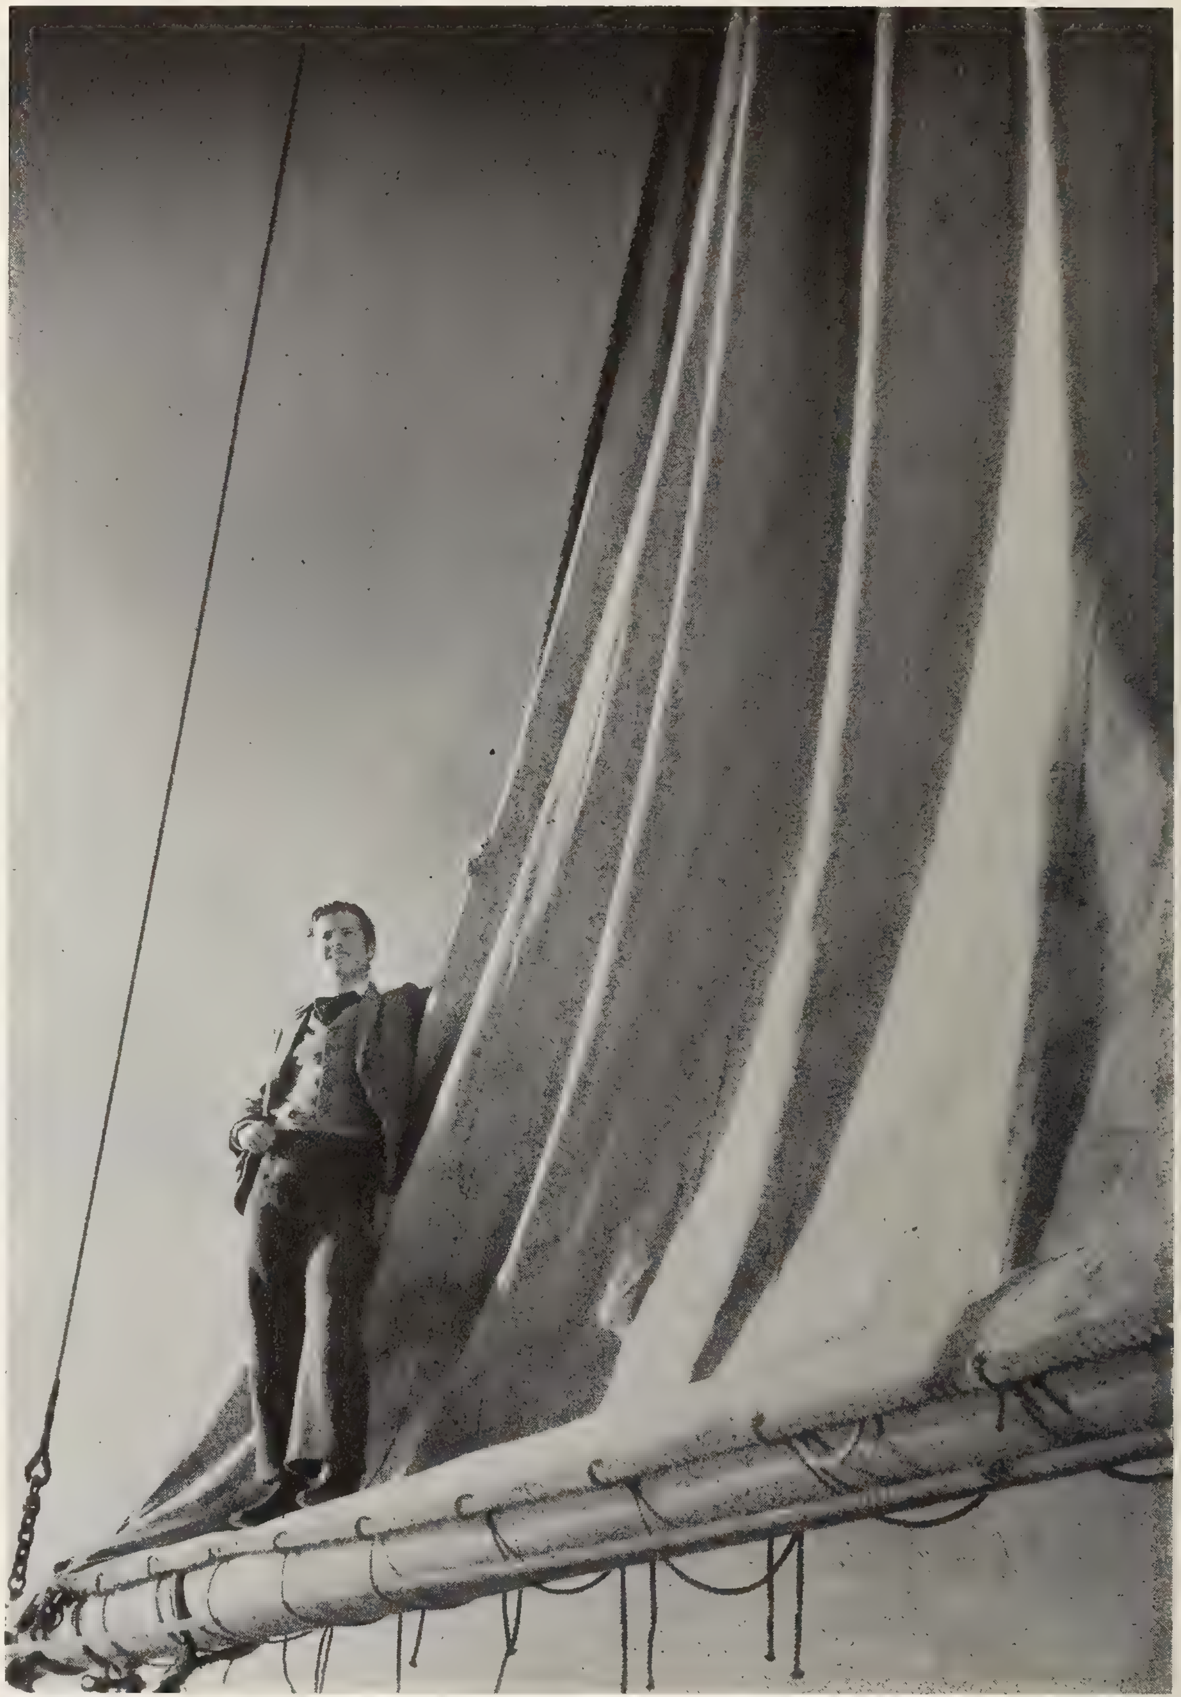
REENACT DRAMA OF PAST



ONE day in April, 1841, the North Atlantic Ocean gave up a tale that was to fill columns of newspapers on two continents, cause a sailor man to become the central figure of one of the greatest court dramas of the century and start one of the most gripping human controversies of all time. The Philadelphia Public Ledger, about to celebrate an anniversary a short time ago, and searching through musty files, dug up factual data of this sensational saga of the sea, a stirring story of men and women that became a "cause celebre" throughout the world. The Paramount picture, "Souls at Sea," is the cinematic result.

A sea yarn, it is a romance and drama of human experience, adventure, conflict, harrowing danger, sacrifice and courtship. Slave traders, statesmen, common folk, British aristocrats, Yankee sailormen, naval officers, thieves and lovers are its characters. Its major romantic theme is the love story of a high-born English girl and a raw-boned New England skipper. Its pulsating contrast is the fiction embellished dramatic story of a sea captain who, following a marine disaster, tossed fellow humans to the waves in order that other humans might live. It tells the story of one man who lived because love lived; of another man who found life not worth the living when the one he loved was lost. Opening with his trial for murder, the stories are told in retrospect.

The film stars Gary Cooper and George Raft and features Frances Dee. In support of them is mustered one of the most impressive casts of name players that Paramount or any other Hollywood studio has offered in years. Listed are Henry Wilcoxon, Harry Carey, Robert Barrat, Joseph Shildkraut and Porter Hall, outstanding in "The Garden of Allah" and "The General Died at Dawn" respectively, Olympe Bradna, Robert Cummings, Gilbert Emery, Lucien Littlefield, Tully Marshall, Virginia Weidler, Fay Holden and Colin Tapley. Among others are Fay Holden, Cecil Cunningham, Clyde Cook, Paul Fix, Robert Warwick, Jamison Thomas, George Beranger and Monte Blue.

To the screen adaptation of this subject worthy of the literary attention of a Stevenson, Dumas or Conrad Paramount assigned Grover Jones. His treatment of "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" stand as testimony to his capabilities. To bring such a valuable property to screen realism, it was not unpected that Henry Hathaway, maker of the above named pictures, should be entrusted with the responsibility of direction.

In the matter of musical score and features a seeming paradox occurs. Modern minded Ralph Rainger was teamed with the classicist composer, Arnold Schoenberg, to prepare the melodies, and it was Leo Robin's job to furnish the lyrics. Their combined product, which Boris Morros will direct, sea chanteys, love songs and symphonic accompaniment is being depended upon to establish the proper moods and mental backgrounds for the production's dynamic drama.

Neither expense nor effort was spared in providing worthy production detail. Sailing vessels of other days, growing old in the mud of west coast ports, The Star of Finland and Star of Alaska, were resurrected and refurbished to serve as the ships of the period, queens of the flotilla to be seen in the film. Authentic and real are their sail rigging, the personnel costumes, weapons, life boats, fire engines, flags and the other necessary props.

Hollywood comment is to the effect that all this enterprise adds up to equal box office fitness of a kind and on a scale achieved at fairly regular intervals and with uniformly gratifying results in the production of maritime subjects. Memory flashes back over an impressive array of these, "Mutiny On the Bounty" in the foreground and "Mobey Dick" in the distance, with numerous others between, suggesting the type of public response anticipated by experts, volunteer and otherwise, for the film now approaching completion.

$15,000 reconstruction program. Huntington theatres, however, unlike Pittsburgh houses last year, removed all seats, engines and fixtures last week when the water first gave evidence of rising to dangerous heights.

At Ashland, Ky., 20 miles below Huntington, the water was four feet higher than in 1913 and two feet more was expected. However, theatre damage was not expected to be very heavy, as the town's three houses are located on high ground. The cellars alone were likely to be affected.

Two miles farther down, at Ironton, it was a different story. The entire town was flooded and damage to the theatres was expected to run into thousands of dollars.

All the theatres in Portsmouth, Ohio, were closed. Warners reported over 10 feet of water on the stages of their two houses in nearby Laroy. Two other houses there, the Garden and the Westland, recently remodeled, were expected to have heavy damage.

City by City

Following is a city by city resume of the flood situation and theatre status:

OHIO

CINCINNATI: Twenty-five square miles of city under water. All 61 theatres were closed. Downtown theatre buildings were flooded, as were seven suburban houses. The others were not operating because of lack of power.

POMEROY: Residents stranded without gas or water. The theatres, the Electric and Majestic were closed.

ZANESVILLE: Greater part of city flooded with police ordering evacuation of flooded area. The Grand, Imperial, New Liberty, Quimby and Weller theatres were closed.

GALLIPOLIS: River rising continually driving people from their homes. Theatres: Gallipolis and Gallia reported closed.

IRONTON: Water six feet deep. Theatres reported closed were the Eastern, Grand, Lyric, Marlow and Southside.

NEW RICHMOND: Town reported almost completely submerged. The one theatre is the Dodge.

MIDDLEPORT: Reported in "terrible straits" without gas or water. The three theatres, the Family, Liberty and Strand, were dark.

INDIANA

EVANSVILLE: Ten thousand relief workers, under military direction, were helping to evacuate territory from Lawrenceburg to Mount Vernon. Fifty-five thousand persons reported homeless with third of city under water. The 11 theatres all were reported closed.

AURORA: More than 3,000 homeless were still waiting for rescue, delayed by a shortage of boats, the only means of transportation. The theatres, the Paramount and Tivoli, were closed.

KENTUCKY

LOUISVILLE: 230,000 of its 350,000 population homeless, three-fourths of the city under water. No running water, electricity. All 38 theatres were closed because of lack of power. Most of the downtown houses not under water were being used as refugee stations.

PADUCAH: Three to six feet of water swirled through business section. The closed theatres were the Arcade, Columbia and Orpheum.

MADISONVILLE: Floodwaters overrunning town. The Capitol, Cameo and Kentucky theatres were reported closed by lack of power.

WEST VIRGINIA

WHEELING: Ohio river entered business district. Most of the 10,000 residents of Wheeling Island fled. Wholesale section was under two to five feet of water. The theatres, the Capitol, Colonial, Court, Liberty, Northern, Rex, Rialto, State, Southern, Victoria and Virginia, all were reported closed.

PARKERSBURG: Water was 12 feet deep in the business section. The local power station was closed. While temporary service was obtained from Fairmont, the theatres were closed. They are the Broadway, Heihle, New Palace, Smoot, Strand and Virginian.

HUNTINGTON: With 15,000 homeless, the business section flooded, theatres reported dark were the Dixie, Fox, Keith, Lyric, Margaret, Mills, Orpheum, Palace, Par, Rialto, Roxy, Strand and State.

STARS BROADCAST FOR FLOOD RELIEF

A benefit radio broadcast for flood relief sufferers, on which the majority of the major studios in Hollywood cooperated by offering their contract players and stars, was heard over the Mutual Broadcasting System network from station KHJ Tuesday night.

Players who took part in the air playlet entitled "The House on the Hill," dealing with a family caught in the flood, were: Jean Hersholt, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs, Smith Ballew, Robert Barratt, Kay Linaker, Nan Bryant and Edith Fellowes.

Jack Schaeffer Dead

Jack Schaeffer, 37, for the last two years treasurer of the Empire theatre, in Newark, died last week in Beth Israel Hospital from influenza. Prior to coming to Newark Mr. Schaeffer was treasurer of the Royale Theatre in New York. He leaves a widow and child.

Complaint Referred to Union

American Federation of Musicians has referred the complaint of the RCA-Victor Company against the Chicago Federation of Musicians' ruling that no member can make recordings after February 1, back to the Chicago Federation.

Trust, Plagiarism Actions in Courts

Eight distributing companies and two Texas circuits, defendants in the Government's action to test the legality of first run contracts made with the Karl Hoblitzelle theatres are scheduled to file answers to the Government's complaint charging restraint of trade and conspiracy on February 1st. The Federal attorneys are attacking contracts which impose admission and double featuring restrictions on subsequent runs which play pictures which have been exhibited at a specified minimum admission in the first runs.

Two suits claiming copyright violation and plagiarism are pending in the courts. The United States district court in New York has ordered Twentieth Century-Fox to submit a bill of particulars in the suit brought by Ray Long and the Richard R. Smith Corporation against the film company. The action asks for an injunction, accounting and damages and is based on a copyright claim on Irvin S. Cobb's book "Down Yonder with Judge Priest and Irvin S. Cobb."

A plagiarism suit asking $2,000,000 damages against RKO which was filed by James Young, writer, in 1933, will be tried in the New York supreme court in February. The action names RKO, RKO Pathe Pictures and Adela Rogers St. John and claims that the picture "What Price Hollywood?" plagiarizes Mr. Young's story "What Price Sex in Hollywood?"

Production Starts on Uruguayan Film

by PAUL BODO

in Montevideo

Ciclolux, new producing company in Montevideo, has started the shooting of the first feature length native picture, "Dos Destinos" ("Two Destinies"), with Juan Echebehere directing. The cast is composed for the most part of Argentine players but the film is designed for the home market.

Cine Metro here will show 18 Twentieth Century-Fox pictures under the terms of an agreement reached in New York. Other Twentieth Century-Fox product will play the Cine Ambassador, a 1,200 seat house which is scheduled to open in March. Delmaur, Ltd., will operate the theatre.

The Estudo Auditorio, former legitimate house owned by SODRE, the official Government broadcasting station, which was operated last year by Gaumont British under lease, is expected to operate in the future as an independent film house. The theatre, one of the largest in the city, seats 1,100.

LEGAL FIGHT OVER CHANCE GAMES TURNS ON THEATRE CORPORATIONS

Hearing on All Arrests Made in Chicago Area Set for February 9; State Law Sought in Indiana

Chance games and giveways continue a major subject of legal contention. Important court fights are being waged over them in Illinois, where Chicago police have made additional arrests of theatre operators, and in Missouri, where a test case is pending in the state supreme court. In New Jersey action has been started against several exhibitors on lottery charges. State legislatures are considering bills aimed at the practice in Indiana, North Carolina, Ohio and Tennessee and municipal authorities are combating the games in Omaha, Houston and Seattle.

The United States court of appeals in Boston this week rejected an application by Bank Night operators for a hearing of an infringement suit on which the court ruled several weeks ago that the Bank Night plan is in the public domain and is not entitled to copyright protection. The decision added, however, that the game is not a lottery.

William V. Daly, assistant corporation counsel of the city of Chicago, announced this week that he would file complaints against corporations operating 122 theatres whose managers or employees have been arrested for distribution of chance game prize money in violation of a city ordinance. Mr. Daly said that the corporations, not the employees, are the real defendants and should be prosecuted. The cases scheduled for court hearing this week, involving 25 theatres, were postponed to February 9th when a hearing on all the arrests made to that date will be held.

Chicago exhibitors say that the recent stopping of chance games by the police department is costing them as much as 20 per cent of the average gross taken in while the games were running. They say that double features have been of no help.

The State Senate of Arkansas has passed a bill to tax theatre chance game awards 25 per cent. The proceeds are to be given to the old age pension fund.

In Americus, Ga., a city court jury this week acquitted J. N. Morgan, manager of the Rylander theatre, of a charge of operating a lottery.

State Law Sought

Aimed directly at Bank Night, a bill to prohibit the operation of lotteries in places where admission is charged has been introduced in the House of Representatives in Indiana by Harry Mutler, operator of the State theatre, Anderson. The bill provides a fine of $50 to $100 for violation to which a jail sentence of six months may be added.

Hearing on the appeal of Jackson County, Mo., authorities from the circuit court in the case of Missouri vs. R. W. McEwan, Bank Night distributor in Missouri and Kansas, has been set by the supreme court for the May term. Judge Marion D. Waltner of the circuit court last summer held that while "we have present the offering of a prize and the award of that prize by chance, this court is of the opinion that the third necessary element, to wit, consideration, is absent."

"GOLDEN GOOSE" NEW CHANCE LURE

Exhibitors are racking their brains to find novel presentations for their chance game offerings, now that the usual methods of conducting the game are beginning to pall on audiences.

In Leesville, La., the manager of the Vernon theatre went back to his nursery days and returned with an idea. Tuesday and Friday nights at the theatre are now "Golden Goose Nights."

Cooperative in Hot Water

The cooperative Bank Night conducted by 25 theatres in Omaha is facing trouble on four fronts. Assistant Attorney General Paul Chaney has announced at Lincoln that he believes that part of the Bank Night plan which permits persons to attend a matinee and be eligible for the $1,000 prize if their names are drawn that night is illegal because it requires the purchase of a ticket.

Mayor Dan Butler of Omaha has instructed City Attorney Seymour Smith to study legal means of stopping Bank Night.

The Lutheran Ministers Association, representing 25 churches, has asked the City Council to stop Bank Night or move it to some other night than Wednesday during Lent. The Omaha Ministerial Union has passed a resolution backing the Lutherans in their demand.

The Nebraska attorney general, Richard C. Hunter, has assigned one of his staff to gather evidence on chance games which he believes are conducted in violation of the lottery laws.

Attorney Brings Suits

Suits brought against users of giveaway games in New Jersey under an old "common informer" statute will be continued by Max J. Berlin, an attorney, in spite of an announcement that Roy H. Decker, said to be his principal, had withdrawn. Mr. Decker was reported as the complainant in 20 suits against motion picture theatres, fraternal societies and churches in connection with Bank Nights, bingo parties and other chance games. In a statement to the press this week he disclaimed further interest in the litigation and placed responsibility for the suits on Mr. Berlin. The attorney said that a group of mercahnts is sponsoring the action.

An order temporarily restraining Bergen County Prosecutor John J. Breslin from taking action against Bank Night and chance games being conducted in theatres has been obtained from Advisory Master N. Demarest Campbell by Harold Blumenthal, owner of the Ritz theatre, Garfield. Several weeks ago Mr. Breslin issued an ultimatum giving theatre owners until January 15th to put a stop to the giveaways, maintaining that the games are lotteries.

Old "Common Informer" Statute Invoked in New Jersey; Tax on Chance Games Proposed in North Carolina

The latest development of the chance games, Giant Bank Night, is being adopted by the circuits. In the New York metropolitan area an intercity hookup with six master switchboards on the stage of the Metropolitan in Brooklyn and operators on the stages of 55 houses in the Loew circuit will be used to make known the winners of the circuit's first two-day, all-day Bank Night on February 10th. The prizes will total $3,500 in cash, $1,500 for the first and $1,000 each for the second and third.

Tax on Games Asked

Representative Withrow of Rutherford, N. C., has anounced that he will introduce a bill in the North Carolina state legislature calling for a tax upon Bank Night or Jack Pot Night at theatres.

In Ohio, Representative Carl L. Wintzler of Wapakoneta has introduced a measure in the state legislature which would prohibit merchandise giveaways based on chance with $100 to $1,000 fines and jail terms up to six months for each violation.

Philadelphia police, acting on an order of Mayor Wilson, Tuesday evening forced 75 neighborhood theatre managers to suspend the games.

The Memphis and Shelby County delegation to the Tennessee state legislature is expected to introduce measures outlawing games of chance in theatres and drawings for prizes in stores. City authorities in Memphis ordered arrests of theatre operators using the games but found that the giveaways were within the law.

Bank Night has been discontinued in two theatres in Lufkin, Texas, by the Jefferson Amusement Company, after a warning by County Attorney W. J. Townsend that the managers would be prosecuted for operating lotteries unless the practice was stopped.

In Houston, City Fire Marshal Coull has threatened to file suit against all theatres holding Bank Night unless they obey the city ordinances against blocking aisles and exits.

Bank Night and Sweepstakes have been prohibited in Seattle theatres under an edict promulgated by Prosecuting Attorney B. Gray Warner who called the games lotteries. Mel Reid, owner of the New Gorge theatre in Bingen, Wash., has been arrested for operating a Bank Night program after having been warned frequently to stop.

Bingo has been ruled a lottery by the Postoffice Department.

Columbia Pictures corporation paid Harry Cohn $182,040 and Jack Cohn $104,260 as salaries during the last fiscal year, according to report of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

RECEIPTS $204,272,000 IN 19 STATES IN 1935

Census Bureau Statistics Show Amusements in 33 States Grossed Total of $282,625,000

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Additional reports from the Federal Census Bureau on the receipts of places of amusement this week included statistics showing that in 19 states and the District of Columbia, 13,356 places of amusement had receipts aggregating $204,272,000 in 1935, gave employment to an average of 48,975 persons and paid out in wages and salaries $44,852,000.

The bureau now has reported on 33 states and the District of Columbia, covering 17,841 establishments with receipts of $282,625,000, giving employment in 1935 to an average of 67,736 persons and having an aggregate payroll for the year of $62,172,000. Previous reports covered the six New England states and eight states in the Rocky Mountain region.

The reports cover all types of enterprises including motion picture and other theatres, circuses and shows, amusement parks, dance halls, bowling alleys and other establishments.

Statistics for the states reported this week were summarized as follows:

California: 2,618 establishments with receipts of $66,686,000; 2,196 proprietors and firm members; 13,548 employees; annual payroll, $14,841,000 of which $1,846,000 was for part-time work.

Washington: 596 establishments with receipts of $9,569,000; 472 firm members and proprietors; 2,519 employees; annual payroll, $2,024,000 of which $331,000 was for part-time work.

Florida: 594 establishments with receipts of $11,349,000; 463 proprietors and firm members and 2,426 employees; aggregate payroll, $2,703,000 of which $386,000 was for part-time employment.

Maryland: 437 establishments with receipts of $10,826,000; 329 proprietors and firm members and 2,250 employees; aggregate payroll, $2,399,000 of which $338,000 was for part-time work.

Virginia: 617 establishments with receipts of $8,102,000; 443 proprietors and firm members and 2,173 employees; aggregate payroll, $1,807,000 of which $131,000 was for part-time work.

District of Columbia: 156 establishments with receipts of $7,915,000; 99 proprietors and firm members and 1,253 employees; aggregate payroll, $1,919,000 of which $82,000 was for part-time work.

North Carolina: 740 establishments with receipts of $7,362,000; 586 proprietors and firm members and 2,073 employees; aggregate payroll, $1,657,000 of which $100,000 was for part-time work.

Oregon: 390 establishments with receipts of $5,933,000; 314 proprietors and firm members and 1,476 employees; aggregate payroll, $1,318,000 of which $196,000 was for part-time work.

Georgia: 671 establishments with receipts of $5,248,000; 535 proprietors and firm members and 1,982 employees; aggregate payroll, $1,258,000 of which $181,000 was for part-time work.

West Virginia: 390 establishments with receipts of $4,915,000; 343 proprietors and firm members and 1,265 employees; aggregate payroll, $1,012,000 of which $122,000 was for part-time work.

South Carolina: 372 establishments with receipts of $3,088,000; 241 proprietors and firm members and 964 employees; aggregate payroll, $630,000 of which $33,000 was for part-time work.

Delaware: 70 establishments with receipts of $1,083,000; 58 proprietors and firm members and 262 employees; aggregate payroll, $225,000 of which $17,000 was for part-time work.

Statistics for the eight south central states were:

Alabama: 495 establishments with receipts of $4,539,000; 401 firm members and proprietors; 1,260 employees; annual payroll, $927,000 of which $73,000 was for part-time work.

Kentucky: 614 establishments with receipts of $7,815,000; 509 firm members and proprietors; 1,987 employees; annual payroll, $1,796,000 of which $248,000 was for part-time work.

Mississippi: 300 establishments with receipts of $1,303,000; 285 proprietors and firm members; 502 employees; annual payroll, $236,000 of which $13,000 was for part-time work.

Tennessee: 670 establishments with receipts of $7,102,000; 551 proprietors and firm members; 1,846 employees; annual payroll, $1,541,000 of which $139,000 was for part-time work.

Arkansas: 448 establishments with receipts of $3,756,000; 382 proprietors and firm members; 961 employees; annual payroll, $706,000 of which $128,000 was for part-time work.

Louisiana: 453 establishments with receipts of $4,974,000; 394 proprietors and firm members; 1,747 employees; annual payroll, $1,081,000 of which $216,000 was for part-time work.

Oklahoma: 830 establishments with receipts of $8,255,000; 710 proprietors and firm members; 2,341 employees; annual payroll, $1,911,000 of which $168,000 was for part-time work.

Texas: 1,895 establishments with receipts of $24,452,000; 1,619 proprietors and firm members; 6,140 employees; annual payroll, $4,861,000 of which $513,000 was for part-time work.

Academy Starts Award Selection

The annual Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science awards will be made from 382 features originating in the major studios. A special committee of 50 Academy members are currently studying these films to select the best ten and other groups are considering achievements in the other award classifications.

The general committee held its first meeting on Monday on the producing, acting, directing and writing awards. Nominations will be by secret ballot and the entire membership will cast the final ballot.

Studio technical department heads, studio executives and equipment manufacturing companies have been requested to submit nominations for the award for scientific or technical achievement. Nominations must be for a device, method, formula, discovery or invention of outstanding importance which had been employed in motion picture production during 1936. Carl Dreher heads the Board of Judges for this award.

Final awards in all classifications will be announced at the annual Academy dinner on March 4th.

Fox West Coast Cleared in Case In Federal Court

The Fox West Coast receivership case in which the circuit was charged with fraud in obtaining its decree is believed by attorneys to have been effectively closed by the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals in San Francisco last week.

After four years of intensive legal war the T. L. Tally and Corbar Corporation plea that the court reverse the decision of a lower court was refused by Federal Judges Curtis D. Wilbur, Bert Haney and Francis Garrecht. William H. Neblett, Tally and Corbar attorney, was severely criticized in the court's decision. Charges of fraud, falsification of financial records, criminal conspiracy and monopoly had been fired by Mr. Neblett at half a dozen film corporations and individuals, among them Fox Film Corporation, Wesco Corporation, Twentieth Century-Fox, National Theatres, Fox West Coast and Charles P. Skouras.

The San Francisco appeals court held that no fraud or conspiracy was committed in obtaining the original decree of receivership in 1933. Mr. Neblett charged the theatre men with conspiring to buy back their own property at a greatly decreased valuation while the properties were actually solvent and not eligible for receivership. The Tally and Corbar claim to damages because their theatre leases had been canceled following the receivership was specifically denied. The court ruled that they had no standing as creditors because they had accepted consideration in full settlement of their claims shortly after the original order.

Technically Mr. Neblett may still ask that the United States supreme court hear an appeal but the high court is empowered to refuse such hearing and California attorneys believe that such an appeal would be rejected.

Hungarian Booking Pool Is Attacked

by ENDRE HEVESI
in Budapest

The members of the Hungarian Distributors' Union are planning a cartel in order to protect their booking interests, to be directed chiefly against the small exhibitors.

Neighborhood theatre owners recently adopted a form of collective buying, designating one of their number to negotiate terms for them all, thus obtaining lower prices. The distributors are determined to end the system and the members of the Union will agree to sell their product to only one exhibitor at a time.

The Exhibitors' Union, planning to fight the distributors, has started a counter action by seeking to prevent the distributors from obtaining the necessary Governmental permission for the formation of the proposed cartel, contending it would be detrimental to exhibitors.

John E. Kennebeck Dies in Australia

John E. Kennebeck, Paramount managing director for Australia and New Zealand, died in Sydney last Saturday from complications resulting from an appendectomy which was performed on Wednesday. He is survived by his wife and two children.

Mr. Kennebeck, who was 39 years old, climaxed a brilliant Paramount career in 1934 when he was appointed to the managing directorship in Australia. Leaving the field of journalism in Omaha, where he was a reporter on the Omaha Bee, the young Nebraskan joined Paramount as an exploiteer on the staff of Claude Saunders and was assigned to the company's exchange in Omaha in 1922. In 1923 he was transferred to Australia to the staff of John W. Hicks, Jr. He was successful in the building of public good will and became personally popular with the public and with his fellow workers.

His service under Mr. Hicks was continued when William J. Clark was appointed to the managing directorship following the return of Mr. Hicks to America, and when Mr. Clark resigned, the still young exploiteer was appointed to the post.

Again he distinguished himself with his sales and personnel policies. He was appointed president of the American Society of Australia and because of his private work on behalf of the Catholic Church he was made a Papal Knight. This honor was to have been conferred on him on a planned visit this year to his home city, Omaha.

International Radio Broadcasts Awards

The presentation of awards by the New York newspaper screen critics for best performances, the best film, and the best foreign film of 1936 was made this week in the Rainbow Room at Rockefeller Center, New York. The ceremonies were broadcast over the NBC blue network. A cocktail party with more than 300 attending preceded the presentation.

William Boehnel, World Telegram critic, presided at the ceremony and introduced Richard Watts, Jr., of the Herald-Tribune. Mr. Watts presented the award for the best masculine performance to Walter Huston for his role in "Dodsworth." The award for "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" as the best picture of the year was presented to Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia and the certificate for "Carnival in Flanders," voted best foreign picture, was given to W. H. Van Beverin, executive of American Tobis. The program then switched to Hollywood where Sidney Skolsky of the Daily News introduced Samuel Goldwyn, Harry Cohn, Luise Rainer, Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur and Reuben Mamoulian. Mr. Cooper and Miss Arthur did brief scenes from "Deeds."

Following the coast presentations the network spanned the Atlantic and, from London, members of the cast of "Carnival in Flanders" did a scene from that picture.

16 WPA FILMS COST REPORTED $101,055

Administrator Hopkins Submits Data to House Appropriations Committee; Titles Are Given

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Sixteen motion pictures, ranging in length from 405 to 1,722 feet, have been produced for the Works Progress Administration at a cost of $101,055.56, it was disclosed this week with publication of the testimony of Harry Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, before the House appropriations committee during consideration of legislation providing funds to carry the WPA through the remainder of the current fiscal year.

That there has ever been any difficulty with the General Accounting Office in making expenditures for film propaganda was denied by Mr. Hopkins in response to a question by Representative Taber (Rep.) of New York, who sought to develop the truth of rumors that the GAO had killed the initial plans of the WPA for the production of pictures.

Motion pictures and radio have represented about 50 per cent of the WPA's total expenditures for "information," it was shown. In addition to the more than $100,000 spent for film productions, $43,106.15 was spent for radio, these figures being up to the end of last November, and at the present time four persons with annual salaries aggregating $16,000 are employed on pictures and radio in the WPA information service.

The pictures produced for the WPA so far have been as follows, the committee was informed: "A Better New York State," 1,135 feet; "A Better New York City," 781 feet; "A Better New Jersey," 771 feet; "A Better Pennsylvania," 876 feet; "A Better Massachusetts," 953 feet; "A Better Ohio," 802 feet; "A Better Michigan," 755 feet; "A Better West Virgina," 777 feet; "A Better Illinois," 831 feet; "A Better Chicago," 781 feet; "A Better Minnesota," 905 feet; "A Better Missouri," 876 feet; "Hands" (a film showing the economic distribution of the WPA dollar), 405 feet; "Work Pays America" (presenting typical WPA operations throughout the Nation), 1,554 feet; "Rain for the Earth" (a newsreel showing the operations of WPA in drought-stricken states), 1,722 feet, and "We Work Again" (typical projects on which colored WPA workers are employed), 1,408 feet.

Contract Not Questioned

"In reply to the question as to whether any difficulty was encountered with the General Accounting Office in connection with the manufacture of the films listed above," it was declared in a formal statement filed with the committee by Mr. Hopkins, outlining the motion picture activities of his organization, "it may be stated that no difficulty was encountered. The contract has not been questioned, and all vouchers presented have been approved for payment.

"A work relief project to provide employment for needy motion-picture cameramen was conducted for a short time in the early days of the Works Progress Administration. The project was small, employing at its maximum only four cameramen. The work consisted of taking a series of pictures to show progress on important projects. This project was discontinued early in 1936, and all the film produced under it has been retained for record purchases as archives material. No trouble was experienced with the General Accounting Office in setting up this project, although many details had to be worked out with that office concerning it."

The WPA, it was said, has received no compensation of any kind for the distribution of any of its films, which have been added to the normal programs of theatres without extra cost to either patrons or the Government. No central distributing agency has been set up for the distribution of the pictures, but they have been sent to the state administrators, "who were responsible for distribution to theatres in their states in any convenient and appropriate manner."

12,500 Employed at Peak

The Federal Theatre Project also was taken up for discussion, it being shown that at the peak of employment nearly 12,500 professionals were employed and at the end of last year 11,496 actors, directors, scenic and costume designers, stage managers, carpenters, electricians, stage hands, property men, play readers, dramatists, box office men and others were employed in manning and maintaining 100 operating or performing companies in 28 states, appearing before audiences that, during the last four months of 1936, averaged 1,214,000 persons per month.

Since the Federal Theatre Project as such took over the drama units that had been set up under the Civil Works Administration and the Emergency Relief Administration, federal companies, from December 2, 1935, to December 31, 1936, gave a total of 28,191 stage performances to a total recorded audience of approximately 15,000,000 persons.

"This Federal theatre audience is for the most part a new audience," it was declared. "It represents rural communities, isolated camps, small towns, even cities that had long been isolated from the living theatre. At the beginning of the project, a survey of the high schools in New York City disclosed, for instance, that only one high school pupil in 30 had ever seen a play with living actors.

Hutchinson Returns From World Tour

Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, returned to New York this week from a six-months tour of his company's foreign offices. He was accompanied by F. L. Harley, managing director of the organization in England.

EXHIBITORS IN 5 STATES FACE INCREASE IN TAXES

Growing Stack of "Must" Bills Points to Little, If Any, Federal Film Action

That Congress will not have time for consideration of legislation directly concerning the motion picture industry is indicated by the growing stack of "must" measures. The industry is threatened, however by new taxes or increases in present levies in Colorado, Georgia, Kansas, Maryland and Missouri, and it is believed that other state legislatures will be asked to approve various bills affecting the amusement business. Municipal governing bodies also are considering ordinances concerning censorship bodies, regulation of signs, taxes and other measures affecting theatres.

Submission by President Roosevelt of the first few of a long series of measures on which prompt action is desired is believed in Congressional circles to indicate that there will be little time available during the session for consideration of matters not on the Administration program. Members of the House Committee on interstate and foreign commerce, in charge of block booking legislation and many other matters, said this week that legislation was piling up so fast that it was doubtful if time could be found for anything but bills on the "must" agenda.

The attention of Congress at the present time is centered upon the President's plan for reorganization of the executive branch of the Government, involving the absorption by Cabinet departments of all independent agencies. Two new departments would be created, one of which, the Department of Social Welfare, would probably take over all the motion picture activities of the various departments and agencies.

Copyright Bill Filed

The number of measures which would affect the motion picture industry, directly or indirectly, was increased in the last week by submission of copyright legislation by Representatives Sol Bloom of New York and Guy L. Moser of Pennsylvania.

The bill would give to the copyright owner the exclusive right to exhibit the work if it is a film, or to communicate it by broadcasts, television or other means.

Inclusion in the first deficiency appropriation bill, soon to be reported, of $350,000 for the use of the Federal Communications Commission in prosecuting its investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, was asked last week by President Roosevelt in a letter to Speaker Bankhead of the House.

Hearings on the O'Mahoney bill providing for the licensing of corporations engaged in interstate commerce will be announced in the near future, it is indicated. Of particular interest to the screen industry and its investors is a provision that all officers and directors must be holders of stock in the corporation for which they serve.

Three bills applying to industry in general, drafted by the National Council for Industrial Progress, have been sent to the President for consideration. One authorizes loans for small enterprises, another sets up a National Economic Advisory Council to study sources of revenue and its expenditure, and the third covers minimum wages, maximum working hours and fair trade practices.

LEGISLATORS INSURE THEIR FREE PASSES

About three and a half minutes were required in the South Carolina House of Representatives to kill a bill prohibiting theatres and motion picture houses from giving free passes to certain groups, members of the general assembly among them. The bill was introduced by J. D. Witherspoon of Laurens. It was read once and sent to the judiciary committee. The committee made an unfavorable report on the measure, the report was adopted by the House and the measure thereby rejected.

To make certain a parliamentary "strangler" was applied which makes further consideration impossible unless unanimous consent of the House is given.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue ruled this week that employers who desire to pay their employees' share of the social security taxes without deducting the amounts from the pay envelopes may do so without considering the taxes thus absorbed as additional compensation.

A measure to ban block booking of films has been introduced in the California legislature by Assemblyman Voight, who is preparing a bill providing for the separation of production and exhibition. Other legislation in the state affecting the motion picture industry is expected to include a film footage tax bill, the prohibition of the sale of tickets when only standing room is available, and an anti-Bank Night bill.

In Colorado exhibitors are organizing opposition to a proposal, now before the legislature in Denver, for a 20 per cent tax on amusement tickets. Theatre men are backing another bill, now before the House, which would prohibit mental and physical endurance tests that extend more than 24 hours.

Georgia legislators are considering a gross receipts tax measure and are expected to study the possibilities of legalizing pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog races.

With the state reporting unprecedented needs for increased revenue, theatre men in Kansas face the dilemma of either supporting a sales tax or running the risk of facing special amusement taxes.

In Louisiana theatres are awaiting the effect of an order issued by the state tax commissioner to all local assessors to increase the assessment on all commercial and industrial property up to 10 per cent over last year.

In his message to the legislature Governor Harry W. Nice of Maryland urged extension of the one per cent gross receipts tax on admissions. The levy is one of several special tax measures which will expire on March 31st and which were put into effect to raise funds for relief.

A bill regulating the admission of minors to motion picture theatres has been filed in the Massachusetts legislature. The measure would bar children from theatres after 7 P. M. on week days unless they are chaperoned and would prohibit children under the age of 16 from Sunday performances.

Governor Lloyd Crow Stark's bill to increase the Missouri sales tax from one to two per cent has been introduced in the Missouri legislature. It includes a provision making the levy one cent on sales between nine and 51 cents and two cents on sales above 50 cents. Adoption of the bill would force theatres to increase admissions one cent.

Three bills affecting theatres have been introduced in the Pennsylvania legislature. One provides that all houses seating 300 or more be equipped with an asbestos or steel curtain. Another requires the attendance in projection booths of as many licensed projectionists as there are machines. The third, a labor bill, requires that projectionists be allowed at least one day of rest a week.

In Washington the theatre industry faces new competition from two sources. One group of legislators is attempting to legalize dog racing with pari-mutuel betting and another would legalize dart games, Bingo and Lotto, which are now banned.

Municipal legislatures in several cities are considering measures which affect theatres. In Birmingham, Ala., amusement supervision will be extended and tightened rather than relaxed by the new department of amusement supervision which the city council proposes to create. The department will have authority over theatres, circuses, fairs, carnivals, night clubs and other entertainments.

An amendment to the Wilmington, Del., building code to permit signs, advertising and ornamentation on marquees, has been given first and second readings by the board of directors of the street and sewer department.

St. Louis Censorship Move

The Savannah, Ga., city council has approved an ordinance reducing the tax on admissions to two per cent of each ticket and fixing a minimum levy of one cent. The new law replaces a ten per cent gross receipts tax which was placed in effect January 1st.

Theatre managers in Detroit are fighting a city ordinance which would eliminate all canopies and marquees in the city.

The St. Louis Mo., board of aldermen is scheduled to vote on a bill creating a city board of motion picture censors. Distributors of film would be called upon to pay a city tax of one cent for each foot of film inspected.

An ordinance which would ban smoking in theatres, with certain exceptions, has been placed before the New York Board of Aldermen.

Opposition to a proposed increase in theatre license fees in Milwaukee, Wis., was voiced before a Common Council committee hearing by B. J. Miller, representing the circuits, and R. A. Tesch, business manager for the Independent Theatres Protective Association. The exhibitors contend that the present flat $30 annual fee is sufficient to finance the city motion picture commission. The new plan would provide a fee ranging from $30 to $100 a year, depending on the seating capacity.

Sunday Openings Permitted

A measure to legalize Sunday shows in all municipalities in Jefferson County, Ala., has been passed by the state legislature and is awaiting the Governor's signature. The bill will permit operation of theatres in Leeds and Tarrant. Birmingham, also in the county, already has Sunday films.

Officials of Oakland, Md., are planning to ask the legislature to authorize a referendum on Sunday shows. In Alabama the state legislators have been given a bill to legalize the showings in Fort Payne.

The town council of Arnold, Neb., acceding to a petition signed by 200 citizens, has repealed the law banning Sunday shows. In Waynesboro, Va., a referendum on the question resulted in a vote of 344 to 294 in favor of the theatres.

Bills have been passed by the lower house of the North Carolina legislature to permit the operation of theatres on Sundays in Cherokee county.

Repeal of a city ordinance in Greenwood, Miss., prohibiting Sunday shows has been denied by authorities in spite of a petition.

The Pickford Plans

Following her wedding and return from Europe, Mary Pickford intends to go into active production again. With definite and final plans not to be announced until next June, Miss Pickford intends to organize a stock company of young and promising players. Her plan is unique. She does not intend to sign up established name players. Rather the idea calls for the rounding up of newcomers to the screen who give evidence of possessing the talents and abilities presaging future stardom.

The company will not be large. It probably never will include more than six people, with present indications pointing to a roster of three or four. When she returns to production Miss Pickford will not only use her contract players in her own pictures, but, adapting the practice established by Walter Wanger, will loan them out to other companies.

The first player signed to a Pickford contract is Barry Fitzgerald, one time member of the Abbey Players of Dublin, Ireland, who is currently appearing in Radio's "The Plough and the Stars."

BARRY FITZGERALD signs a long term contract as the first member of a screen stock company Mary Pickford will form upon her return from Europe in the Spring.

14 Start; 7 Finish

New production zoomed up sharply during the past week as fourteen pictures started. Warners, embarking upon one of the most extensive production splurges in years, put five films in the work. Universal started three, Columbia and 20th Century-Fox two each and Republic and Radio one respectively. Twentieth Century-Fox dominated the finished work by completing three as Warners checked in two and MGM and Republic one each. Diversity is the keynote of both the new and completed work. Films on both schedules include dramas, comedies, topicals, musicals and spectacles.

Universal Starts Three

Warner's most important pictures undoubtedly are "Kid Gallahad" and "The Singing Marine." The first brings Edward G. Robinson and Bette Davis back to the screen after a prolonged absence. Principal supports are Humphrey Bogart, Wayne Norris, Mary McGuire and Joe Cunningham. Michael Curtiz is directing. Dick Powell and Doris Weston are the stars of the musical, "The Singing Marine." Support includes Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Jessie Ralph, Lee Dixon, Marsha Ralston, Veda Ann Borg, and Jane Wyman. Ray Enright is the director. In "Talent Scout," a topical comedy romance, Donald Woods, Jean Madden, Rosalind Marquis, Fred Lawrence, David Carlyle, Charles Halton and Joseph Crehan will be seen. Louis King directs. Cast for "Public Wedding," a topical comedy, are Marie Wilson, Jane Wyman, William Hoppel, Dick Purcell, Raymond Hatton, Berton Churchill and Eddie Acuff. William Clemens is directing. Last picture on the new schedule, "Dance Charlie Dance," comedy with music, features Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir, Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Charles Foy, James Robbins, Gordon Hart, Hugh O'Connell, Joseph Crehan and Veda Ann Borg. Frank McDonald is directing.

Heading the list of Universal's starters is "The Stones Cry Out," dramatic romance. It will feature Nan Grey, Judith Barrett and John Howard with Robert Wilcox, Michael Fitzmaurice, Scott Kolk, Robert Spencer, Michael Loring and Henry Hunter. Several times postponed, "Night Key," mystery drama, finally got under way. With Lloyd Corrigan directing, it will feature Boris Karloff, Jean Rogers, Warren Hull and David Oliver. The third new picture, "Short Haul," a Trem Carr production which Arthur Lubin is directing, will present Louise Lattimer, Emerson Treacy, Grace Goodall, LeRoy Mason, Theodore Von Eltz, Olaf Hytton, Roger Imhoff and Harry Allen.

At Columbia, "Racing Luck," action drama, was the first picture to start. The cast lists Charles Quigley, Dorothy Wilson, Eddie Nugent, Patricia Farr, Gene Morgan, John Gallaudet, Gordon Elliott and Arthur Aylesworth. D. Ross Lederman is directing. The companion picture is "A New Trail Ahead," western, which features Charles Starrett, Peggy Stratford, Ed LeSaint, Charles Middleton, Hank Ball and Art Mix. Leon Barsha is the director.

"Wee Willie Winkie," a Rudyard Kipling story, is the front runner at 20th Century-Fox. Shirley Temple is starred with Victor McLaglen, June Lang, C. Aubrey Smith, Cesar Romero, Michael Whalen, Douglas Scott and Constance Collier. Its second film, "Charlie Chan at the Olympics," again features Warner Oland with Pauline Moore, Keye Luke, Katherine DeMille and C. Henry Gordon. H. Bruce Humberstone is directing.

Republic began work on "Trail of Vengeance," western drama. Johnny Mack Brown and Iris Meredith are the leads. Support includes Warner Richmond, Earle Hodgins, Karl Hackett, Frank LaRue, Frank Ellis, Lew Meehan and Frank Ball. Sam Newfield is directing.

Radio's contribution to the new work is "The Outcast of Poker Flat," an adaptation of a Bret Harte story. The cast which Christy Cabanne directs includes Preston Foster, Jean Muir, Margaret Irving, Cy Jenks, Harry Mayo, Van Heflin, Virginia Weidler, Richard Lane, Barbara Pepper and Frank M. Thomas.

Seven Films Completed

The three pictures completed by 20th Century-Fox appear to be potentially in the big feature class. "On the Avenue," a romance with music, teams Dick Powell and Madeliene Carroll in the leads with Alice Faye, the Ritz Brothers, Alan Mowbray, George Barbier, Shirley Deane, Cora Witherspoon, Paul Gerritts, Siegfried Rumann, Douglas Wood, Alex Pollard, William Edritt and Stepin Fetchit. Roy Del Ruth directed. "Nancy Steele Is Missing," drama, features Victor McLaglen with Walter Connolly, Peter Lorre, June Lang, Robert Kent, Shirley Deane, Frank Conroy, George Taylor, Arthur Hohl, June Harrington, Kane Richmond, Margaret Fielding, DeWitt Jennings, Allen Cavan, George Chandler and Eric Wilton. George Marshall directed. The third feature, "Time Out for Romance," will present Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen, Joan Davis, Bennie Bartlett, Andrew Tombes, William Demarest, Lelah Tyler, Chick Chandler, Paul Stanton, Vernon Steele, George Chandler, Georgia Caine, Edward Keane and Inez Courtney. Malcolm St. Clair directed.

At Warners "Call It a Day" and "The Go Getter" finished. The first will present Ian Hunter, Olivia De Havilland, Frieda Inescourt, Roland Young, Alice Brady, Bonita Granville, Peter Willes, Una O'Connor, Beryl Mercer and Elsa Buchanan. Archie Mayo directed. Cast in "The Go Getter" are George Brent, Anita Louise, Charles Winninger, Henry O'Neill, John Eldredge, Craig Reynolds, Carlyle Moore, Jr. and Myrtle Stedman. Busby Berkeley directed.

After several months in the work, during which production was held up many times, "Maytime" was finally completed at MGM. A musical romance, it again teams Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. Other names in the cast are John Barrymore, Lynne Carver, Herman Bing, Russell Hicks, Charles Judels, Guy Bates Post and Tom Brown. Robert Z. Leonard directed.

Freeze-Out

Southern California's unprecedented cold wave and the battle to save the $100,000,000 citrus crop is playing havoc with theatre business. With a pall of thick black smoke covering the orange and lemon raising belt from San Diego on the south to Santa Barbara on the north and as far east as San Bernardino, and the entire populace of the area mobilized to tend the smudge pots in the groves, theatre managers cannot muster a corporal's guard into their houses, no matter what the attraction.

From Riverside, Pomona, Ontario, Orange, Whittier, Santa Ana, Ventura, Santa Paula and Ojai in the heart of the orange empire come reports of deserted houses. Even in Pasadena and Glendale theatre attendance has been more than cut in half.

WARNER REPORT SHOWS INCREASED NET PROFIT

General Theatres Equipment Dividend Expected; Paramount Received Nonrecurring Income

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and subsidiaries revealed in a report made public January 22nd and covering the 13 weeks ending November 26, 1936, a net operating profit of $2,047,936 after amortization, depreciation, normal federal income taxes and all charges but without provision for surtaxes on undistributed earnings.

This compares with a net operating profit of $1,031,316 for the corresponding period of 1935 after equivalent deductions. During the 1936 period $92,725, representing discount realized on redemption of bonds of subsidiary companies, was credited directly to deficit account.

The profit reported is equal to $19.86 each on 103,107 shares of preferred stock outstanding on November 28, 1936, on which dividend arrears as of December 31 were $18.28½ a share. After allowance for current dividend requirements on the preferred stock the net profit was equal to 52 cents each on 3,701,090 shares of common stock outstanding, inclusive of that held in the company treasury.

Assets as of November 29 amounted to $24,245,656 and current liabilities were listed at $20,672,021. Optional 6 per cent convertible debentures series due in 1939 totalled $32,000,000, the company holding $529,000 of these in its treasury. A net amount of $771,000 of these debenture obligations, representing the $1,300,000 purchase fund requirement due within a year less debentures held in the treasury, was included under current liabilities.

Discuss New Financing

Plans for new financing by means of new common stock are under discussion by Warner executives and a banking group understood to be headed by Hayden, Stone and company. The step in contemplation would consist of offering to present stockholders rights to subscribe to 960,000 shares of new common stock in the ratio of one new share for four shares now held.

The plan under advisement is said to include consideration of measures to refund the company's bonds and possibly also its preferred stock. Subscription price of the new stock is expected to be in the neighborhood of $12.50 a share, depending on conditions at the time when actual offering is made.

Purpose of the new financing is given as the acquirement of additional working capital for increased production and other corporate purposes.

GTE Earnings Up

Earnings of General Theatres Equipment corporation for 1936 are reported as $1,450,000, equal to $2.70 a share on stock outstanding. During the year the company received from the 185,600 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox stock which it holds dividends of $452,670 and paid off to the Chase National Bank a loan of $2,000,000.

Increased rehabilitation activity in theatres throughout the country are regarded as importantly instrumental in the improved showing made by General Theatres Equipment corporation.

Nonrecurring income of $600,000, resultant from cancellation of a "buy or sell" agreement with one of its theatre operating partners, was included in the report of Paramount Pictures corporation for the final quarter of 1936 showing earnings in excess of $3,000,000.

Orpheum Holders Ask Recognizing

Preferred stockholders of the Orpheum circuit have filed petitions with Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn which seek to put Orpheum in reorganization under Section 77-B and ask that RKO's offer of $700,000 for the assets of the circuit be rejected.

The referee set January 29th for the hearing of the petitions and adjourned to the same date the meeting of Orpheum creditors to hear the report of appraisers and act on the RKO offer to buy Orpheum assets.

Provision has been made in the RKO proceedings for the reorganization of any RKO subsidiary. In the event the Orpheum stockholders petition to remove the company from receivership for reorganization under Section 77-B is granted, the stockholders would have a participation in the proceedings which they do not have under the receivership.

Sound Apparatus Ruled Tax Exempt

A decision in Washington by D. S. Bliss, deputy commissioner in the Treasury Department, this week definitely exempts amplifiers and loud speakers used in theatre sound systems and public address systems from the 5 per cent manufacturers excise tax. The ruling was in adjustment of a claim for abatement requested by the Sales On Sound Corporation of New York in a test case which has been pending since October, 1934. SOS Corporation's apparatus is similar in construction to devices employed by most other sound equipment manufacturers.

The claim was allowed on the ground that the amplifiers and speakers in question are not suitable for use on or in connection with radio receiving sets.

Mrs. Florence Cron Dead

Mrs. Florence Cron, mother of James A. Cron, advertising manager of Motion Picture Daily, died on Monday evening of a paralytic stroke. She was 80. The funeral was to be in Cedar Rapids, Ia., on Friday. Another son, Louis, survives.

Marie Prevost, Pioneer Player, Is Found Dead

Marie Prevost, found dead in her Hollywood apartment January 23rd under circumstances indicating impoverishment, was a member of that colorful company, the Mack Sennett Bathing Beauties, from whose ranks rose to fame and varying fortune many stars of major accountability for the box office history of the 1920's. Like all but a few of them, she passed out of prime popularity with the coming of sound pictures.

Born in Sarnia, Ontario, 38 years ago, Marie Bickford Gunn was employed as a stenographer in Los Angeles when Ford Sterling, directing a Mack Sennett comedy, picked her out of a crowd of onlookers to play a part in the picture. She became a member of the then famous beauty brigade which included Gloria Swanson, Mabel Normand, Bebe Daniels and Phyllis Haver, at a wage variously quoted between $3 a day and $40 a week. She took the name, Prevost, from her stepfather.

With the advent of the flapper and the emphasis of picture producers upon that type of personality Miss Prevost moved up quickly into stellar rank. She was married in 1924 to Kenneth Harlan, at which time was disclosed the fact of her marriage to Gerke in 1918 and her divorce from him in 1923, both continuing in featured roles between then and their separation in 1929. A sister, Peggy Prevost, briefly known to screen audiences several years ago, is the only known surviving relative.

Miss Prevost's first feature production was "The Ol' Swimming Hole," a Charles Ray vehicle, and this led to other important engagements. Among the pictures in which she appeared were "The Dark Swan" and "The Marriage Circle," for Ernst Lubitsch, "Up in Mabel's Room," "Almost a Lady," "For Wives Only," "Man Bait," "Getting Gertie's Garter," "The Night Bride," "The Girl in the Pullman," "On to Reno," "Blonde for a Night," "Parole Girl," "Only Yesterday," "Hands Across the Table" and "The Lover of Camille."

With the passage of time the actress came to accept less prominently featured roles and recently has appeared in bits. She is reported to have suffered a nervous breakdown after signing her last contract with Warner Brothers and had been ill for some time before her death. Her last appearance was in a minor role of "Cain and Mabel."

Carpet Company Moves

The main office and warehouse of Hotel and Theatre Carpet Company has moved from 25 West 18th street, New York, to larger quarters, occupying the entire second floor at 427 West 42nd street. A branch office has been opened at 354 West 44th street. Barney Weinger is general sales manager.

Review Board Praises "Legion"

National Board of Review of Motion Pictures last week voted "Black Legion" a "powerful social document and outstanding example of how significant the screen can be in upholding American and human standards of racial and religious tolerance."

Admission Trend Continues Upward; Films Set Marks

Following the trend toward higher admission prices noticeable last year, small but significant increases have been made recently in Boston, Chicago, Cleveland and Kansas City, indicating that a generally higher level will be the rule this year. A further indication of the continuation of the increased attendance, also marked last year, is in the additions to the list of house records broken by the new pictures.

In Boston a general price increase in the first run houses is anticipated as a result of a ten cent increase inaugurated by the Metropolitan. The RKO and Loew houses are expected to follow.

Slightly higher admissions initiated by the Essaness circuit in Chicago have been adopted by other circuits and independents. The increase in most cases is five cents.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors, at a meeting called to discuss the possibility of passing on to the public the recently enacted three per cent gross receipts tax in the form of a one cent admission increase, agreed to adopt the increase provided the policy is approved by all the theatres in the Greater Cleveland area.

The Fox Midwest circuit has advanced admissions five cents at 25 of its 200 theatres in the Kansas City territory. Elimination of bargain nights and an increase in the number of evenings on which top admission is charged in W. D. Fulton's five Kansas City, Mo., houses, has not met with any protest from the public.

The publicity departments of the distributing companies continue to hail new records.

Grand National's "Great Guy" finished its first week at the Criterion, New York, with $30,000, the best gross since the house opened.

"After the Thin Man" broke all first day records at the Fox theatre in San Francisco. After breaking a house record at the Penn in Pittsburgh with $32,000 the picture set a new mark at the Warner in the same city.

Paramount reported that "The Plainsman" doubled the house average on its opening runs in Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Portland, New Haven, Hartford, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Toledo, Scranton, Memphis, Kansas City and San Francisco. The same company's "College Holiday" had the distinction of being the first picture ever to play a first run engagement in three different theatres in the same city, Seattle. The film broke attendance records of the last several years at Loew's Broad in Columbus, Ohio.

The Twentieth Century-Fox musical, "One in a Million," was the 11th of 450 pictures to remain for three weeks at the Roxy, New York. In its first 11 days at the house the picture had an attendance of 238,886, or a capacity audience for every one of the screenings. The same company's "Lloyd's of London" broke all opening day and six day records in the history of Toronto's Uptown theatre.

All previous records for the United Artists theatre in San Francisco for attendance and gross receipts were broken for the first three days of "Garden of Allah."

Warner Brothers' "Gold Diggers of 1937" set a new mark for attendance at the Michigan, Detroit.

Chancellor Joshua O. Wolcott in chancery court at Wilmington this week adjourned until February 24th the hearing in the suit of Gordon Burt Affleck against General Theatres Equipment, Inc., on application of the reorganization committee of the corporation.

Universal To Launch Ad Campaign for "Town"

The New Universal is launching a national advertising campaign for "Top of the Town," designed to impress every one of the nation's 120,000,000 population. A series of full-page ads will appear in the Saturday Evening Post, Colliers, Liberty, Life and other magazines of this category. This in addition to another full-page campaign in over 20 fan and radio magazines, including Screenland, Fawcett and Dell groups, Modern Screen, Photoplay, Movie Mirror, Radio Guide, Radio Stars and numerous others. A trade paper campaign on a scale seldom heretofore attempted, is promised.

The company announced that the largest newspaper advertising appropriation in the history of the organization will be expended.

R. H. Cochrane, president of the New Universal, in speaking of the picture, said: "While we know that not all the splendid personalities in our picture are big star names as yet, we are convinced they will be after the picture is released. The negative has already cost well over a million dollars."

Notables Attend "Waltz" Opening

Industry notables, members of diplomatic and Congressional circles and important representatives of the press were among those present at the world premiere of Paramount's "Champagne Waltz" at Loew's Palace in Washington. (Pictures of the opening are in the pictorial section.)

At a board of directors meeting held in New York before Adolph Zukor and the home office executives left for the Washington opening, only routine business was transacted.

The producer was guest of honor at a dinner preceding the opening given by George E. and Mrs. Allen. Among those present were Ambassador Saito of Japan and Madame Saito, Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper and Mrs. Roper, Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre and Mrs. Sayre, First Assistant Postmaster General William W. Howes and Mrs. Howes, Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan and Mrs. Keenan, Dr. Ross T. McIntyre, Gladys Swarthout and Marguerite LeHand.

Paramount executives who accompanied Mr. Zukor to Washington included Mr. and Mrs. Barney Balaban, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Agnew, John Hicks, Jr., John Cecil Graham, and A. Edward Sutherland.

Essaness and F & M Sign for Photophone

The Essaness circuit of Chicago and the Fanchon and Marco circuit of St. Louis have completed arrangements with RCA Photophone whereby all their sound equipments, which are of competitive makes, will be serviced by RCA engineers, according to F. B. Ostman, Photophone service head.

The new contracts include the 28 theatres of the Essaness circuit and 26 of the F and M circuit. The sound equipment of 13 houses in the F and M circuit and of five houses in the Essaness circuit are shortly to be replaced with complete new RCA High Fidelity apparatus, Mr. Ostman said.

New Theatre Union Plan Repudiated By Labor Leaders

A plan to organize all theatrical employees into a vertical union, projected by the newly formed United Theatrical and Motion Picture Workers of America, has been repudiated by labor leaders in New York who claim that the group has no affiliation either with the American Federation of Labor or with the Committee for Industrial Organization, headed by John L. Lewis.

Leaders of the unions indicated that any attempt made by the new group to encroach upon the membership of the present organizations would be dealt with summarily.

Representatives of Local 306 of the Motion Picture Operators' Union and the strong stagehands' union, both affiliated with the A. F. of L., have been in communication with Mr. Lewis' office in Washington for the purpose of having him publicly deny any link between him and the new union. William Collins, representative of the A. F. of L. in New York, has denied that the new organization, of which Bernard Deckoff is president, possesses an A. F. of L. charter or that it has any connection with the C.I.O.

Vincent Jacoby, business agent of the Theatrical Protective Union, Local 1, also denounced the organization. He said that the new union is concentrating its efforts in organizing the theatre ushers in New York.

Charles Axelrod, reported as the New Jersey organizer for the new organization, in a press announcement issued from his office in Hackensack said that he will begin immediately to organize 350 employees at the Consolidated Film Industries plant in Fort Lee. He said that he will be assisted by Robert Murray, organizer for the film exchange division.

Reports for Year Show Italian Gain

by VITTORIO MALPASSUTI
in Rome

Gains in both the quantity and quality of production marked the last year in the industry in Italy. The year from June, 1936 to June, 1937, judged by the present production rate, should show the production of between 40 and 45 features which compares with 36 in the previous year and 32 in 1934-35.

A decided increase in the number of wired theatres is expected during 1937. The total is expected to rise from 250 to 400, which will result in annual film requirement of 350-400 features. American product still dominates the Italian field and is extremely popular with all types of audiences.

Indicative of the popularity of American product is the instance of "Mutiny on the Bounty" which did well in spite of increased admission prices at the Corso Cinema with a top of 14 lire compared to the usual price of eight to ten lire.

MAX FLEISCHER

Screen Songs

The popular Bouncing Ball Series. You know how your audiences go for a chance to do a little community singing. Well, here a funny cartoon sequence leads 'em into their song. And such name bands as Abe Lyman, Jack Denny, Richard Himber, Hal Kemp and Vincent Lopez supply the music. A standby for any theatre manager who wants to play safe with his fans and give 'em popularity tested shorts.

PARAMOUNT Pictorials

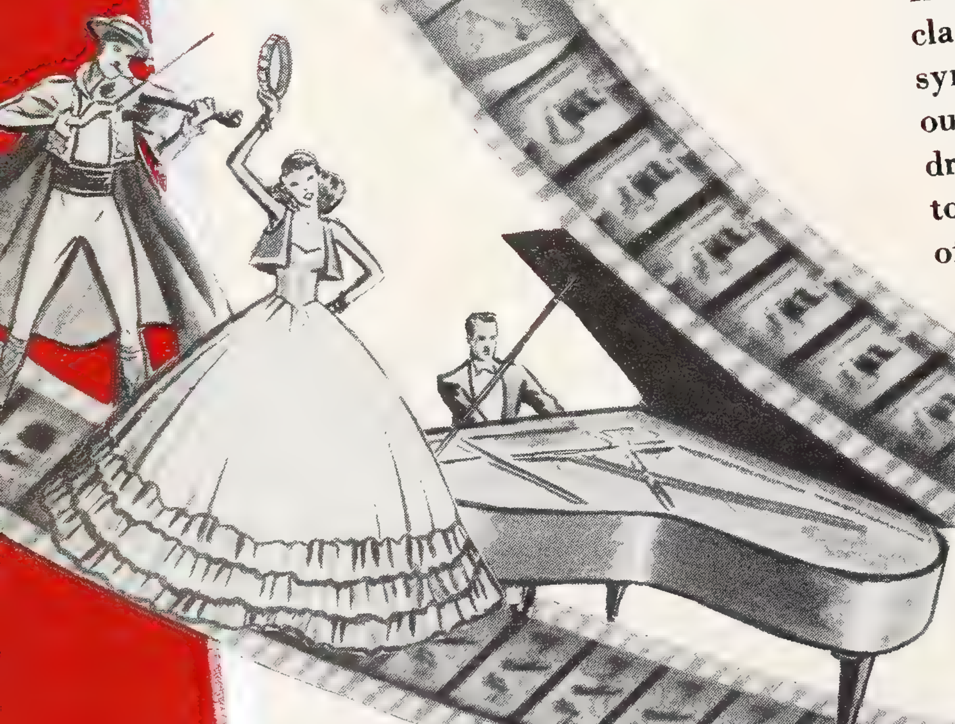
These shorts are the closest the motion picture industry comes to supplying your fans with the same kind of human interest stories that go over so big in the weekly magazine sections of the big dailies. Here you find personalities, oddities, adventures, scenic marvels . . . everything under the sun, yes, and in the shade, which will startle, amuse, interest, excite, charm the eyes and ears of your audiences. Many subjects in Technicolor are included, photographed by Robert C. Bruce, famous for his work as color camera man on "Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

MUSICAL ROMANCES

in Three-Color Technicolor

Here is the world's finest, as well as most popular classic music, brought to the screen by the leading symphony orchestras. The theme of such a glorious musical triumph as Schubert's "Serenade" is dramatized by leading actors and actresses, made to live again not only in sound but in sight. All of these are produced in Technicolor under the expert direction of Robert C. Bruce. There is a definitely growing demand by the entertainment buyers of America for this type of musical subject.



POPULAR SCIENCE
Short Features in Color

Paramount and "Popular Science Magazine" co-operate in giving you these sensationally successful one-reelers, depicting in color, simply, interestingly, the newest inventions of the mind of man. In addition to all this, "Popular Science" helps you to sell tickets by publicizing these short subjects in its own pages each month.

PARAMOUNT
Headliners

These shorts are just what their title names 'em. The ones we've assembled for the Silver Jubilee are actually "super-headliners". Here are shorts with the bigtime bands of the air waves, the leading personalities of stage, of screen, of radio, doing the acts that your public likes in fast paced, well produced miniature musical productions that give the fans a chance to see the very latest in Broadway and Hollywood entertainment as a swell appetizer for the big picture to follow.

Paragraphics

Ideas and plenty of them. New and startling subjects, of such a wide and varied assortment of titles it would be impossible to list them. Where and whenever we can find novel kinds of entertainment which measure up to the highest standards of box-office quality, we produce them as Paramount Paragraphics. These short subjects now rate among the most valued in the business.

PARAMOUNT NEWS

Paramount News has scooped the field so often, we don't have to waste any words selling you on this as the fastest, most daring, most newsy of all the news services . . . As the saying is: Paramount News, First in War, First in Peace, First in the Hearts of the Exhibitors!

Paramount's GRANTLAND RICE Sportlights

With Ted Husing, ace sports announcer, doing the chatter and Grantland Rice, the dean of American sports writers, editing them for you, these shorts just naturally take the top position in the field of motion picture sports coverage. Told at mile-a-minute pace, produced with the punch, sock, whip, bang of a bigtime sports event.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The motion picture business has unknowingly had in its ranks one of the three greatest collectors in the world of Anders Zorn's etchings. Stanton Griffis, familiar to the film industry as the chairman of the executive committee which manages Paramount, spent 15 years buying the paintings. He personally visited, or sent agents to every auction of Zorn etchings during the past decade and a half in New York and points west on this continent, and in London, Paris, Rome, Berlin and Stockholm, in Europe. Now he's giving them all up, selling the whole lot of 170—save nine—to start all over again buying paintings by some other artist.

"I've been a collector of Zorn paintings for 15 years," Mr. Griffis said, "and now I want to get some pictures I like."

Seems that Mr. Griffis turned on Painter Zorn because the artist nurtured his passion for amassing money.

Meanwhile he continues as chairman of Paramount's executive committee, a director of Thatcher Manufacturing Company, chairman of Madison Square Garden Corporation, a director of Lee Rubber and Tire Company, financial backer of Katharine Cornell's Broadway stage production, a partner in the Wall Street firm of Hemphill, Noyes and Company, chairman of Sandusky Bay Bridge Company, and a director in Shur-On Optical Company, Lefcourt Realty Corporation, The Osgood Company, Brentano's Book Stores and whatnot.

When not working, Mr. Griffis may be seen in almost any of a dozen clubs of which he belongs prominently: the New York Yacht Club, City Club, Racquet and Tennis Club, Midday Club, the New Canaan Country Club, New York Rookery Club, Heights Casino Club, etc., etc.

From the warm sands of Miami Beach, in Florida, comes the story, mailed by Sonny (Lincoln theatre) Shepherd, concerning Carl Brisson, who was brought to Hollywood from Europe, and who met his Waterloo at the hands of a Paramount studio executive, after conquering Europe.

Carl Brisson's name had headlined the theatrical pages of the newspapers in his native Copenhagen, Denmark, for many months, and then, for many years, in London, where he was acclaimed as one of Europe's truly great music hall stars. Thousands of fans attended his sailing from Southampton for Hollywood. The European press gave his departure generous space.

Arriving in New York, with scores of Paramount executives, press agents and newspapermen at the pier, Mr. Brisson was publicized far and wide in the New York press, and was wined and dined 'till the wee sma hours of the yawning. Leaving New York for the Coast, with his train compartment bedecked gaily with expensive flowers, Carl Brisson was very, very happy over his welcome to the United States.

Then came his arrival to report for work in Hollywood. Several hours were spent in waiting to see the Paramount studio "big shot." Finally, he was ushered into the inner sanctum, where, to his flabbergastation, he was greeted with: "Come in, Mr. Hansen, we hope you'll like your stay with us."

P. S.: Mr. Brisson is now sunning himself on the warmer sands of Miami Beach.

"The New York Daily Mirror," tabloidest of tabloid newspapers, makes the gentle proposal that "the law" make motion pictures of electrocutions of murderers, "in full gruesome detail, showing the writhing, burning bodies without hoods," for the purpose of forcefully bringing home the message to America's youth that "Crime does not pay."

As we remember, the nation's press—of which the "Daily Mirror" is one of the most vociferous participants was the motion picture's most severe critic in the matter of "horror" films some time back.

There is quite a rumpus being raised over the murals painted in Missouri's state capitol at Jefferson City by Thomas Hart Benton. The argument has resounded clear through to the Film Rows of Kansas City and St. Louis, where the more esthetic film salesmen who have seen the murals, complain that "the cows in the farm scenes appear distressed and undernourished, some of the bovines being so skinny "they'll never live through the winter."

"To which the reply," a Kansas City Journal-Post editorial reads, "is that contented cows are for radio programs and not modern murals. A well-fed cow peacefully chewing her cud is without esthetic value, and, therefore, unavailable for artistic purposes. But take a cow whose ribs show. She has seen life. She has known hunger, discomfort, frustration. There is bitterness in her soul, from the richness of experience. A scrawny cow has character, whereas her fat sister across the fence is—well, is just a cow."

Hollywood comedy producers looking for a gag-writer genius, or radio broadcaster searching for the same, need worry no longer. They now need only a pony-express to the writer of the following advertisement, appearing in Advertising Age, and their troubles will be over—but quickly:

> AM IN RADIO DEPARTMENT of a Philadelphia agency that's getting tight under the arms. Have been here 18 months, since graduating college, and have done every damn thing. Also am greatest expert on radio comedy in the world. (I can produce relatives to substantiate my claim.) Send in your name and address, together with three outside wrappers, with a brief message telling me why I should join your firm. This damn ad costs me over six bucks. BOX 941, Advertising Age, Chicago.

Producers' applications for the services of this extremely modest little chap will be considered in the order of their receipt.

Discussions raging in England over pseudo-Shakespeare pictures prompt Ivor Brown over there to make the suggestion that a British film producer should tackle "Romeo and Juliet" and limit his expenditure to $2,000.

But a producer who did that would lose all prestige in Hollywood immediately, especially at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studio, where they couldn't think of a "Romeo and Juliet" for less than $2,000,000, and at Warner Brothers, where Shakespeare dreamed one "Midsummer's Night" for $1,500,000.

Arizona's little town of Bisbee proudly boasts of possessing one of America's last signs of the real frontier west. It is The Brewery Gulch Gazette, a tabloid newspaper expressing western life that is vibrant and rough, of "men of two-gun fame, and hombres of brawn and steel, of women unafraid, who with laughter played, on each turning of fortune's wheel."

The Brewery Gulch Gazette has a civic motto all its own: "The sun shines on Brewery Gulch 330 days in the year, but there is moonshine every day." It also has a motion picture department, entitled "The Silver Screen." Reviews on the current "fillums" appear therein, in a vein that would tickle the hardened ribs of many an ol' toter of six-shooters who boomed when the dance halls were blooming. In describing Mr. Samuel Goldwyn's polished "Dark Angel," with Merle Oberon, for instance, the Brewery Gulch Gazette said: "The story is the old tearjerker of two soldados in love with the same babe in a country (England) where nice gals are supposed to have only one husband. One of them goes blind and turns to writin' bedtime stories for kids. But the gal doesn't even hold that against him, and marries him just in time to give the other bozo a break. There is nothing that we could notice in those reels that threw us into a sweat. Besides, the World War is too far in the offing to keep us on our toes at this date, as the lovers by this time would have a bunch of kids, or something unromantic like that."

The airplane tour of Warner Brothers' troupe of girly "Gold Diggers" is now a matter of record, in all of its publicity phases for and in behalf of the Warner motion picture, "The Gold Diggers of 1937." The "Gold-Digger" girls visited many cities while flying from California to New York and many more cities while flying back from New York to California. Representing Warners' idea of Hollywood gold-diggers, they were feted and favored everywhere, collecting more keys-to-the-city than Bank Nights has suits. Mayor Bryce B. Smith, in Kansas City, was a typical host. He welcomed the girls at the airport, honored them at luncheon, watched them visit the city's newspapers and broadcast over Kansas City's Station KMBC. Then His Honor became possessed of an idea. "If they are really 'gold diggers,'" he thought, "why not put them to work for our city's benefits party for under-privileged children?" Accordingly, all arrangements were made, and the mayor placed the girls on the street corners downtown to collect funds for his fund. They worked a full hour—but the 10 "gold diggers" were able to dig up only $9.60. "Humph," commented the mayor; "any of our Kansas City Mainstreet gold diggers could have done thrice better in half the time."

FROM READERS

SEES MORE ROOM FOR HIGHER ATTAINMENT

To the The Editor of the Herald:

I am interested in motion pictures, not only because of the entertainment I get from a good film but also on account of their immense public patronage. Thanks to the Legion of Decency, their quality from a moral point of view has been greatly improved, though there is room for higher attainment.

Thinking that producers are glad to hear from unprofessional critics, I offer my reactions to certain features of present day pictures.

If there are any screen presentations of modern dating which do not introduce a succession of screaming newspaper headlines, I have not seen them. This cheaply sensational trick, perhaps justifiable once in a while, has become tiresome.

Do society women always appear in backless gowns at parties or evening functions? It would be a relief to see one on the screen with a covered spine.

Why must modern screen plays invariably take us to night clubs with their sophistications? Are night clubs and cocktail parties necessary ingredients of modern drama?—GEORGE J. REID, Clarksville, Texas.

AGAIN THAT APPEAL FOR "ADULT SERIALS"

To the Editor of The Herald:

Last year in your columns appeared a letter from me asking for serials for adults. The response, to me at least, was nil. I am now in receipt of form letters from Columbia and from Republic, stressing several points that I brought out in that public letter, namely: (1) Magazines have built up their circulations on good serial stories; (2) Many of the most popular radio programs are serials, such as Betty and Bob. Amos and Andy. Many newspapers build up circulation through publication of a serial story.

Interesting, indeed, was this question found in Republic's mimeographed letter: "Why make serials exclusive for children?" Columbia also stressed the fact that "adult interest in chapter plays was due to be revived."

Up to this point I was greatly interested and had begun to believe that perhaps my idea was about to be followed, but, for the edification of adults, Republic proudly mentioned "The Vigilantes are Coming" (which serial I am now running) and "Robinson Crusoe of Clipper Island," while Columbia proudly pointed to "The Jungle Menace," "The Mysterious Pilot," and so on, all of which sound very much as though it is their plan to continue killing the hero each week and "reviving him again" the next. I know that the "Vigilantes Are Coming" is of that type and the titles of the others certainly have that flavor.

So, once more, a voice from the mountains urges "Adult Serials." And by that I mean a serial for adults, not a serial for children which they hope has adult appeal. Surely a serial can be made from a good wholesome story based on the same division as a magazine story or a radio program. We have all read stories in magazines which were "continued next week" and haunted the stands awaiting the next issue, and these stories are seldom if ever sustained by getting the hero killed each week, but simply because it is a darn interesting story which we follow because it is interesting.

Won't at least one producer take the bull by the horns and make a good story of the romantic-comedy type into a serial designed for adults, which incidentally will be just as interesting to children as 90 per cent of the feature output. Personally, we prefer the name "Chapter-play" to distinguish them from the "serials" as we now know them.

What exhibitor wouldn't rather play a chapter of a good story each week than practically any of the two-reelers, which with very few exceptions are universally miserable?

There is a lot that I don't know about the motion picture industry and the problems of production and distribution, but I'll wager that I could take the sum allotted to a "B" production, or a present day "serial," and produce an adult chapter-play which would return twice the gross revenue now received from any "B" picture or any serial. And, more important, such a chapter-play, if sensibly produced, would solve one of the exhibitors' most pressing problems, which is, how to build and maintain the habit of theatre-going.

So here endeth another plea and one which, in my opinion at least, is so logical. It is acknowledged that newspaper and magazine circulation has been grounded in continued stories. That is an accepted fact. The popularity of continued radio programs has been attested by numerous polls. Why, oh, why, can't the motion picture industry realize this and make use of this proven, tested fact? Why not increase theatre attendance and maintain it by intelligent use of the same means?

I'm planning a trip to New York in the near future and if any producer wants to argue this point further, I should be most happy to do so!—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont.

MPTOA To Ask for Further Sessions

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has arrived in New York and will endeavor to confer further with distribution executives on their responses to the MPTOA trade practice program in an effort to obtain additional concessions from some of the companies.

It is reported that Mr. Kuykendall may also send recommendations to local exhibitor organizations throughout the country to take action immediately on the setting up of local conciliation boards in their territories. The national organization, however, will not participate directly in the organizing of the local boards.

Roths Increase Theatres

Charles S. and Sam Roth, operators of the State and Strand in Harrisonburg, Va., and the Elkton at Elkton, Va., have acquired properties in Suffolk, Fredericksburg, Culpeper and Emporia, Va., for new and modern theatres. Construction work is expected to start in all four towns shortly.

Maid of Salem

Melodrama

A good story, a good cast, production detail that doesn't miss a single bet in establishing complete authentic and realistic backgrounds, skillfully included mood-establishing musical accompaniment, and fine acting on the part of the star and entire supporting cast are the elements in this picture on which its producers are basing their bid for public support.

"Maid of Salem" is human melodrama based on a fresh yet vividly familiar subject—witchcraft hysteria in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, Salem Village, in the year 1642. It's a big picture in every sense of the word. It's a historical picture, but it's intimate and dramatic personal history through which is threaded a heart-touching romantic love story. With stark bold strokes, it paints a picture of a frenzied fear, born of ignorance and superstition, that terrorizes a peaceful colonial community, brings death to many innocent victims of warped fanaticism, but in the end demonstrates that the lies of fevered imaginations cannot prevail over the force and power of truth and righteousness. Entertainment always, it is also a powerful preachment condemning the terror of bigotry, superstition and ignorance. As such it is impressive, soberly atmosphered entertainment of particular significance to any and all kinds of audiences.

Although it exists under a stern minded, unrelenting, religious and social morality, Salem Village exists peacefully until Ann, daughter of elder Goode, concocts a weird tale of mysticism and dealings with Satan that her father and the Reverend Parris interpret as witchcraft. Meanwhile the love story of a puritan maid, Barbara Clarke, and a cavalier political refugee, Roger Coverman, is worked in to show how a girl hemmed in on all sides by narrow strictness seeks surcease from stern realities. Following repetition of Ann's barefaced lie, Negro slave Tituba is put to the inquisition, forced to confess she is a witch and to name others with whom she has had dealings.

In all the colony only two, Barbara and Dr. John Harding, retain their sense of reason. Though she has been deprived of the clandestine comfort of Coverman's company, Barbara, not knowing that years ago her mother had been burned as a witch in England, attempts in defending a suspect to stay the wave of horror and death. For this she herself is accused of being a witch and her aunt, Ellen, Dr. John and his wife, Martha, are forced to recount the story of her mother. On trial, Barbara (Claudette Colbert doing the most expert job of her career) dramatically defends herself.

Everything about "Maid of Salem" represents class and quality. It is that class and quality that, while being worthy of the attention of the socalled inellectual group of patrons, also is understood and appreciated by the masses. All that anyone expects in a picture is provided. Produced with sincerity and dignity, the power of the story enabling producers, director and cast to carry through without resort to any forced or artificial theatricals, the film should be sold as just that kind of picture. Because in only few pictures has old New England prejudice and superstition been made the subject of screen material, it may seem that some little difficulty might be encountered in interesting the general public. However, as witchcraft has long been a subject of fiction and actual historical fact writings, there is a familiarity with it that cannot be overlooked. If that is realized and full value made of the prestige of Claudette Colbert, the name worth of supporting players as well as the standing of the producing company and director Frank Lloyd, it may be logical to anticipate "Maid of Salem" as a stand-'em-in-line attraction.

You Only Live Once

(U.A.-Walter Wanger)

Drama

This is a somber chronicle. From beginning to end it is grimly bitter imaginative realism stretched to the last degree. More a social treatise on criminology than it is entertainment, it is always, even in its romantic episodes, almost totally devoid of those elements that quicken sympathy except in a reverse sort of way. Barren of any tension easing contrasts, holding its comedy content to a meager minimum, the film is set and moves in an aura of rigid suspense. Under the spell of powerful writing, penetrating direction and expert individual character performances, plus highly realistic production detail, the picture several times attains impressive dramatic heights. In four sequences, drama the like of which has seldom been seen on the screen attains that convincing pitch that leaves indelible memories. They are the robbery of the bank truck; Henry Fonda's soul-killing experiences in the death house; his sensational escape from the prison hospital and trek to the prison gates, and the killing of Fonda and his wife, Sylvia Sidney, by officers in the climax just as sanctuary is a few steps away.

The stars perform with unrelenting, rigorous conviction, as does the entire supporting cast. Though the story is hard to believe, much about it being extremely incredible, it somehow or other succeeds in leaving a vivid impression. How the public will receive it is difficult to predict. Paradoxically, as none of the characters stirs sympathies, production technique making it seem that all know they are wrong, the film nevertheless touches the most tender emotions. Selling the show either as poignant drama or appealing romance, even attempting to make it a preachment against the injustices of justice, will not be an easy job for anyone.

Previewed in the Ritz theatre, Los Angeles. Audience reactions were extremely mixed. Under the tension of its dramatic power the gallery laughed in places where there was no occasion for merriment and was oddly silent in those where laughs were legitimate.—G.M.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Realistic picturization of bank truck robbing sequence is in direct violation of clause A, article 2, second section of the Production Code of Ethics, "Methods of crime should not be explicitly presented." An identified character is shown spotting and casing the armed truck. As he dons a gas mask, the lid of the trunk on his car rises to show an assortment of bombs and grenades. Gas grenades burst in the midst of guards, police, and spectators, killing many. The gas masked character walks into the poison fog and drives the truck away.

Superb Production Of Stirring Story

"YOU ONLY LIVE ONCE"
(Wanger-UA)

This is a strongly emotional drama of legal injustice and of a young wife's faithfulness unto death. It makes a powerful and continuous demand on the sympathies, and will have deeply moving appeal. This characteristic is sustained to the utmost in an admirably sustained production, giving it strong boxoffice value.

Parallel story elements inevitably invite comparison with "Fury", which was directed to the same emotional goal by the same master, Fritz Lang. Opinions will differ, but the same tension and turmoil of sympathy will be evoked.

The skilfully contrived story and screenplay by Gene Towne and Graham Baker recites the story of a well-intentioned young man who through no real fault of his own has been sent to prison three times.

Walter Wanger, making his first for United Artists, has given the story a most impressive production. From the superb direction of Fritz Lang and the brilliantly distinguished photography of Leon Shamroy to the pictorially opulent sets by Alexander Toluboff and the notably original score of Alfred Newman, it arrests attention from the splendidly enacted story.

Outstanding in the strong cast is Henry Fonda as the young prisoner and fugitive. His sincerity and range of expression raises this characterization far above anything he has done before, making it an emotional tour de force. Sylvia Sidney as the loyal young wife evokes enormous sympathy, sustaining the note of courage under tragic difficulty with skilled trouping.

this and six or seven thousand other witnesses of its unreeling at the New York Roxy are not unanimously mistaken. The film has been called different and it is emphatically that. It has been called human, thrilling, masterly, even inspired, and these indicate but do not describe the nature of it. It is rich in the intangibles that make up memorable entertainment and these are not readily if ever expressed in adjectives.

Comment of the critics has emphasized the personality, voice and performance of Deanna Durbin with complete justice to that extremely personable and competent young lady but with something less than that to Barbara Read and Nan Grey as the other girls of the title and to Charles Winninger as their father, a role as difficult as is often come upon in an acting lifetime as long as his and almost never as well acted. Crowded out of most published praises of the picture, likewise, are Ray Milland and John King, who portray young romance with rare intelligence, Mischa Auer in an unusual comedy role and Binnie Barnes as a matrimonial fortune hunter.

Miss Durbin, a juvenile soprano of exceptional voice and acting talent, is cast as the youngest of three sisters whose wealthy father, divorced from their mother ten years previously, is reported engaged to a young and famous beauty. They come from Switzerland, where they have been living with their mother, to New York, where their father resides, with plans to prevent his marriage. How these plans work out and with what result it is not necessary for practical purposes or fair to the picture to reveal in synopsis form.

Nor is it proper or necessary to break down the story into what have come to be called interest factors. It is a single, rounded whole, much greater than the sum of its component parts, and has within its hour and twenty-five minutes of running time what is slangily known as everything. It is at once a mass picture, a class picture, a family picture, and adult picture, a children's picture, a metropolitan picture, a small town picture, an artistic picture in the meaning of that art which erases all evidences of itself.

Reviewed at the Roxy theatre, New York, where a midday audience of capacity proportions indicated by laughter, by tears and by prolonged applause such satisfaction as is manifested perhaps half a dozen times annually in the best cinema years.—William R. Weaver.

Step Lively, Jeeves

Comedy

Hilarious comedy that tilts heavily toward the farce side of nonsense is the principal ingredient of this conglomeration of foolishness. Factually, it's the kind of picture that folk will laugh with and at. There's not much rhyme or reason to all the comical stuff that happens. Maybe in that the producers were wise, for the film delivered up a more than an hour's amusement that at least had the preview audiences giggling and guffawing. A typical American concoction, it doesn't bear in any way other than the character of Jeeves any resemblance to what P. G. Wodehouse might have thought up.

For quick description "Step Lively, Jeeves" is on a theme of cheating the cheaters. The formula is treated in a refreshing, laugh provoking manner. Swindlers Sir Cedric and Prince Boris, stymied in attempts to outsmart each other, combine to convince butler Jeeves that he is a scion of nobility. The plot is to use him as a descendant of Sir Francis Drake to fleece American suckers. Socially ambitious Babe, moll wife of mobster Barney Ross, plus an outbreak of gangster blood and thunder coincident with the arrival of the Earl of Bedford (Jeeves) in New York, cause public enemy Ross to be the first victim of the swindle. Ensuing events, the ringing in of Patricia Westley, newspaper sob sister, and Gary Townsend, her amateur detective play boy friend provide the tip that decides Ross to cut himself in on the swindle or else. All works to get innocent and befuddled Jeeves out of the mess and give Cedric and Boris such a standin with Ross that it looks as if it's a cinch for them to sell him the late Czar's crown jewels.

Just nonsense, generally silly but sometimes smart and clever, the picture is intended for those who want to laugh, and to be sold under the banner of an all-laugh feature.

A Doctor's Diary

(Paramount-Schulberg)

Drama

Commercially "A Doctor's Diary" is a controversy starting picture. From an entertainment standpoint, it is seriously toned, human interest drama. In the first consideration, its plot hinges upon an interpretation of professional ethics. In forceful, straight-from-the-shoulder style it poses the question, "Is a doctor's first due to humanity or must he look to personal and institutional financial security." Undoubtedly the producer, B. P. Schulberg, was aware that his picture would arouse antagonism in and condemnation from the medical profession as a whole. At the same time, as evidence of his belief that the picture would become popular with the public, he has endowed the film with considerable content for powerful exploitation. In the second phase, "A Doctor's Diary" is personal drama. Therein it is exceptionally well done. A courageous and brave undertaking, it is quite possible to foresee that objections which members of the medical profession may raise to it will stimulate a public reaction to the benefit of the exhibitor.

Although substantiating incidents go to great detail in illustrating the personal drama, romance and experiences of doctors, nurses and patients in a hospital, the plot rests on one point. A genius boy violinist is brought to the hospital, suffering an arm affliction. Resident physician Norris recommends an immediate operation. Because Dr. Ludlow, called by a wealthy patient, is advised to answer it by managing doctor Stanwood, the operation is delayed and results disastrously for the boy. Emphatic in his condemnation of a system that places the call of money above that of human necessity, Norris is discharged from the hospital.

The story on which the picture is based pulls no punches. While it meanders quite a bit in the beginning, it finally gets right to the point and, in erecting its tense drama, spares no professional feelings. The story is exceptionally well acted and directed. Newcomer John Trent makes a convincing debut in the leading role. The rest of the cast, practically all of whom are principals, perform with intelligence and understanding.

If possible, it would be advisable to see an advance screening of this film. In this manner may be obtained an understanding that will permit the proper kind of approach to the patrons. The more advance study given it, the easier it should be to get its idea and moral over to the general public.

Previewed in the Village theatre, Westwood. The audience was impressed by the character of the story and the quality of acting. Outside comment was general that the film quickly would start controversy.—G. M.

Man of the People

(MGM)

Romantic Drama

The various elements of which this picture is composed have been so combined as to result in much better than average mass entertainment. The basic story, into which romance, comedy, suspense and surprise have been worked, is political drama of considerable human interest content. With Joseph Calleia contributing an execeptionally strong character performance in the leading role, the film moves through interestingly contrived situations, dialogue and action. Modern in atmosphere, it treats of a subject—political chicanery—with which persons are familiar through actual experience in their own communities or have known about elsewhere.

Joe Moreno, product of the slums who got his education the hard way, becomes a lawyer, Sympathetic with the exploited Italian masses of his neighborhood, he takes his oath seriously and dedicates his career to serving them. Quickly he realizes that something more than a law degree is necessary to cut through the miles of red tape, and he becomes associated with boss William Grady's political organization. At the same time, he meets and falls in love with aristocrat Abbey Reid.

Lacking as it does in smash cast names, the production more than makes up for this apparent shortcoming by the quality of entertainment delivered. Performances are uniformly high caliber and Calleia's work particularly is of the type that should start persons talking. Selling the show as an all-around worthy feature and playing up the topical nature of the story in contrast to incidents of like nature that have happened in almost every locality, looks like the most effective way of arousing mass attention.

Park Avenue Logger

(Radio-Hirliman)

Comedy-Drama

A playboy's regeneration is worked out in this romance tinged comedy-drama of the timberlands. While the action, and there's lots of it, is the principal feature, production detail, particularly the picturization of logging incidents, is of high quality, establishing itself as a commercial asset of more than a little value.

As it goes, Grant Curran, gay son of Mike Curran, lumber tycoon, who got his money the hard way, is sent to the tall timbers to see if he can make a man of himself. It happens that Grant is quite a proficient wrestler who enjoys tough going. In the camp, with Peggy O'Shea introduced to carry on the comparatively slight romantic contrast with the hero, Grant quickly becomes aware that not all is being operated on the up and up. His investigations lead him into numerous thrill action brawls, but in the end he manages to put the skids under the crooked deals that would deprive Peggy and her father Matt of their holdings.

The picture moves at a rapid pace. There's no beating around the bush to pack the film with non-essentials. George O'Brien, in a rather different character, performs up to his standard and he is given good support by Willard Robertson, Ward Bond, Bert Hanlon, Beatrice Roberts and Gertrude Short.

Don't Pull Your Punches

(Warner)

Comedy-Drama

This is a prizefight picture into which a considerable amount of human interest has been injected. Containing plenty of fisticuff action, it also carries a pleasing romantic thread and includes a surprising amount of comedy. It tells an intelligently prepared story, nicely balancing dialogue with action, erecting clever situations, and all in all resulting in a satisfactory sustaining attraction.

Gunner Malene is a trial horse pug whose one ambition is to win the championship. As much as he wants the glory, his sister Mary wants it more. Gunner always gives a good account of himself in the ring, but never quite makes the championship grade. Despite his plans, boxing commissioners and managers are of the opinion that Gunner is only a good contender. Unable to get anywhere himself, Gunner picks up a husky Texan, Rush Conway, and makes him his protege. While Rush is learning the rudiments of the ring and wading through a flock of setups, he falls in love with Mary.

Events so transpire with the retirement of the champ that Gunner and Rush must fight for the title, a match that neither they nor Mary anticipated. Neither wants it but public demand forces them into the ring. In the ring, things at first go pretty badly for Gunner as the youthful Rush, who, though he has little heart in his work, belts Gunner from pillar to post. But the oldtimer's experience serves him in good stead and when Rush is off guard, Gunner puts over a knockout. The finale is his retirement, Mary's marriage to Rush and the trio with little Bobby Doyle retiring to the peace of a Texas ranch.

Fast moving, well acted and directed, concentrating on those elements understandable to the masses, "Don't Pull Your Punches" contains more sound entertainment than is found in many more pretentious films.

Practically Perfect

Amusing

Edward East and Ralph Dunke, known on the radio as the Sisters of the Skillett, dash briskly through characteristic song, dance, gag and slapstick in this comedy based on the relationship of radio sponsor to talent. Efforts to prove the practicability of their humorously impracticable answers to puzzled listeners take the comedians into the home of their sponsor, where their ministrations result in destruction of the house by fire. A lot of laughs appear before that.—Running time, 20½ minutes.

Free Rent

Good Comedy

Comedy is the keynote of this subject, which pokes some fun at the current trailer craze. With Monty Collins and Tom Kennedy as the sparkplugs the subject has some lively moments. Disturbed by rent troubles, Collins, Kennedy and their wives embark on a trailer to "live off the fat of the land." Getting started constitutes a minor problem compared to the one of finding a spot to park for the night, as signs all along their route bar trailers. They find a spot they consider ideal, but the next morning it's still dark at nine o'clock. They've parked in a tunnel and a train is bearing down on them. They get the trailer out, only to have it wrecked farther along the line. Running time, 18 minutes.

Reel Vaudeville

(Vitaphone)

Routine

"Reel" vaudeville, perhaps, but hardly of the class that would make the Palace when that house meant the world famed mecca of vaudevillians. The Three Queens do a routine set of tap dance steps. Carroll and Howe offer some comedy lines that are not particularly funny and add for a not very good measure some trimmings of song and dance. The Bee Hee Rubyae Troup conclude the show with their acrobatic manipulations, which certainly in the real days of vaudeville would have opened instead of closed the show. Harry Rose of the "Here's Harry" fame serves as master of ceremonies and provides in addition his specialty of a rather monotonous monologue. Running time, 11 minutes.

Don't Be Like That

(RKO Radio)

Poor

A hypochondriac hubby, Jack Norton, who suffers more from that green-eyed ailment named jealousy than from any other distress, becomes such a distasteful "pill" to his long-suffering spouse, Muriel Evans, that the dear woman ups in revolt, packs her bags and straightway departs for that constant haven for worried wives, her mother's home. Bearing the little lady a tasty peace offering in the shape of a new fur coat, the penitent husband proceeds to complicate a marital reconciliation by becoming entangled with the minions of the law, a couple of irate taxi drivers, the family doctor, more of a menace than a medico, and his attractive wife. The gags and situations are served up in traditional style. There is much running from room to room, some rough and tumble horse play and a bedroom scene in the best slapstick manner. The only thing missing was the custard pie. Perhaps that would have improved things considerably. Running time, 20 minutes.

Excellent Comedy Cartoon

Under the musical ministrations of Maestro Oswald, everything is peace and song in the tuneful town of Birdville. But soon come sour notes and discord, with a visitation by three terrible black crows. Oswald, though, is one smart rabbit and in a smash windup he gives the villains their due. Decidedly amusing, smartly concocted and rapidly paced, the whole tale is well worth a showing. Running time, seven minutes.

Dear Mr. Skouras:

Had a sneak preview of Grace Moore in "When You're In Love" with Aline MacMahon, Cary Grant, Henry Stephenson, Thomas Mitchell, Catharine Doucet, Louis Alberni. Directed by Robert Riskin, produced by Everett Riskin.

The audience reaction was marvelous, the picture is a definite hit. Robert Riskin, who is a past master at writing clever dialogue, is equally clever as a director. He did a grand job.

Personally I feel this is the finest thing Grace Moore has ever done. The picture has the comedy and clever dialogue of "It Happened One Night", with Grace Moore singing everything from Opera to "Minnie the Moocher". It can almost be said it is a "It Happened One Night" put to music. This was the general consensus of opinion of the audience and we had a very good house.

Photography was excellent. Grace Moore never looking better. Finest thing Cary Grant has ever done, and Aline MacMahon never did a better job. This picture is a double A and should be big Box Office. It will please any audience. Preview was very long running two hours and fourteen minutes but even at that many people said don't cut it, of course they will take out 2500 or 3000 feet, which will speed the tempo up greatly and round out one swell entertainment.

CHICAGOANS LOOK TO STAGE SHOW, PIT BAND

Double Featuring Returns with Ban on Chance Games, but Exhibitors Are Skeptical

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Double features apparently are about to bring storm and strife again upon the Chicago scene. Exhibitors, estimating that their grosses dropped 15 to 25 per cent when the police department went to work in earnest to eliminate chance games, turned to the double feature, which had been out of the picture for three years, starting in 1932 when the theatre men dropped the idea as unsuccessful, what with their reading of public sentiment and the intra-exhibitor fights which the policy had aroused.

But now 114 of the 175 neighborhood houses are playing two features again, and it is expected that outside the Loop the policy soon will be 100 per cent in operation. Then, they say, will come a recurrence of the battles between independents and circuits, with price cutting and triple billings and whatnot.

A number of the Chicago circuits as a result are looking to the stage show as the way out. Large theatres which even with double features are finding business not what they expected are planning a film-vaudeville policy. Whether there is enough talent available for stage shows on a wide scale is problematical.

Another plan which is receiving considerable attention is that of bringing back large orchestras to the theatres. Exhibitors say, however, that the wages demanded by the Chicago Musicians' Union are prohibitive, that they could pay more than some musicians get for working in taverns and small night clubs, but not what the union asks.

One reason for the trend towards the stage-show policy is that theatre admissions have been increased generally and to maintain these prices it will be necessary to offer the public more than a double-bill or a single feature.

Local theatres this week provided space in their lobbies for the American Red Cross workers who are conducting a drive for funds for flood relief. The workers will seek contributions in the loop theatres starting Friday and on Monday will begin work in the neighborhood theatres. Chicago's quota is near the half-million dollar mark.

More than 75 men engaged in distribution paid tribute to Henry Herbel, Universal Films sales manager, for his four years of meritorious work as president of the Chicago Film Board of Trade.

The testimonial dinner in Mr. Herbel's honor was given at the Congress hotel last Friday. Felix Mendelssohn, Jack Osserman and Clyde Eckhardt were on the committee. Mr. Herbel was presented with a luggage set.

For the fifth consecutive time, American Can Company engaged the Chicago theatre for an evening to entertain guests here for the Canners' convention. This year the theatre party was to be on Thursday evening. The full Chicago show, augmented by stage talent from other B & K theatres, was to comprise the evening's entertainment.

Thirty thousand conventioneers were gathering. As a result business in the Loop at night was better than average.

Sales Forces Meet To Map Campaigns

Jack Schlaifer, western division manager of United Artists, gathered the field forces around him in Chicago last week to discuss the 14 weeks' campaign in honor of George J. Schaifer, vice-president in charge of sales. Attending the series of special meetings were Ben Fish, far west district manager, and Jack Goldhar, midwest district manager of the Minneapolis office; J. S. Abrose of Milwaukee, D. V. McLucas of Omaha, Morris Dudelson of Detroit, W. E. Trulog of Kansas City, William Feldstein of St. Louis and Irving Schlank of Chicago.

A special honorary committee of sponsorship for the Schaefer Drive includes such names as Joseph Bernhard, general manager of the Warner Theatres; Mike Kincey, head of the Kincey Circuit in North Carolina; Frank Walker of the Comerford Circuit; Edward Beatty of the Butterfield Circuit; W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of Radio City Music Hall; George Trendle of the United Detroit Theatres; John Balaban of Balaban and Katz, and Vincent McFaul of the Buffalo Theatres.

Seventy-five salesmen and executives from the Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin branches of Warner Brothers attended meeting of the sales staff in Kenosha, Wis., last week. Charley Ryan, assistant Chicago zone sales manager, headed the Chicago staff. Al Kvool, Milwaukee district chief, headed the Wisconsin delegation and Harry Stein, district manager of Hammond, Indiana, headed the group from that territory. Plans were completed for the 13 weeks' sales drive. Herbert J. Ochs, assistant to Gradwell Sears, Warner Brothers' general sales manager, is on a tour of the company's exchanges in the west.

Charles B. Paine, treasurer of Universal Pictures, and J. R. Grainger, general manager of distribution, are at Universal City to discuss the New Universal's 1937-38 product.

Decision Reserved In Sales Tax Case

The New York State court of appeals has reserved decision on the applicability of the New York City two per cent sales tax to film rental revenue derived by exchanges within the city limits from distribution to points outside the city limits. A decision is not expected for three weeks.

Frederick H. Wood of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood, presented the oral arguments for distributors in connection with his brief which contends that the sales tax is in violation of both the state and Federal constitutions.

The assessment of rentals collected by the United Artists Exchange in New York furnished the test case for the distributors. The appellate division ruled that the tax is applicable to rentals derived from theatres located within the city limits but not to rentals derived from theatres located elsewhere. The city contends that the tax is applicable to all revenues of the film exchanges located within the city.

If the tax is upheld estimates place the distributors' liability at more than $3,000,000. Indications are that an adverse decision will result in the case being carried to the United States supreme court.

Extras' Salaries Put at $2,420,453

Extras in Hollywood earned $2,420,453.55 in 1936, according to figures released this week by Campbell McCulloch, vice-president and general manager of the Central Casting Bureau. The total is a decrease of $150,840.29 from the 1935 figures.

The total placements for the year also showed a slight decrease with 268,436 working in 1936 compared to 278,486 in 1935.

A breakdown of the statistics for the year shows that the average daily placement in 1936 was 858 while average daily placement in 1935 were 889. Of the daily average in 1936, 558 were men, 259 women and 41 children.

In 1936 the extras received an average daily wage of $9.02. A total of 174,759 men were paid $1,422,137.08 and 80,962 women were paid $658,074.56.

The figures show that 7,712 boys were employed and paid $49,263.95 and 5,003 girls were paid $31,658.48.

THE CUTTING ROOM

The Last of Mrs. Cheyney

(MGM)

Comedy Romance Drama

This story, based on Frederick Lonsdale's play, was used once before for screen purposes. Then, in 1929, Norma Shearer played the leading role. In this re-creation for which Leon Gordon, credited with participation in the preparation of "His Brother's Wife" and "The Unguarded Hour" and Monckton Hoffe, did the screen play, Joan Crawford is being starred with William Powell and Robert Montgomery. The late Richard Boleslawski, maker of "The Garden of Allah" and "Theodora Goes Wild," carried on direction up to the time of his sudden passing. The picture is being completed by George Fitzmaurice.

The story concerns a young American girl, a glamorous creature, who took English society. A feminine raffles, she was in league with a super crook (Powell) to steal a valuable necklace. Robert Montgomery was very much in love with her, but she was much in love with Powell. She didn't steal the necklace, but with Powell's permission Montgomery got her, and the necklace was willingly tossed in as a wedding present.

To the name power which is represented by Miss Crawford, Powell and Montgomery must be added the value of Frank Morgan and Jessie Ralph who have important roles in the photoplay. While this group, with Benita Hume, carry practically the entire theme and all the romance, drama, comedy, semi-mystery and intrigue rotate about its members, the supporting cast is one deserving of more than passing consideration. Inasmuch as most of the action happens in England, most of the support are British actors. Included are Nigel Bruce, Melville Cooper, Lumsden Hare, Ralph Forbes and Wallis Clarke. Others who have parts in the production are Colleen Clare, Aileen Pringle, Leonard Carey, Sarah Haden and Barnett Parker.

Release date: February 19.

The Prince and the Pauper

(Warner)

Drama

In the field of literature "The Prince and the Pauper" is recognized as one of the greatest stories Mark Twain ever wrote. Adhering to the best Twain in bringing the noted American humorist's bit of historical fiction to the screen so that all its humanness and unique appeal is retained, the producers assigned the late Laird Doyle to prepare the screen play. Doyle's many previous credits, including such adaptation as "British Agent," "Oil for the Lamps of China" and more recently "Cain and Mabel" and "Three Men on a Horse," prove his ability to handle both comedy and drama, which are the principal substances of this story. Direction is in the hands of William Keighley, who has been the man at the helm in many of Warner's more important pictures. Lavish production detail authentically and colorfully reflecting the locale and time, England in the mid-sixteenth century, the problem of casting seems to have been effectively solved.

The two boys, central figures in the story, are the Mauch twins, Billy and Bobby. Better known is Billy, recently seen in "Anthony Adverse," "The White Angel" and "Penrod and Sam." While both have been widely publicized, they are, by no means, the only name values the production boasts. Others who will be seen are Errol Flynn, remembered for "Captain Blood," "Charge of the Light Brigade" and "Green Light," Claude Rains, Montagu Love, Barton MacLane, Donald Crisp, Phyllis Barry, Henry Stephenson, Murray Kinnell, Walter Kingsford and many others of note.

The story concerns two boys, a prince child of fortune and a pauper child of misfortune. Both are made the victims of adult political intrigue and criminal rapacity.

Drama

Approach to a new idea in aviation pictures is being made in this production. As the yarn runs, it gets pretty well off the formula track, yet is not lacking in that thrill action content that gives air pictures an exciting appeal. In theme the story is both a character drama and an air adventure. A promising young doctor becomes involved in a plane crack-up that leads to his discharge by a hospital where he has been employed as resident physician. A licensed flyer, a friend gets him a mechanic's job at a west coast air port. As romantic complications ensue, he endeavors to hide his identity as a doctor. However, when a transcontinental plane crashes in the California mountains, he flies an ambulance plane to the rescue, administers emergency treatment, performs a dangerous operation, and rehabilitates himself as a surgeon.

The production is based on a story by Alice B. Curtis, adapted by Thomas Lenon and G. V. Atwater with screen play by J. Robert Bren and Edmund L. Hartman. It is being directed by Lew Landers, maker of "Without Orders" and "Night Waitress."

John Beal, seen in "Break of Hearts," "The Little Minister" and "We Who Are About to Die," is the leading player. He is supported by newcomer Joan Fontaine, featured in "Quality Street," Philip Huston, currently in "We're on the Jury," Jane Walsh, a child star of the silent days, Frank M. Thomas, Diana Gibson, Stanley Andrews, Billy Gilbert and Alec Craig.

Topical nature of the story as it relates to the series of air disasters that have happened recently in the territory of its screen locale, plus the fact that it will present the newly developed ambulance plane as one of the big production features, should give the forthcoming film a timely value that readily can be turned to commercial account.

Comedy Mystery Drama

The story motivating this production is neither new nor unfamiliar. In various ways it has been done before with varying success, depending upon who made it and who was in it. Three writers ordered to write a play and in search of a plot have a real murder mystery dropped in their laps. The unstarted play must be finished within 18 hours. Although there are wide differences in the mechanics and development, the wellknown "Seven Keys to Baldpate" may be accepted as an identifying standard.

Rolling a drunk, the writers discover he is a blackmailer. Tracking his victims, considerable comedy contrasting the underlying dramatic motivation, they round up a diversified assortment of persons for their investigation in which they pose as police officers. But their supposedly innocent stunt turns into a real murder mystery when the blackmailer is killed. As one of the writers actually solves the case, material is obtained out of which the play is written.

The story is an original screen play by Ellery Queen and Lowell Brentano. The names are the pen names of Frederick Bannay and Manfred Lee, collaborating specialists on mystery crime yarns. Direction was assigned to Charles Barton, maker of "Murder with Pictures" and "And Sudden Death" in the past year.

For name values Lew Ayres, Benny Baker and Eugene Pallette composed the play writing trio, with Ayers the crime solver. Other players participating are Ruth Coleman, Colin Tapley, Vivienne Osborne and Howard Hickman.

Probable release date, February 15.

50 Roads to Town

(20th Century-Fox)

Dramatic Romance

Despite the definitely bucolic title suggestive of a sweetly atmosphered idyllic, the story told in this production is intimate dramatic comedy romance and thrill action. A socialist girl speeds to a romantic elopement rendezvous. A personable young aristocrat flees town because an irate husband believes he has busted up his home. They meet in an isolated mountain cabin. A notorious public enemy is reported on the loose in the same locale. The girl thinks the aristocrat is the gangster. He believes she is a detective set to trap him. Complications bring the real gangster, a country sheriff and hordes of police.

The story on which the film is based has been a current best seller novel, written by Louis F. Nobel. The screen play is by Willian Conselman and George Marion, Jr., Conselman credited with participation in "Stowaway," "Pigskin Parade" and "Private Number" and Marion with "Three Cheers for Love," "The Big Broadcast of 1936" and "Two for Tonight." Direction is by Norman Taurog, who made "Reunion" for this company.

The boy in the story is Don Ameche, now in "One in a Million" and "Love Is News," as well as having been starred in "Ramona." The girl is Ann Sothern, currently appearing in "Dangerous Number" and recently in "Smartest Girl in Town" and "Walking On Air." The country yokel who provides much of the comedy is Slim Summerville, and Jane Darwell is his wife. John Qualen, father of the Quintuplets in "The Country Doctor" and "Reunion," is the small town sheriff. Douglas Fowley is the gangster. With added comedy being supplied by Stepin Fetchit, a southern Negro snowbound in the mountains, other players who have important roles are Paul Hurst, Allen Lane and Spencer Charters.

Probable release date, March 1.

"Interval" Completed

Announcement that J. A. Rank, millionaire backer of British National and Pinewood, had resigned his chairmanship of British National though retaining 45 per cent of its total share issue, coincided quite accidentally with the completion of BN's Arthur Tracey picture, "Interval for Romance." It is not believed to imply any change of plans by BN, in which the main financial holding is now that of Lady Yule, also a sterling millionaire.

"Interval for Romance" is of interest as the work of England's only woman producer, Dora Nirva, who was graduated from the post of 30 shillings a week script girl to Walter Forde, became an assistant director to Victor Saville on "Faithful Heart," unit production manager on "Little Friend" for Gaumont British, and production manager for the Toeplitz "Beloved Vagabond," on the way to her present appointment by John Corfield, managing director of BN. Very much a musical, "Interval for Romance" features Lew Stone and His Band, and Rawicz and Landauer, piano duetists, in support of Tracey. It has been directed by Jean de Marguenat, of "La Robe Rouge" fame, and is BN's third film, but its first at Pinewood, in which it has a substantial holding.

Inside—the Forest

Still another Denham stage has gone exterior. They planted a forest under the roof for London's "Knight without Armour," and something of the same sort has been achieved for the Robert T. Kane production, "Under the Red Robe," for which Victor Seastrom has been directing against woodland glades that are mainly synthetic.

Building up the stage picture, the art director discovered that lilies and roses, not to mention dahlias and delphiniums, would be an anachronism in a picture of the France of 1630. The great Richelieu, one of the main figures in the Kane picture, knew only such simple blooms as asters and stocks.

They ate with fingers at that date, but in this detail the producers are putting consideration for the film fans' feelings before historical accuracy. "Annabella" and Conrad Veidt, leads, with Sophie Stewart and Wyndham Goldie, are in the current sequences.

Wilcox Starts

A stilt-walking clown takes a look at what makes the wheels go 'round during the taking of a circus sequence of "Make Up", Standard International feature directed at Sound City, London, by Alfred Zeisler.

Jack Raymond has done first scenes at Pinewood for the Herbert Wilcox production of "The Frog," a considerable success as a comedy thriller on the West End stage. Gordon Harker has one of his London character parts in this Edgar Wallace adaptation, and in the cast is Vavian Gaye, a nineteen year old novice who got a long-term contract from Mr. Wilcox on the strength of her first tests. Noah Beery, Carol Goodner, Felix Aylmer and Esme Percy are also in the cast.

Korda Rests

Alexander Korda has gone for a few days rest to St. Moritz before beginning a new season's production program at Denham. At the studio in the meantime Josef von Sternberg is taking camera tests of artists and costumes for "I, Claudius," and among other things has passed the robe which Merle Oberon will wear as Messalina.

The outdoor lot known as City Square is occupied by a set for "Knight without Armour," in which timber-laden barges lie at the quay of a Russian town. Robert Donat has scenes in which he is seen escaping from Bolshevik soldiers.

Victor Saville is doing preliminary work on "South Riding," his third at Denham. The first, "Dark Journey," is being shown to the London trade this month and the second, "Storm in a Teacup," is being cut.

One of the "London" stars—the huge elephant Kala-Nag ridden by Sabu, boy star of the Flaherty "Elephant Boy," is to become a London star in another sense. The London Zoo has bought him and he is walking 300 miles to make the ship at Madras.

Rex Harrison, following on the lead opposite Miriam Hopkins in "Men are not Gods," and with Vivien Leigh in "Storm in a Teacup," has been given a long-term contract by Mr. Korda.

Itemized

Adrianne Renn, Continental stage star, has been signed for the Premier-Stafford "The Wife of General Ling," for which the Russian star Inkijinoff, famous through "Storm over Asia," is already cast.

Alexander Film Productions will make "Three Mad Men," from a Dave Bader story, at Pinewood.

Austria Considering Compulsory Dubbing

The Austrian government is giving serious consideration to the introduction of measures conditioning the importing of American films into Austria. The most important factor in the plan is understood to be a requirement that American films be dubbed in German in Austria.

Robert Schless, Warner manager in Europe, declared in Vienna that dubbing there is impossible, citing as the first major objection the fact that such films are not permitted into Germany.

Indian Society Member Plans Production Tour

G. J. Pathak of the Motion Picture Society of India is planning a second tour of the capitals of Europe, starting in May, 1937, during which the party he will conduct will visit factories manufacturing raw materials, machinery and accessories required by motion picture studios, laboratories, theatres and other branches. Long visits are planned by the party in London, Paris, Berlin and Moscow to study actual production methods.

Proposes Argentina Stimulate Production

Dr. Miguel Navas has placed before the City Council of Buenos Aires a proposal for the awarding of cash prizes for the best Argentinian films produced each year. The Ministry of Justice has decreed that any producer desiring to utilize the cooperation of any government department must first submit his story for approval by the National Commission of Culture.

OSTRER EXPLAINS HIS SHIPBOARD STATEMENT

A Government regulation requiring American companies to buy English product to a value representing 25 per cent of the amount of money taken from England each year by American interests was suggested in London this week by Isidore Ostrer, in a press interview supplementing his shipboard statements of late last week.

Mr. Ostrer said in part, "I have a concrete proposal for the Government. They must realize that pictures cannot pay either cultural or cash dividends unless they achieve a world market. Let them say to American producers: continue to take £7,000,000 to £10,000,000 yearly from this country, but you must buy from us pictures to a value of 25 per cent of that amount."

"Blame America" seems to be the prescription of British producers for the fever heat to which Fleet Street interest in film finance arose with the rumors and denials and whatnot that followed announcement that receivers had been appointed for three companies controlled by the veteran producer, Julius Hagen—Twickenham Film Productions, Twickenham Distributors, and J. H. Productions—and a trade press story that two of the "Big Five" banks (Barclay, Midland, National Provincial, Lloyds, and Westminster) had decided to make no more advances to film interests.

The three Hagen companies were really one concern and, though the stepping in of preferential creditors (the Westminster Bank in the case of Twickenham Film Productions and C. T. Bowring & Co., for insurance interests, in that of the other two companies suggested that ordinary creditors might get very little and shareholders even less in a final winding-up, there was no reason to see a collapse of the British production industry in this single failure, even if the total deficit turned out to be in six figures.

Nevertheless the London press broke out into headlines and also discovered two things:

That British films had been financed by advances at very high rates, and

That, with costs paralleling the Hollywood scale, they had not made the American market.

Epitomizing the general comment, Paul Holt, Express film writer, explaining his headline, "British Films Face Loss of £2,000,000," declared: "Failure to penetrate the American market is the cause. More than 250 full-length films were made in the year, and fewer than a dozen have played to anything like the estimated profit in American cinemas. British producers have spent more than £5,000,000. Ignoring America, the most they can rely upon getting back from the home market and overseas is £3,000,000."

Mr. Holt and other writers also discovered the fact, commented on somewhat pungently by John Maxwell in his evidence before the Moyne Committee and long generally known in the industry, that a big percentage of British production has been financed by bank overdrafts guaranteed by insurance interests.

The procedure is that the insurance companies issue a policy to the producer to the amount of the overdraft. The producer pays for the policy at rather high premium rates. He also pays bank interest on the overdraft. A large amount of British production capital has cost 10 per cent per annum and more. When, as frequently happens, the capital is finished before the picture, and a second loan has to be arranged, the "more" is apt to be a lot.

The situation is further complicated by the fact that the insurance interests on occasion place some of their own risk with underwriters, insuring against having to pay out on the policy held by the producers. In all this the only interests not financially concerned in the success of the picture are the banks.

The banks, in this type of transaction, have not advanced a penny on film values.

They have given an overdraft on the strength of the credit-worthiness of the insurance interests.

So far as they have refused to grant further advances on this type of policy it is because the insurance interests have been unable to provide security.

The banks have never done "film business", in the sense of backing a production plan. Even in the case of the big groups their advances have been based on tangible assets. Therefore, the story of a dry-up by the banks, which started the press-scare, is quite inaccurate. It is inaccurate even as regards "production insurance" finance; overdrafts were being granted on the type of policy described even while the newspapers were running their production collapse stories.

To talk of a possible shortage of capital for the British production industry is misleading. There is a widely held opinion that it has been financed on much too lavish a scale and it is notorious that a great deal of the money has gone to persons quite unfit to be trusted with it. Many of the companies nominally capitalized at £100 and working on insurance loans, have been run with almost incredible incompetence. Films have been made from scripts written or altered "on the floor." Imported Hollywood stars, at more than Hollywood rates, have been left idle, but not unpaid, for weeks because no proper production schedule has been worked out. For double or more the amount spent on a Hollywood "A" film, this type of producer achieves a picture of "quickie" quality.

These pictures, for which it can certainly be claimed that, in cost, they have been "made on the Hollywood scale", naturally fail to make the American market. Many of them are not good enough for British exhibition, even with the compulsion of the Quota.

Nevertheless, "absence of an American release" is the reason put forward for the failure of British production financed and conducted in the way described.

The fallacy behind the assumption that because British production has spent £5,000,000—to adopt Mr. Holt's figures—it must recover that amount plus working figures—it must recover that amount plus working expenses and profits, is painfully obvious, but only Mr. Alexander Korda, in a temperate and closely reasoned letter to the Daily Telegraph, seems publicly to have stressed the fact that, if you give your money to a financial adventurer without film qualifications, he is not likely to supply masterpieces for the American or any other market.

Blame Films Act Also

The inevitable collapse of a large percentage of the type of British production companies which work on "insurance" capital has been foreseen for a long time. There in fact have been several such failures, attracting no special attention. Many find the original cause in unsound economic conditions created by the Films Act, yet an increase of the quota, rather than its abolition, is now being considered.

The tendency to blame it all on to America is not confined to the frankly wildcat type of producer. Julius Hagen is a man who made pictures profitably for several years, yet in announcing a new contract to make twelve features a year for Mr. Maxwell of Associated British Pictures, he told a press luncheon party that the ultimate failure of his Twickenham enterprises was due to the fact that, in place of profitable inexpensive films for British use, he began to make dear ones for world distribution and failed to get it on an adequate scale.

Mr. Hagen made some particular as well as some general assertions in support of an accusation, about the American trade, that "they are not friendly; they don't try to help us, and they never have tried to help us." He alleged that the distributors of "Scrooge," after demanding 140 prints at Christmas, 1935, excused poor bookings by the statement that the film was too late for general release. "This Christmas," he said, "they forecast $200,000 to $220,000, but the actual American total receipts on the film are $6,000."

Costs and Receipts

The basis of an American distribution deal, he said, should be: "You are taking millions out of England; give us dollars when you make the contract and we will sign your big artistes and give you the sort of picture you give us."

A valuable feature of Mr. Hagen's speech was the disclosure of the following actual cost and world receipts of some of the pictures which Twickenham made after it undertook its own distribution:

	Cost	Receipts
"Scrooge"	£24,000	£33,000
"The Private Secretary"	£30,000	£25,000
"The Last Journey"'	£27,000	£24,000
"A Fire Has Been Arranged"	£29,000	£18,000
"She Shall Have Music"	£48,000	£60,000
"In the Soup"	£32,000	£20,500

The most expensive picture, "She Shall Have Music," showed the best margin of receipts over costs. Many British critics ranked "The Private Secretary" as a weak film. "A Fire Has Been Arranged" had a distinctively British appeal. Also, the world gross of the pictures is considerably less, in five of the six cases, than the United kingdom gross obtained on many British pictures. In fact, Mr. Hagen's figures seem to prove very little, in regard to the American market, unless it is that the U. S. failed to make up for disappointing British receipts on these comparatively low-cost films.

Mr. Hagen puts the maximum commercial cost of a British picture, for British distribution, at £25,000 and his new company probably will work within that figure for its output for ABP. Perhaps the shortest comment on the existing British situation is that for £25,000 Mr. Hagen probably will make as good a picture as many which cost £60,000 to £80,000 and which are a dead loss, due, of course, to a "disappointing American release."

Reisman Hits at Moyne Plan

Receiving the British trade press on his arrival in London, Phil Reisman, foreign manager of Radio Pictures, made a more outspoken attack on the quota proposals of the Moyne Report than previously had been heard from any American executive.

If the Films Act were revised on the lines of the Report, he said, the ultimate increase of the Quota to 50 per cent and the uncertainty created by the Quality Clause might put American companies out of business in England.

Even if it were practicable to split production between Hollywood and London, a run of poor British pictures might make an American producer insolvent, he aded.

Reduction of the Hollywood schedule to accommodate pictures made in England would mean an increase of production costs of from 25 to 30 per cent, which would entail higher rental charges, for inferior pictures.

Radio would make two or three pictures a year in England even if there were no Quota, but it was physically impossible to make fifteen or twenty, said Mr. Reisman. He emphasized the impossibility of accurately scheduling an artist for a British film following a Hollywood picture.

The serious effects on public patronage of the fall in quality which would follow the reduction of Hollywood production was also cited by the Radio chief.

That the Hays office might cooperate in counter-suggestions from U.S. distributors to the Board of Trade, and that the American State Department would consider the general trade situation if the Moyne proposals were adopted, were other statements made.

Wage Reductions Ordered

London Films has advised all employes that salary cuts will be instituted "as part of a policy of the most stringent economy to safeguard the future of the company." The cuts will be of five per cent on salaries of £5 to £10, 10 per cent on salaries from £10 to £20, and 15 per cent on salaries over £20.

It is understood the reductions were ordered by the Prudential Life Assurance Co., as a condition of its agreement to back Alexander Korda, head of London Films, for another year.

Canada Fails to Become Excited

by J. A. COWAN

in Toronto

To the report that British producers were "facing bankruptcy," as cabled by Grant Dexter, Toronto Globe-Winnipeg Free Press correspondent in London, theatre folk here lifted eyebrows instead of viewing with alarm. As one manager put it, "It was only a few weeks ago that we were asked to get alarmed because of the amount of Hollywood capital that was invested in British film production and because the British industry was being Americanized."

On the general public, perhaps, the whole thing has had an unfortunate effect, since the patriotic angle does not work at the Canadian box-office and this "scare story" popped just at a time when the Canadian appetite for British fare was steadily improving. The industry, in Canada, takes it to mean that the end is arriving for the British frenzied finance boom in celluloid.

To newspapermen, Col. John A. Cooper, head of Motion Picture Exhibitors and Distributors of Canada, said that the British quota laws and a dearth of suitable story material were responsible for British film troubles. He estimated that 85 per cent of Canada's films were currently coming from U. S.

"I'm convinced that they'd have done better if they had never had a quota law," he said. "Over-production makes a man lazy."

BOOKS IN REVIEW

COLOR CINEMATOGRAPHY, by Maj. Adrian Bernard Klein. Boston: American Photographic Publishing Company. 5¼ x 8½. 350 pp. (Printed in England.)

This is at once a history of the unremitting efforts of science to add color to the effects of the motion picture image, and a text book on the many and somewhat discouragingly complex methods pursued in these efforts. Bringing together for the first time in a unified work the mass of technical data developed and compiled by numerous investigators and inventors, the author (he is himself technical director of a company controlling certain processes) has used them to compose no mere handbook, but to formulate as well a statement of persistent practical problems, and he does not shy away from occasions to present his own conclusions about them.

Dealing with the subject in two general divisions—the first, theory and practice; the second, color physics and physiology—the discussion is particularly thorough in its treatment of the specific systems which have been offered for commercial application. These are detailed in relation to the basic processes which they represent (additive, subtractive, etc.).

In opening the chapter on the general theoretical basis of color in cinematography, the author includes consideration of color projection, concerning which too little has been said, or perhaps, about which too little has been available to say. Recognizing the difficulty encountered in the theatre when introducing color films into a system geared to black-and-white, he suggests restoration of the unperforated screen and of the pure carbon arc, and also reduction of the screen area. These suggestions rather beg the question, however, since color can never be more than one of the many factors in determining the characteristics of either the projection system or the size and form of the auditorium. It is highly questionable, in any event, that a solid screen would offer appreciable advantage in color projection. The importance given it here is probably derived from the author's belief that, as he states, the present perforations reduce the reflection power of the screen surface as much as 30 per cent. That was true of the original porous screen. Perforations, however (when the standardized widths are maintained), represent a reduction in reflected light of only nine per cent.

This citation—and a few others of similar nature might be added—should by no means suggest that the book is not well informed. To the contrary, it is obviously a painstaking performance, and probably as complete as the matter warrants at this time, with an emphasis on the practical aspects of actual application that commends it to a place among the equipment of all persons concerned with the technics of motion picture production. It is profusely illustrated with both specimens in halftone and explanatory graphs.

In addition to the divisions already indicated, there is an historical summary, beginning with Newton's color vision theory of 1672, and including a list of color patents taken out since 1875; also an appendix containing brief discussions of Technicolor lenses, the Klein tricolor camera, the Harmonicolor process and a glossary of terms used in color technology. There are two indices, one by personal names, the other by subjects.

It is not surprising, of course, that nowhere in the book does Mr. Klein attempt to define color in cinematography. His closing chapter on color rendering and color effects leads up to one, but as is the case generally (if not exclusively), no distinction is observed between real color and realistic color—that is to say, between color as we apprehend it around us and the effect of color stimulated by reflected light from a framed focal point with which the spectator has no spatial identity. This, as the writer views it, is a fundamental part of the problem.—G. S.

GERMAN FILM INDUSTRY IS PUSHED FURTHER TOWARD "CENTRALIZATION"

Theatre Attendance Increasing, but Only One-third of Total Capacity Is Occupied; Independence Reduced

Film Export Income Drops to 12 Per Cent; Actor Salaries Tripled; Production Standards Improved by Barring Double Bills

"Current tendencies" in the German motion picture industry are described in a report received by the United States Department of Commerce, at Washington, from R. M. Stephenson, U. S. Trade Commissioner at Berlin. His observations include the following:

Centralization of German film industry is nearly completed.

Independence of theatre owners has been greatly lessened.

Attendance at German theatres is increasing, bringing rental increases of some 25 per cent to distributors. However, only one-third of the total capacity is being occupied.

German income from film exports has dropped from 40 per cent in 1933 to 12 per cent.

Shortage of talent has brought a tripled increase in actors' salaries.

Compulsory elimination of double bills is bringing higher quality of production.

Production costs have doubled in two years, cutting completed production by 30 per cent of original schedules.

A sharp shortage of capital is noticeable.

Reports on the actual conditions of the industry in Germany have been vague, at best, for some time, because of the restrictions imposed on the press and the careful supervision on publication exercised by the Hitler Government. Mr. Stephenson's report to the United States Commerce Department explains many conditions about which little or nothing is known in America. His report follows:

During the 1935-36 season, attendance and receipts of German cinemas were about 35 per cent greater than in 1932-33, the worst year of the depression, and some 15 per cent higher than for the 1934-35 season. This favorable trend is continuing in the present season and appears even to be somewhat accelerated, as some distributors report increases in receipts of as much as 25 per cent or more as compared with last year. That there is still plenty of room for improvement, however, is indicated by the fact that during the past season only about one-third of the total capacity of the cinemas was occupied.

Statistics of attendance and receipts in recent years are as follows, the totals for visitors and receipts being in terms of millions and ticket price in reichmarks:

	1925	1928	1932-1933*	1933-1934*	1934-1935	1935 1936
Visitors........	272	353	238	247	280	305
Receipts.........	187	275	176	178	205	240
Average price per ticket.....	0.69	0.78	0.74	0.72	0.73	0.75

There has been an interesting increase in cinema attendance in small and medium-sized towns. During the second quarter of 1936, as compared with the same quarter of the preceding year, attendance in large towns increased by 17 per cent, that in medium-sized towns by 26 per cent, and that in small towns by 33 per cent. Considering that the large towns supply about 70 per cent of total attendance, although their population is only about 30 per cent of the total, there would appear to be still a large field for further increase in the smaller towns.

GERMANS PRODUCE FRENCH PICTURES

The increasing number of French language films being produced in German studios is said to be causing concern to the French motion picture industry, according to a report to the United States Department of Commerce from assistant trade commissioner E. C. Taylor in Paris.

At present such pictures are admitted to the French market free of duty and it is reported that there is a movement by the French producers to have restrictions placed on their importation.

In 1932-33 receipts from exports covered about 40 per cent of German production costs. In 1933-34 this proportion fell to 18 per cent and in the last two seasons it has been only around 12 per cent. For most of the super films export profits still take care of 15 to 20 per cent of production costs, but for many of the films export receipts are insignificant and about half of the German film production cannot be exported at all.

Partially as a result of the emigration of "non-Aryan" artists and the enlargement of film production in Austria, salaries to the well known actors remaining in Germany have been greatly increased. Over the last three years it is estimated that salaries have been more than tripled and that popular actors are now receiving reichmarks 70,000 to 120,000 per film and singers reichmarks 200,000 to 350,000. The increase in star salaries has been reflected proportionately in the lower grades and "second-rate" actors are now receiving reichmarks 40,000 to 50,000 per film and character actors reichmarks 8,000 per month. Salaries of the technical staff have been similarly raised.

Picture Quality Emphasized

With the elimination of the double feature program, greater emphasis is being placed on the quality of feature films. This development is in answer to the natural demands of the film audiences whose programs have been reduced and who more and more tend to go to see a particular feature rather than just to "go to the movies." The result has been an increase in the technical and artistic quality and, consequently, a corresponding increase in the cost of production.

Current production costs are nearly double those of only two or three years ago, as the following figures of average film costs show:

1932-33	RM 220,000 - 250,000
1933-34	RM 300,000 - 350,000
1935-36	RM 400,000 - 450,000

To the above production costs must be added some reichmarks 80,000-100,000 for copying and for the required accessory program of cultural film and news reel and reichmarks 100,000 for distributing costs. This brings the average total expense in connection with each feature film, exclusive of advertising and incidentals, to about reichmarks 650,000. To reimburse this amount entirely from domestic receipts would require an attendance of more than 3,000,000, while the average attendance during the 1935-36 season was only 1,800,000.

The trend toward better pictures and the increase in production costs has caused more complete use of studio capacity. In 1933 studio operation averaged 47.2 per cent of capacity; in 1934 this increased to 54.0 per cent and in 1935 to 66.2 per cent. As the number of films produced in 1935 was about 25 per cent less than in 1933, the increase in employed capacity indicates that about 80 per cent more studio time is given each film than in 1933.

Critical Cost Situation

With production costs increased by 70 or 80 per cent over the past three years as against an increase of only 30 to 40 per cent in domestic receipts and a decline in export profits, a serious if not even a dangerous situation for the German film industry is clearly indicated. That this position has not become even more critical is due primarily to the fact that the German film industry has not been able to live up to its announced production program. Production has, in fact, been at an unexpectedly low level. For the 1934-35 season it was announced that 175 films would be produced (including those to be produced in Austria) but of these 60 could not be completed. Similarly for the 1935-36 season 155 films were announced, of which more than 30 were not completed. Had the industry been able actually to accomplish all that it had intended, its precarious position because of the unsatisfactory relation between costs and receipts would have been greatly emphasized.

The following table shows the decline in German production in recent years as well as the great reduction in the number of films exhibited in Germany:

The difficulties through which the German film industry has been passing have tended to eliminate the financially weaker members and have led to a quicker and more complete centralization than is to be found in any other branch of German industry.

Distribution Problems

In 1928 there were some 300 distributing companies operating in Germany. With the introduction of the sound film this number was greatly reduced but in 1932 nearly 25 per cent of German films were still distributed by small district distributors and an additional 33 per cent by medium-sized and small groups of distributors. The share of the smaller distributors in the distribution of foreign films also remained important. In 1933 came the elimination of the Jewish companies which had constituted considerably more than half of the total number of distributors and about a third of the remaining firms were put out of business by the Reichsfilm Chamber because of insufficient financial resources. During the 1934-35 season only about 25 or 30 per cent of the films exhibited, the total number of which had been greatly reduced, were distributed by nine or ten medium-sized firms and a few smaller ones. By 1935-36 the small district distributors had almost entirely disappeared and of the medium-sized firms only three were still actually operating.

In the meantime the large distributors also had suffered. (In 1934 there was the Aafa bankruptcy, in 1935 the Terra had new difficulties.) Most of the large distributors now operating originated in former bankruptcies and they are working with capitals of RM 100,000-600,000 instead of RM 5,000,000-10,000,000 as before the crisis. Ufa and Tobis are the only concerns which have remained intact throughout this transformation but they have had other sources of income aside from film production and distribution. In 1936-37 these two firms will distribute about two-thirds of all German film production.

Production Changes

Most German films in the past have been produced not by the distributors themselves but by independent producing firms on order from the distributors. Such producing firms have been small, making only one or two films a year or, in a few cases, three to five. Under this system the producer supplied some 20 per cent of the cost of production, 20 to 40 per cent came from advance sale of the foreign rights, and the German distributor had to guarantee 40 to 60 per cent. The net profit usually was divided equally between the producer and the distributor.

With the elimination of Jewish capital from the industry and the disappearance of most of the independent producers, the old system has undergone a complete change. In some cases new firms attempted to go into production with insufficient financial means and lost their capital in their first unsuccessful attempts. As a result of this situation the responsibility, both artistic and commercial, has passed more and more to the distributor. Recently with the decline in exports the distributor has also had to guarantee that part of production costs (20 to 40 per cent) previously covered by the sale of the foreign rights.

Today the film producer is only technically independent and is actually merely a production director engaged anew for every film by the distributor. In addition to his salary he gets a certain percentage (usually 7½ per cent) of the production costs for his office and other incidental expenses.

As a result of the greater concentration in distribution and production, the independence of the theatre owners has been greatly lessened, the more so because of the scarcity of films. It has become more and more difficult to make favorable terms with the distributors and the predominance of the large distributors has enforced block-booking by which the theatre owner is obliged to bear a part of the risk. On the other hand, gross receipts of the theatre owners during the past season were at least 40 per cent higher than in 1932-33.

Increased production costs, the elimination of Jewish capital, and the decline in exports have resulted in a sharp shortage of capital in the film industry. New capital has seldom been obtainable and the available supply has been reduced by losses during the crisis. In an attempt to remedy the situation and especially to replace emigrated Jewish capital, the Film Kredit Bank was established in 1933. A new financial burden has been placed upon the film industry by the decree of the Reichs Film Chamber at the beginning of 1936, according to which production is to be more evenly distributed over the year. As there is normally a lag of six or nine months between the completion of a film and its first run, the practical effect of this decree is to enforce during the transition period the production of a two years' supply of films during 18 months. It is estimated that the new production plans will require an additional capital outlay of RM 15,000,000 to 20,000,000.

ANTI-FASCIST PLAY CONTEST STARTED

The New York City Division of the American League Against War and Fascism, in its search for dramatic material, has announced the opening this week of a play contest which will close April 1. Three prizes will be offered for manuscripts of 10 to 30 minutes running time on any subject within the scope of the league's interests and activities. Among the judges will be John Howard Lawson, playwright; Alfred Kreymborg, poet and playwright, and Mordecai Gorelik, designer.

Deficit for 1935-36 Season

In spite of the increase in attendance and the better utilization of films (because of the reduced production) the 1935-36 season is considered to have shown a very considerable deficit. Receipts and expenditures for the season have been reliably estimated as follows:

RECEIPTS
Of German distributors	RM 70,000,000
From exports of German films	7,000,000
Total receipts	77,000,000
EXPENDITURES
Production costs	50,000,000
Costs for copying, accessory program, distribution	25–30,000,000
Licenses for foreign films	10–12,000,000
Total expenditures	85–92,000,000
Deficit	8–12,000,000

The deficit in the 1935-36 season as compared with 1932-33 is the result of increased production costs and decreased export receipts which offset the increased receipts from domestic distribution. The relative changes between the two seasons are as follows:

Domestic receipts	+	RM 20,000,000
Receipts from exports	—	10,000,000
Total receipts	+	10,000,000
Production costs	+	RM 20,000,000

These losses have not been felt equally by all branches of the industry. Many of the smaller distributors and producers have seen all of their capital consumed in the last few years and their suppliers—raw film manufacturers, studios, copying firms, and so on—have suffered with them. The larger companies have better withstood the crisis but even these are lucky if they closed the last fiscal year without a loss, and in most cases the losses were doubtless considerable. It is said that the three or four features in a block of films usually showed some profit but that this was offset by losses of RM 100,000-200,000 on the dozen or so medium length and short films in the block so that unless there was an unexpected profit on some cheap film, the distributor could seldom avoid a considerable loss.

Various efforts are naturally being made to overcome the handicaps from which the industry is suffering and to this end a principal means is the attempt to increase film earnings. In some cases there is an appeal for public financial support on the ground that a given film has a national cultural value. As a rule, however, the efforts are directed at increasing receipts through greater attendance and at reducing production costs. In the latter case the Film Kredit Bank is in a decisive position and the future of the industry depends to a great extent on the policy it adopts.

The desire to raise receipts for German films naturally increases the opposition to the showing of foreign, especially of American films in Germany. Another means of easing the situation is exemplified in the negotiations with other countries (as Italy, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Austria, and Hungary) for associated production abroad.

Increasing Capital

Various plans are being discussed for increasing the amount of capital available to the film industry but so far no definite program has been determined and put into action. There have been attempts to attract foreign capital in blocked mark accounts into the industry and it has been suggested that the Government guarantees credit as it does in the case of second mortgages for housing construction. There have also been rumors, repeatedly denied, to the effect that the whole film industry would be taken over by the Government. As the theatre owners so far have been in a much better financial situation than the rest of the industry, there is considerable agitation to call on them for contributions. In this connection it is suggested that distribution charges be increased or that the owners should finance some of the important films themselves. It is also suggested that the owners might be called upon to pay a subsidy similar to that levied upon industry for the benefit of exports. As theatre owners profited from the reduction in taxes on films of particular value to the extent of RM 5,000,000-6,000,000 during the past year, it is urged that this surplus be handed over to the producers and distributors who were actually responsible for the excellence of the films in question.

The two large concerns, Ufa and Tobis, probably will be able to meet the demands for additional capital without public assistance but this will probably mean an increase in Tobis' capital and poor prospects for an UFA dividend.

While all attention has been concentrated on solving the difficulties of the present situation, a new threat has arisen with the successful appearance of the first important American color film in Europe. The German industry is of the opinion that it must also take up the production of colored films in order to meet this competition. They estimate, however, that production according to the American method would involve an increase in costs of 30 to 40 per cent without any increase in receipts. Unless, therefore, they are successful in developing a less expensive method of production there will be a further large demand for capital with no present indication of where it is to come from.

Bluebook School Question No. 53 was: (A) What are the basic requirements of a projector drive motor? (B) Just how, or in what way, does a P. E. cell "see" volume? (C) Describe two methods for adjusting exciter lamps.

The following made acceptable replies ("acceptable" meaning not necessarily wholly correct, but sufficiently so to show they have studied the matter and have at least a broad understanding of what is involved): S. G. E. Doe answers Section A as follows: "First, it must be of some make that has been well tested as to durability and reliability in operation, since if it fails the show stops, and the show must go on. Second, it must have capacity enabling it to perform its duty without overheating in temperatures that are often above 100 degrees F. and drive the projector at even, unvarying speed. Third, it must operate without excessive noise. Fourth, its starting torque must be sufficient to bring the projector up to speed within the specified time limit, but not sufficiently powerful to appreciably exceed that limit and thus put unnecessary strain not only upon all parts of the apparatus, but also upon the film. Fifth, its running speed must be such as will drive the projector at exactly 90-foot projection speed. Sixth, its lubrication must be reliable and not such as will cause the lubricant to be smeared around. Seventh, its rotating part must be evenly and exactly balanced, so that no unnecessary vibration will occur."

W. C. Brown says, "Basic requirements of a projector motor drive are: Large enough to drive the projector mechanism at proper speed without overload. Its pick-up fast enough to bring the mechanism up to speed so that proper change-overs may be made, but not fast enough to start things with a jerk and put unnecessary strain upon either the mechanism parts or the film. Driving speed must be constant and of such value that the film travels with an unvarying speed of exactly 90 feet per minute."

(B) R. and K. Wells answer, "The photocell 'sees' volume changes by 'seeing' and acting up on the variations in density of the photographic impressions upon the variable density sound track, or the variations in transparent and opaque areas of what we call the RCA sound track. If more light reaches the cell at any instant of time, the cell 'sees' the increase and responds with added volume, or vice versa."

J. R. Prater says, "P. E. Cells 'see' volume as contrast between light and dark, as the differences or changes in light intensity falling upon the active element of the cell. If the change be slight, there then will be only a slight change in current supplied by the cell, which same is the 'sound current'—the current supplied to the amplifier—hence there will be slight alteration in the volume. However, in the event what the cell 'sees' has light fluctuations of the same frequency as before, but of greater contrast as between light and dark, it will create in the cell current the same frequency, but of greater difference above or below the normal d. c. voltage applied to the cell, therefore while the sound current produced will be of the same frequency as before, it will have much greater volume."

"The second and best method is to use a high-frequency test film of 9,000 cycles, with an output meter connected into the monitor circuit. The lamp is then adjusted until the meter registers maximum volume."

R. A. Hooker says, "The best method of which I am aware is to use an output meter in conjunction with a test film of about 9,000 cycles. The exciter lamp may, by this method, be adjusted until the meter registers maximum output. This is a much better method than holding a white card before the P. E. cell. Very good results may be obtained by using the card, but it will take much longer; also, it is very much more difficult to secure an adjustment that will give best results by that method."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 58

(A) At what point do we regard a water pipe or electric wire as having reached normal capacity?

(B) Explain why a small amount of current flows (power consumed) when the switch of an a.c. circuit is open; also, the reason why this loss is increased when the switch is partly closed.

(C) Explain the difference in Ohm's law as stated, and as it applies to a.c. circuits.

T. F. Bochert puts it this way: "Exciter lamp focus must be very accurate if best results are to be obtained. In normal course of operation, maximum correctness is not obtained by adjusting either lenses or slit, but by careful adjustment of the lamp itself, which may be moved until in desired position and then locked in place. A rough test of focus is to hold a white card before and close to the P. E. cell, adjusting the lamp until a clear, white oval of light is had.

"The more accurate method, however, is to use a loop of high frequency test film, 6,000 to 9,000 cycles, with an output meter connected into the loudspeaker circuit. [Monitor, you mean, do you not?—F. H. R.] The meter reads sound output in decibels. When the adjustment is such that maximum volume is obtained, the adjustment is at its best, and maximum volume will result, provided all things else are in correct adjustment and kept perfectly clean."

M. and J. Devoy say, "There is only one way to do anything we know of and that is the right way. In adjusting exciter lamp focus the right way is to use a 9,000-cycle test film with a proper output meter connected into the monitor circuit. Adjustment is then made so that maximum volume is obtained, the lamp locked into position and all is well. The light-on-a-card method is a makeshift. It is far better than nothing, of course, but the right way is the right way, as we advised the management when we requisitioned a test film and meter."

Ambassador-Conn-Melody

WITH LOVE AND KISSES: Pinky Tomlin, Toby Wing—Could have been made a big picture but lacks money spent so you have a so-so picture. Don't try to put this on alone. It will not do the trick.—W. B. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Columbia

AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED: Mary Astor, Melvyn Douglas—Rather slim Sunday business just before Christmas. It rates as good entertainment but hardly as a special.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

COME CLOSER, FOLKS: James Dunn, Marian Marsh—This isn't entertainment, it's a waste of film. I tried to shelve this one but Columbia talked me into playing it, but I got a break, the weather was so cold nobody came anyway, so I got by all right. Running time, 61 minutes. Played January 16.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FUGITIVE SHERIFF, THE: Ken Maynard, Beth Marion—We ran into a snowstorm and business was below average. Reasonably good western. Played December 19.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

NORTH OF NOME: Jack Holt, Evelyn Venable—This picture would have been OK if the producers had wanted to make entertainment instead of turning out junk for the double feature theatre. Two-thirds of the pictures they make now are that type of stuff. I don't know what to call them but they look like they were turned out of a sausage mill. They try to put a story into six reels and it just can't be done and still make good entertainment. Running time, 63 minutes. Played January 2-3.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PANIC ON THE AIR: Lew Ayres, Florence Rice—Good enough melodrama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby—This is a nice picture, not a special, but will do some extra business if handled right. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 19.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

BULLETS OR BALLOTS: Edward G. Robinson, Joan Blondell—Good cops and robbers story. Good Saturday biz.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN BLOOD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Haviland—Truly a masterpiece. A picture that was well produced and well acted. Pleased our entire audience. This picture was just romantic enough to please the younger set, had enough action to please the children, and enough history and background to please the adults. 12 reels and a fine picture for any theatre to play. Running time, 115 minutes. Played December 31-January 2.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN'S KID, THE: Sybil Jason, Guy Kibbee, May Robson—Little better than average program picture with one of the cutest little kids ever to grace a silver screen. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 1-2.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb., Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN'S KID, THE: Guy Kibbee, Sybil Jason—We don't believe that Sybil Jason is destined to become a great star, at least as a child, but Guy Kibbee is great in this picture and satisfactory except for her crying scene in the jail, but totaled up it's a good small town picture which drew good business and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. Played December 27-28.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—This picture will do very nice business everywhere it is played. It really tells a very interesting story as well as giving one the entire history of the China Clipper. Good print. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 29-30.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Patricia Ellis, Dennis Moore, Mickey Rooney—Our patrons eat it up. Played on a Bank Night when the money was low and done a nice business. Your patrons will like this racing picture that's different. Running time, 60 minutes.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Fair entertainment, but Warners used to make them better. A miserable role for Joan Blondell.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Something wrong here. Entertaining enough for a double bill but not enough stuff for a special. Am waiting impatiently for Warners to deliver just one hit. So far I haven't had a box office success from them this or last year. Running time, 91 minutes. Played January 10-11.—Mrs. Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE MEN ON A HORSE: Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell—For some reason this did a flop at the box office contrary to my expectations. While funny, it is not the hilarious farce I expected, or maybe the small crowd made me sour. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 10-11.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

NINE DAYS A QUEEN: Nova Pilbeam—Better hide out when this is over if you don't want to be mobbed. Pay for it and don't play, and you'll be ahead. Played January 15.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Invincible

EASY MONEY: Onslow Stevens, Kay Linaker—Here you have one that will cause them to talk. My opinion is that it is the best racket picture ever made and it is made good because of fine direction, great cast and timely story. It is worth playing time in any theatre, and especially right now because of the fact the law is running down these rackets in the large cities. Do not miss playing this picture.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Never having seen "The Thin Man" was unable to make a comparison, but this gay, rollicking comedy-mystery brought out an exceptionally large crowd despite inclement weather and kept them laughing constantly after the first couple reels. Leo has our permission to roar over this one. Running time, 112 minutes. Played January 15-16.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

BONNIE SCOTLAND: Laurel and Hardy—Picked up this old one for a New Year's Eve program and ran with four musical and comedy shorts to good business. It's an amusing aggregation of nonsense.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart—Some of our patrons did not care for it. Personally I think it had more entertainment than any picture we have run in a long time. Played January 10-11.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—Words almost fail me when I try to express the uselessness of it all. I agree with any one that the picture was an hour too long and taken up with too much gorgeousness. Give to us long suffering exhibitors a few pictures which will make money and not wear our patrons down to the point where one show a year is all they dare to sit through. Also don't compel us to raise the price and discourage the few regular patrons we may have. A box office flop. Running time, 180 minutes. Played December 13-14.—Mrs. Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—Wonderful production to nice business. Played January 11-12.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—Fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Charlie Chase—Why would a producer of the MGM reputation release a much too long comedy which would have made fairly good as a two-reeler? Certainly no one could class this with most of the finished product turned out by this great organization. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 30-31.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Charlie Chase—Good comedy that kept them laughing most of the time. Did not draw so well but pleased all that came. Played January 14-15.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

LAST OF THE PAGANS: Mala, Lotus Long—Just fair. Of no interest to the average American customer. Give us a western in preference to these foreign made films and we won't kick. No business, which shows people don't care for this kind. Running time, eight reels. Played January 16.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LIBELED LADY: William Powell, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Fine picture that drew extra business and pleased all. Consider this outstanding entertainment. Played January 7-8.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

LONGEST NIGHT, THE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Very interesting little playet! Certainly you could not class it as a feature when it was only 51 minutes long. The suspense was good and the story held the interest to the end. This Rice girl is swell! Running time, 51 minutes. Played January 6-7.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MISTER CINDERELLA: Jack Haley, Betty Furness—Good feature comedy with fair enough story and good laughs.—C. H. Sartorious, Capitol Theatre, Hartley, Iowa. General patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald—Here is a picture we were a little afraid of playing in a small town, but we were very much surprised to find out that it was a big hit, and we have had many, many requests for "Rose Marie." A picture which may be classed among great pictures of the industry. The music was wonderful, so was the acting. Running time, 105 minutes. Played January 5-6.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald—One of the finest pictures for some time. In spite of the fact that it was fairly old, it drew people who very seldom get away from the good old radio after dark. Running time, 111 minutes. Played January 5-6.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. Small town patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman—Good show to poor business. It's over the heads of the small town folks. Hard to follow if you're not well read up on a story of this kind. Running time, 13 reels. Played January 10-11.—Rudolph Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WE WENT TO COLLEGE: Walter Abel, Edith Atwater—Fairly entertaining comedy, but if they had cut out the drunk scenes there wouldn't have been much left.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WOMEN ARE TROUBLE: Stuart Erwin, Florence Rice—Swell entertainment. Good entertainment. Good story, good cast, thrills and comedy. This may not be a classic but it has what it takes to please the small town patronage. Running time, 59 minutes. Played January 6-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ACCUSING FINGER, THE: Paul Kelly, Marsha Hunt, Kent Taylor—Interesting, well directed story aimed at capital punishment as it shows the errors of circumstantial evidence. Played January 15-16.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

CASE AGAINST MRS. AMES, THE: Madeleine Carroll, George Brent—Our patrons were well impressed with "Mrs. Ames." A strong story well presented. Business slightly above the average. Played December 26.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Good. Plenty laughs with excellent music.—C. H. Sartorius, Capitol Theatre, Hartley, Iowa. General patronage.

GENERAL DIED AT DAWN, THE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll—Thought this a marvelous picture, but it died at the box office, having the poorest Sunday gross of any picture in years. Why? Don't know unless it was the title. Running time, 98 minutes. Played January 10-11.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West, Randolph Scott, Warren William—First of all, we had more walk outs with this picture than anything in a long time. Mae West turns in a good performance, as does every one connected with it, and it has its moments, but candidly I believe it would be better for Mae West's future if never played. This gal got more money than anyone in 1935 and turned out two bad ones. I wonder if she would get all the money in the world if she made two good ones. Can anyone tell me?—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. Small town patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West—You know your Mae West patrons. It's her poorest—and I hope her last. Played January 12.—D. E. Fitten, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West—First time Mae West has been on the screen in Limerick. Reports from visitors in Portland and Boston made me leery, but although it did not gross up to the toppers it did good business and a lot are sorry that they listened to the people who had seen it. It is OK for us common folks. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 15-16.—Sam A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West, Randolph Scott, Warren William—Played this on a natural date but did not seem to bring in the dough. I had a few curious customers, one of whom remarked he had never seen Mae West in a picture before, but had heard so many Mae West stories that his curiosity got the better of him and he just had to see what she looked like. Played January 1.—Mrs. Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

HEART OF THE WEST: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—This is the first of the "Hopalong" series we have ever had the pleasure of playing, and it was enjoyed thoroughly by our western fans. It looks like they're sure box office bets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HER MASTER'S VOICE: Edward Everett Horton, Peggy Conklin—Pleased. Normal business. Played December 12.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HIDEAWAY GIRL: Martha Raye, Shirley Ross—Martha Raye was the whole show, but it turned out to be better than an average program picture. Just enough dizzy stuff to put it over. Running time, 72 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. Small town patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RETURNS: William Boyd, Evelyn Brent—Liked these Mulford stories, but this one seemed to have been made in a hurry. Played January 8-9.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—A very delightful farce-comedy. Almost in the slapstick classification. My patrons expected a real jungle picture, but were entertained to the point of hysterics by the impossible situations. Anyone with a sense of humor could enjoy it. Double billed it so could not say if it had much box office draw or not. Played January 8-9.—Mrs. Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

TWO MORE SHOWMEN JOIN CONTRIBUTORS

From Montana and Iowa come two contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" whose names have been missing from the department for some time. They are:

Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Montana.

C. H. Sartorius, Capitol Theatre, Hartley, Iowa.

Read the reports of these showmen in the department this week.

LADY, BE CAREFUL: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—Fair midweek business just before Christmas. It seemed to please.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LET'S MAKE A MILLION: Edward Everett Horton—Paramount charged me money for this and got away with it. It is a very weak sister and will not draw and is not satisfactory screen fare.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

LET'S MAKE A MILLION: Edward Everett Horton—A dandy program picture suitable for Saturdays or Bank Nights. Running time, 65 minutes.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern—Very good program picture that did quite well at the box office. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Frances Farmer, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—One of the best pictures Bing has ever made, and what a supporting cast. Bob Burns is a knockout and Martha Raye will slay you. Your patrons will go away with a smile. This is one you will be proud to face them with. Play it and boost it. It's a life saver. We played it to only fair business. The weather was bad. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 7-8.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

ROSE BOWL: Eleanore Whitney, Tom Brown—Very favorable reaction especially from the younger set who are interested in football. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 29-30.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. Small town patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker—A good western. Held up fairly well against basketball competition.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker—Very good. I can't understand why this picture did not do better at the box office. I guess the weather must have been to blame. Running time, 106 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker—Why would a producing company allocate this just a little better than average western, held up principally by the cast and direction, in the highest bracket with percentage, and force an exhibitor to play on Sunday when it is a natural Saturday picture if there ever was one? These producers get funny ideas at times. Running time, 99 minutes. Played January 3-4.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jean Parker, Jack Okie—Interesting, full of excitement. Oakie held it up, but too long. The love-making scene was terrible. Running time, 98 minutes. Played December 27-28.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local patronage.

THREE ON THE TRAIL: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Another good western that pleased our Saturday patrons.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray, Fred Stone—One of the finest film achievements of all time. By far the best color yet made. Several mountain scenes so beautiful that one gasps in wonderment. But that is not all. Even without the color this would have been a four star picture. Each and every member of the cast puts his heart into the intense drama with the result that this famous old stage play is now recorded for posterity in a manner which does credit to the entire industry. Henry Fonda's characterization of Dave Tolliver, young feudist, should be kept in mind when the Motion Picture Academy award is being made this year. Now, next week, or ten years from now—this will be a special treat to your crowd. Running time, 102 minutes. Played January 16.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE: Gladys George, John Howard, Arline Judge—Valiant is any exhibitor who will play this after seeing it. Perfectly good, well made, well directed picture, but so talkative, so full of tiresome detail and so short of known stars, who can put over that stuff? Might as well play one pictorial or sport reel after another, so far as drawing and pleasing. Then, too, they make these "slow" pictures abnormally olng and the interesting pictures they cut to 60 or 70 minutes.—P. G. Estee, Esteel Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Republic

BIG SHOW, THE; Gene Autry, Kay Hughes—Far the poorest of this series so far. Nevertheless it drew well. Running time, seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebold, Iowa. General patronage.

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Kay Hughes—A perfect picture for our town. Drew above average and pleased everyone. We probably made a mistake playing it only one day. When your patrons complain about an eight-reel picture being too short, well, you know it's a good show. You'll be glad you played this picture. Played January 9.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Kay Hughes—The result of the national poll as recorded in the HERALD and in FAME notwithstanding Gene Autry is way and above any other western stars at our box office. "The Big Show" is well produced and better than any previous Autry we have shown. Pleased everyone, including myself. Excellent business. Running time, 70 minutes.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

GHOST TOWN GOLD: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune—A dandy western. In fact the best we've had in some time. Hats off to Republic for the best westerns made. Running time, 60 minutes.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

ROARIN' LEAD: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune—Consider this the best of the series and they are all good. Refreshing type of outdoor stories that are pleasing our patrons very much. You can't go wrong on these. Played January 16.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

RKO Radio

BRIDE WALKS OUT, THE: Gene Raymond, Barbara Stanwyck—So did everybody else. It's just too bad when we exhibitors are hooked, for there isn't anything we can do about such matters at the moment, but there's always a day of reckoning. Played January 1-2.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local patronage.

DANIEL BOONE: George O'Brien—Good picture, but the public does not go for those historical pictures any more. Running time, 77 minutes. Played January 9-10.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FARMER IN THE DELL: Fred Stone, Jean Parker—A story as humanly portrayed as life itself, and Fred Stone played his part in a manner that reminded us of Will Rogers. We believe that Fred Stone is the man to take Will Rogers' place from now on. Give him good stories and he will do the rest. Much better than all the big specials put together. Business off. Cold weather is the cause. Running time, seven reels. Played January 8-9.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta—Fair, but not too good. This picture needs a lot of padding. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 8-9.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local patronage.

M'LISS: Anne Shirley, John Beal—A great show. Good entertainment. Holds interest from start to finish. Running time, seven reels. Played January 13.—Rurolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

M'LISS: Anne Shirley, John Beal—Picture that was enjoyed by everyone. Due to adverse weather conditions did not enjoy as much business as we might have.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MUMMY'S BOYS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Good Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MUMMY'S BOYS: Wheeler and Woolsey—The poorest picture this team has turned out. I can't understand why the producers don't give this famous team some story to work on. They are just as good as they ever were if given half a chance, but this last story couldn't get a laugh in a feeble minded institute. Running time, 68 minutes. Played December 26-28.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

NIGHT WAITRESS: Margot Graham, Gordon Jones—And still this influx of gangster murder pictures continues. Can't nobody stop them? Running time, 60 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

NIGHT WAITRESS: Margot Graham, Gordon Jones—Another one of those gangster pictures. The public is so fed up on gangster pictures, they just don't like them. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SECOND WIFE: Walter Abel, Gertrude Michael—Fair program picture. No good at the box office. Running time, 71 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN, THE: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Good little program picture that pleased those that came to see it. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WINTERSET: Burgess Meredith, Margo—These so-called "arty" and Liberty four star pictures never drew their film rental for me. Very good acting, but after all just another gangster picture. Running time, 77 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AMBASSADOR BILL: Will Rogers—Did only 60 per cent of the average Will Rogers business, but even that figure is better than average business. This is one of Will's minor efforts and a poor medium for his talents, but even so it is well worth playing again. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 1-2.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Mighty good entertainment. Took in 10 cents more second night than first, that's unusual. There are several good characters, but the one with the "contraption" stole the honors. Boost it. Played January 13-14.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE RACE TRACK: Warner Oland—One of the best Chan pictures. The Chan pictures are all good. There is one thing that would make them still better, they should have more of a love story. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

15 MAIDEN LANE: Claire Trevor, Cesar Romero—Good picture but no drawing power. Pleased those who came. Played January 4.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

MESSAGE TO GARCIA: Wallace Beery, John Boles, Barbara Stanwyck—A very good picture, but did not draw for some reason. It may have been the weather. Everyone who came liked it. Nine reels, good print. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 8-9.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou—A surprise picture. New, refreshing star in this, Miss Henie. Audience liked this very much and told me so, which happens seldom. Step on this, as I think it is the very best in many moons.—C. H. Sartorius, Capitol Theatre, Hartely, Iowa. General patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Patsy Kelly, Stuart Erwin—Very good football picture, with a lot of comedy in it. Running time, 92 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou—This pleased about 90 per cent and in spite of unfavorable weather our business was good. There was a difference of opinion regarding the Ritz Bros. Most of the adverse comment was to the effect that the picture would have been stronger if the first two or three appearances of these brothers had been omitted. Played January 1-2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

UNDER TWO FLAGS: Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen, Rosalind Russell—Good Saturday business. No complaints on the length of the picture or the lack of comedy relief.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WHITE FANG: Michael Whalen, Jean Muir—"Country Beyond" was much better and less money. Can't see the extra price for "White Fang." I was stuck on this one. Slim Summerville held this one up for fair comment. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 3-4.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local patronage.

United Artists

CATHERINE THE GREAT: Douglas Fairbank, Jr., Elizabeth Bergner—Played this on weekend with a western, receiving satisfactory comments and normal business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GHOST GOES WEST, THE: Robert Donat, Jean Parker—So did the audience. More walkouts than I have seen since "Crime Without Passion." By the way, whatever did become of Hecht and MacArthur?—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY; Freddie Bartholomew, Dolores Costello Barrymore—Rather disappointing Sunday business. Star and story didn't draw as well as they deserved.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THESE THREE: Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea—A dramatic that wasn't appreciated by the masses. We are sorry to report exceptionally poor business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THINGS TO COME: Raymond Massey—These foreign-made pictures don't click here. The majority verdict was that they didn't know what it was all about.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THUNDER IN THE EAST: Charles Boyer, Merle Oberon—A picture that failed at the box office, dissatisfying those who come. Pass it up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

LUCKIEST GIRL IN THE WORLD, THE: Jane Wyatt, Louis Hayward—A dandy picture, one that will be liked by most everyone. While it does not have box office it will give your patrons a real entertainment. All you girls better perk up because this Jane Wyatt girl is coming under the wire, and my opinion is that she is going to be very soon a winner. You exhibitors who have a hard time to find suitable Sunday pictures should set this in.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

SHOW BOAT: Irene Dunne, Allan Jones—The big guys all pop off about what they have and where the theatre business would be if it were not for their big percentage pictures and musicals, but it was up to Universal to show them how to make one. Twelve reels of real entertainment. Running time, 112 minutes. Played January 8.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. Small town patronage.

YELLOWSTONE: Henry Hunter, Judith Barrett—Good action drama for Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—If ane one wanted to see this picture in the first place they were discouraged by the trailer which Warners prepared at such great cost. In fact, all Warner pictures are being ruined by trailers which tell how many thousand feet high the stage has to be to accommodate how many million actors and how much everything cost. It is getting to the point where the patrons laugh out loud at the trailers which promise them something nobody could possibly produce. And they stay away from the show because they know that even though the picture may be one of the year's ten best it can't possibly be what the trailer says. Personally myself and the rest of the hired help would have enjoyed it very much except that the poor receipts sort of dampened our enthusiasm. Played December 27-28.—Mrs. Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—This picture played to only fair business, but it was no fault of the picture. Its true the picture is long but there were no walkouts and those who saw it praised it very highly. We no doubt would done a big business if the weather had been good. You needn't be afraid of this one on account of its length. Your patrons will stay to the end and like it. Running time, 139 minutes. Played January 4-5.—J. B. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—I took such a beating on this one I am afraid I cannot give a fair report. A truly wonderful picture but not for the small town. It is altogether too long and entirely lacking in comedy. The cast is the best ever, acting fine, photography excellent, but the law prohibits shanghaiing 'em and that is the only way to get them to come to this class of show. Think it pleased nearly of the very small attendance, but I cannot afford to run this class of picture. Might better have booked a Western. I could at least have broken even on that. Running time, 139 minutes. Played January 8-10.—Glayds E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—I'm a poor business man, or I would show all westerns and action pictures, but I'm determined to educate our patrons into appreciating the better type of pictures—only how are you going to do it if they don't come out to see them? This is an excellent picture. My only complaint is that there wasn't enough of Miss de Havilland who, incidentally, is way and above my favorite actress. Cast, story and direction 100 per cent. Played December 13-14.—Ted Staump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

BENGAL TIGER, THE: Barton MacLane, June Travis, Warren Hull—What a terrible thing this was. A fine cast, all of whom did the best they could with the roles they had. The story was one of the most unlikeable of any we have had in a long time. Why give to a fine actor like MacLane a leading role wherein he has to be a drunken sot all through the picture, or make Travis and Hull play such trashy parts? Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 8-9.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CAIN AND MABEL: Marion Davies, Clark Gable—Why, oh why, doesn't someone tell Marion Davies she is all through before some exhibitor commits actual homicide instead of mental. Gable made little effort to cover his disgust and the sad part of it all is that the story could have been made into a swell picture. Played December 16-17.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

FUGITIVE IN THE SKY: Jean Muir, Warren Hull—Quite fair aviation story, rather interesting and seemed to give satisfaction.—C. H. Sartorius, Capitol Theatre, Hartley, Iowa. General patronage.

GIVE ME YOUR HEART: Kay Francis, George Brent—In my opinion this is one of the best pictures of its kind of the year and the mixed audience that saw it did not have a walkout and that's saying a lot, especially on a picture of this type. If you haven't played it, do so and boost it. It's worth it. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 30-January 1.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram—Good business at Christmas. Attendance was largely church people. Had a few walkouts from casuals who didn't know what they were going to see.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, A: All Star—This man Shakespeare shows considerable promise and should develop into a good scenarist, but he'll have to jazz his comedy up considerably if he wants to click with my crowd. Seriously, they walked out on this with great unanimity. I tied up with the Boy Scouts, the schools and the Women's Club, so I can't lose—much.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, A: All Star—In order to make film rental we tied up with the schools on this one. We did more than average business and the picture seemed to please about 75 per cent. It's a lavish production and will please those who read Shakespeare's stories and the school students who have studied them long enough to understand the picture. However, it's not a small town show. Running time, 117 minutes. Played January 11-12.—J. R. Long, Bocanita Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala. General patronage.

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, A: All Star—Another super-special that pleased about ten per cent. They thought it wonderful while the other ninety per cent thought it a waste of time—and twenty-five "centses." The photography is wonderful, scenery beautiful and music is grand. One patron said he shut his eyes and listened to the music. This and "Anthony Adverse" in the same week about put me in the bread line. Running time, 117 minutes. Played January 13-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC ENEMY'S WIFE: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—A good lively G-Man story. Good midweek business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AY TANK AY GO: El Brendel—Very good slapstick comedy. Much better than a former series with this star, thanks to Columbia.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

DISORDER IN THE COURT: Three Stooges—So crazy that everyone laughed themselves sick. This team are as big drawing cards as a good feature here. Running time, 18 minutes.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. Small town patronage.

LOVE COMES TO MOONEYVILLE: Andy Clyde—Extra good comedy. Columbia certainly knows how to make good ones. Haven't had a bad one yet. After playing so many poor ones from other distributors, it is certainy a relief to see one like this.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

OH, DUCHESS: Polly Moran—Good comedy that pleased all.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: They are all very good and well liked by our patrons.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

SLIPPERY SILKS: 3 Stooges—Another Stooge knockout. Our Saturday patrons certainly go for these in a big way. Absolute tops in slapstick.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

Educational

BLUE BLAZES: Buster Keaton—Just like all the others under this banner, very, very poor.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

CHEMIST, THE: Buster Keaton—Good. All Buster Keaton comedies are good. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: Musical Comedies—Very poor comedy attempt.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

IT HAPPENED ALL RIGHT: Tim and Irene—It certainly did. They walked right out as soon as it started and we didn't blame them. Why are we penalized with this kind of shorts???—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

KIKO THE KANGAROO IN A BATTLE ROYAL: Paul Terry-Toons—We have renamed these "Terrible-Toons" instead of Terry-Toons and it aptly describes every one of the series.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

WACKY FAMILY, THE: Tim and Irone—Absolutely terrible. This pair should be ashamed to get before a camera as they have tried on several occasions to make a comedy and failed miserably.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AT SEA SHORE: Patsy Kelly, Lyda Roberti—Very good comedy—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

BORED OF EDUCATION: Our Gang—This single reeler pleased more than any short we have shown for years and caused me to send an SOS to Metro for more of them. Ask your exchange to book it. Running time, 9½ minutes.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

FOOTBALL TEAMWORK: MGM Sports Parade—Great for the athletic clubs and very well played and explained lots of trick shots with a football. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LIFE HESITATES AT FORTY: Charley Chase—Here is something new in photography and Charley plays his part to satisfaction. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

OLD HOUSE, THE: Happy Harmonies—The best color cartoon Metro has made so far. This got more laughs than many two -reel cemedies. All Metro's color cartoons are good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

OLD HOUSE, THE: Harman-Ising—One of the best cartoons we have ever played. There are none better than these Happy Harmonies, and the color is clear.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

PUP'S PICNIC: Harman-Ising—Another swell color cartoon from MGM. You can't go wrong on these.—C. O. Shuler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and CCC patronage.

YELLOWSTONE PARK: FitzPatrick Travel Talk—As I have visited Yellowstone Park I booked this mostly for my own benefit and was not disappointed. A beautiful and entertaining reel that everyone seemed to like. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BROTHERLY LOVE: Popeye the Sailor—The Popeye cartoons are not near as good as they used to be. They are too much the same. When you see one, you see all of them. Another thing, they are too short. Running time, six minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IN OLD WYOMING: Musical Romance—One-reel subject in color. Scenery, singing and music as well as color marvelously good.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

IN OLD WYOMING: Musical Romance—Beautiful and entertaining.—D. E. Fitten, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS SINBAD THE SAILOR: Popeye the Sailor Special—Worth twice as much as regular Popeye but no more. I paid more and that makes me a dissatisfied customer.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

SAILOR SHORTY: Paragraphics—Good on any program. Brought lots of laughs.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

STAR REPORTER, THE: Headliners—Ted Husing introduces four of Broadway's leading personalities: Ed Paul and his orchestra, Betty Jane Cooper with the Lathrop Brothers, Donald Novis, and Ina Ray Hutton with her Melodears. A very good musical short. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STAR REPORTER IN HOLLYWOOD: Ted Husing—Only fair. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

AND SO TO WED: Tom Kennedy—Very, very good comedy laughs and laughs all over it. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

FOOLISH HEARTS: Radio Musical Comedies—Foolish is right. Where, oh where, are the old-time comedy directors?—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Spring, Mont. Local patronage.

IN LOVE AT 40: Edgar Kennedy—Kennedy comedies are getting to be worse all the time. This one was absolutely silly.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: The subjects in this issue were well taken, but as far as the small town theatre is concerned it costs too much for what you get and I would not advise anyone to buy it. I am sure I won't get stung again. Running time, two reels.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 5—Just a two-reeler. Not much of anything, mostly Chinese problems are introduced. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MISMANAGED: Radio Musical Comedies—RKO hasn't made a good comedy yet that I've seen.—J. W. Lehrkind, Strand Theatre, White Sulphur Springs, Mont. Local patronage.

UPPERCUTLETS: Superba Comedies—Good laugh provoker. Enough said. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WILL POWER: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Very silly but brings out the laughs and that's why we like to run comedies that are two-reelers. Running time, two reels. Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DOGGING IT AROUND THE WORLD: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—A very interesting picture of dogs. Good on any program.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: The best news on the market but spoiled occasionally by a guy named Lew Lehr. However, our scissors save our patrons the agony of enduring his uncalled for antics and vulgarity.—C. O. Shauler and E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: No. 26—First newsreel I have ever received mounted on two reels. A super attraction all about the King and his abdication. Truly a great reel and Fox handled this part better than any other reel I have seen. Fox News still leads the rest in not only news items but in presenting them to you in an interesting way at all times.—Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S GRAND OPERA: Mickey Mouse—As usual this cartoon clicked and everyone got a big kick out of it.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. Small town patronage.

MICKEY'S POLO TEAM: Mickey Mouse—How they can ever think up anything like this is a mystery to me, but the kids are not the only ones who get a big laugh out of these cartoons. Beter than average for even Mickey Mouse.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. Small town patronage.

THREE ORPHAN KITTENS: Silly Symphony—Very good. This got quite a number of laughs. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE ORPHAN KITTENS: Silly Symphonies—Right up with the best of the Sillies.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WHO KILLED COCK ROBIN? Silly Symphony—Excellent. You can't go wrong in booking these shorts. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

AT YOUR SERVICE MADAME: Merrie Melodies—One of the most amusing of this always good series. The little "Quint" piglets are great. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HALF WIT-NESS: Radio Ramblers — Amusing short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MISS GLORY: Merrie Melodies—About the silliest thing this company ever shipped me.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Melody Masters—Another pleasing musical from Warners, which we are always proud to play.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

OILY BIRD, THE: Ken Murray—Don't pass this one up, with the Oh ya man in it. Very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SHAKE MR. SHAKESPEARE: Broadway Brevities Very poor. Might be all right for a trailer on a Shakespearean play, but not for a short. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SUNDAY ROUND-UP, THE: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—A fair color subject that could have been greatly improved on by more singing. Running time, 2 reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Serials

Republic

VIGILANTES ARE COMING, THE: Robert Livingston, Kay Hughes—This would be a good serial if they wouldn't deceive you at the end of every chapter. This is the worst case of this kind I have ever seen. At the end of each chapter the hero finds himself in an impossible situation only to find in the beginning of the next chapter that it was altogether different. This is so bad in this picture that even the kids are kicking about it, and as far as the theatre is concerned, it turned out to be a total loss.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

VIGILANTES ARE COMING, THE: Robert Livingston, Kay Hughes—This serial started off fine, but I'm now hopefully looking for the end. Like all serials, the hero is killed every week only to appear unhurt the next. This one takes liberties and changes the action in the next episode in order to have the hero. Just another serial.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

Stage and Screen

CUSTER'S LAST STAND: Rex Lease, Lona Andre—This starts off with a bang. I hope it holds up as well.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Universal

FLASH GORDON: Buster Crabbe, Jean Rogers—The only serial I have ever seen that could interest a good many of the older people. Very good recording all through.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

The Need Will Always Be Great Unless—

The need for showmanship has never been greater, says that top-showman Adolph Zukor, in Red Kann's "Insiders' Outlook" column of Motion Picture Daily. And Mr. Zukor says it as follows:

> "Showmanship is what counts today. The industry is not in the hands of the bankers and it is not in the hands of the exhibitors. It is in the hands of showmen. Intangible, subscribing no set rules but leaning a little on precedent, perhaps, but showmen and showmanship. . . . I have been making pictures for 25 years and I have been an exhibitor for 34 and I tell you the outlook never has been brighter nor the need for showmanship greater. You can't learn it in college. . . ."

And while we were drinking in these words, comes a Round Tabler loaded with a loud blast about the lack of the selfsame showmanship in the manager's circuit; how the boys were supposed to turn exploitation handsprings on the head of a dime, and much more of the same, which of course is an old story but nonetheless too true.

The boy wasn't alibi-ing, nor did he need one, for he is doing a satisfactory job at a subsequent-run house nearby. But he is doing it the hard way because the home office gives him tepid encouragement and less latitude to spend a few sorely-needed extra dollars to get the better grosses he swears are to be had.

"Look at this," he moaned. "My house is just a short distance away from the Blank, another unit in the same circuit playing a week ahead of me. Now, I know my patrons and think I have the savvy about what to do to get them in, especially on the shows that need a shove. But when I suggest spending a little on a couple of good ideas, the boss tells me never mind, that everybody knows about my dates because they play the week before at the other house and any extra advertising is just so much waste.

"And he's all wrong," continued the visitor. "If they gave me half a break and turned me loose, I know a lot of things to be done that are not being done and would certainly add to my grosses, week after week."

And as the member kept getting it off his chest, the 'phone rang and it was another theatreman dissolved in tears. He had just about completed arrangements for the smartest campaign he had yet put over in his situation, with the biggest part of the expense underwritten by outside advertisers and now his boss-man had turned it down because of the theatre's money end of the deal.

Well, folks, it's a problem, and no foolin'. A problem, for the circuit heads are not always to blame for this seeming shortsightedness. Too many executives have gone for a lot of dollars on drives and campaigns that started auspiciously and wound up in no place, so don't let all of us turn loose a lot of "boos" without looking at both sides of the fence. After all, as in any other argument, there are two sides to be considered and discussed.

The lack of showmanship generally is obvious. But it is also obvious that not every manager is a 100 per cent showman, no matter how hard he tries to be one. And that has a lot to do with the difficulties between the man in the field and his home office.

One manager puts over an ace campaign and it is often expected that other managers can duplicate his success or at least a major part of it. But it doesn't always work out that way. If every man was equally talented, if every man who spent money for campaigns would bring back a fair return on the expenditure, if conditions were as favorable in one spot as another, there would be few difficulties. But it isn't so and, for that matter, never was meant to be. As conditions are different, so are men.

But there are ways to equalize matters somewhat, to lend the aid of the strong to the lad who needs a hand up. Encouraging the man who has showmanly potentialities to do a better job without blowing the bankroll, is one way. Having faith in the able showman, allowing him deserved freedom of action (and the money to move freely) in the anticipation that the good work he does will stimulate the progress of his less talented brother, is still a better method—one that has been tried and is yet to be found wanting.

That the "need for showmanship has never been greater" will be as true in years to come as it is today. Will be, yes, unless showmen with the talent to do things are allowed to do so; unless the business of developing showmen becomes the immediate concern of those to whom these essentials means the difference between satisfying profits and aggravating losses.

Finds Picture Time Table Solving Theatre Problems

Motion Picture Editor Urges General Adoption by Managers

by JOHN BIGELOW
Spokane, Wash., Press

The motion picture time table in daily newspapers is responsible principally for the screen acquiring one more distinctive feature of the legitimate stage. Most of the audience arrive and leave at the same time.

The time table is unknown in many sections of the country, but its use is spreading and theatre managers are advocating it as a solution to many management problems.

Late-comers to the theatre have always been a nuisance. Movie-goers especially have suffered. Knowing that the film program is continuous, customers come at all times to trod regretfully, but none-the-lighter, on people's toes and ruin a few seconds' appreciation of what is happening on the screen.

If the ushers are not expert, it can happen to one person several times during a theatre visit. It is against good nature to be stood up and brushed past.

The time table informs the movie-goers when to arrive at the beginning of a feature. Trains, editions and businesses run on schedule, why not movie audiences? Nearly everyone expresses regret at arriving "during the middle" of a picture, but until the time table came along few made any effort to find out starting times and act accordingly. There are some calls at the box office, but relatively few in proportion to attendance.

The time table is a special friend of the double-feature despiser. Now he can pick the feature he wants to see, consult the time table, arrive at the theatre just in time to see the picture with a newsreel and a short subject and depart unwilted bearing no malice toward a dual personality theatre.

The method of carrying out the same idea varies. Usually it is simply a box headed "Feature Starts," "Starting Times" or "Theatre Time Table." In bold face type each first-run or important theatre is listed with the starting times of each feature, like this:

FOX — "Pennies from Heaven": 1:18; 4:40; 7:46; 11:08. "Career Woman": 11:50; 3:13; 6:29; 9:40.

The box appears in the same position on the theatre page daily and is kept accurate up to the minute by daily checks with theatre managers anxious to cooperate.

Managers are enthusiastic about the idea and go out of their way to keep the table accurate. They even call attention to it in their ads and on the screen, urging the public to consult the time tables in the papers. Editors treat the little time table box with respect, knowing that it probably has as many readers as any feature in the paper.

It is not positively known who used the first table, but the Spokane Press fathered the idea in that city and was the first paper in the Pacific northwest to make it a regular feature. In the last few years it has spread to Seattle, Portland, California and eastward to some extent. Double features have boosted its popularity. The other two Spokane dailies are using time tables now after theatre men urged them to.

To further condense theatre publicity and present it in more readable form, the Press recently started an enlargement on the time table called the Theatre Directory. Advances on openings, reviews, Hollywood and local gossip and news are taken care of in my regular column.

In the Theatre Directory all the big theatres are listed with a brief statement of recommendation or warning, followed by starting times and an indication (FR) if the picture is showing first run.

A theatre's entry looks like this:

FOX — "Pennies from Heaven" (FR). Spokane's Bing Crosby sings new hit tunes, of which the best is the title one, plays Dutch Uncle to an orphan and turns a haunted house into a night club. Bing's best. Starts at 1:18; 4:40; 7:46; 11:08. "Career Woman" (FR) is the story of a spectacular lawyer (Michael Whalen with a mustache) who wins murder cases and beautiful women with equal ease. Starts at 11:50; 3:15; 9:40.

Title of film and starting times are printed in bold face type. The whole directory is in smaller than body type. The directory is changed only when new pictures move in or when the times are changed.

Proof of the time table's and the Theatre Directory's success is in watching a quarter of the audience go out together at the end of a showing. That's what is happening at Spokane theatres.

Mayor and Seff with Jubilee Cake

Seff Cracks Daily On Zukor Jubilee

Celebrations of the Adolph Zukor Paramount Silver Jubilee are not necessarily confined to the ace houses, an instance of which is the birthday party put on by Ely E. Seff, manager of Tri-States Spencer, Rock Island, Ill., a "B" theatre of the circuit, and reported by Joe Kinsky, district manager.

Seff figured the Jubilee being an anniversary should be celebrated in the traditional manner with a cake and a special birthday show aimed at the youngsters. Cake was promoted from local bakery, which also supplied a lot of gift cookies for the juveniles at the party. The giant confection was completed in advance so it could be used to build up publicity on the Saturday party and with this in mind Ely gave the event civic status by having the Mayor come over to the theatre and with Seff (see photo above) pose as though he were cutting the cake. The shot was planted for three columns plus a story in the local Argus, said to be one of the toughest papers in the midwest to crack, and when a "B" house gets that kind of a break in the daily, it's hot news, says Kinsky.

The publicity plus heralds distributed at all schools and announcements by Seff to his audiences brought a capacity house to his show. Included in the program was a talk by the manager on Adolph Zukor's career.

Zukor Attends Capital Premiere

Another outstanding job on the Zukor Jubilee was done in Washington, where the Paramount head was guest of honor at a dinner given by Commissioner Allen, followed by the premiere of the picture at Loew's Palace, under the supervision of Carter Barron, Loew division manager. Street in front of the theatre was roped off and lighted for the newsreel crews and the 250 guests at the dinner seated in a special section reserved for the occasion.

Among others attending the dinner and opening of "Champagne Waltz," called the Silver Jubilee picture, were Paramount executives, representatives of official Washington circles and members of the White House Correspondents Association.

Interview Sidney Via Long Distance

So that Washington newspaper critics could talk to Sylvia Sidney in Hollywood about "You Only Live Once," Hardie Meakin, manager RKO Keith's, arranged a long distance interview with the star at the local Variety Club headquarters after a press preview on the picture. Extension lines were installed by the phone company and each critic spoke to Miss Sidney in turn while the others listened in. One of the dailies used a wire photo showing the star at her phone on the Coast and the other papers gave the stunt further generous breaks.

In addition to this topper, Meakin planted a newspaper essay contest four days ahead for cash and guest ticket prizes. Co-op ads promoted with local merchants included some 1,000-line displays. Before and during the run Hardie also distributed fanfotos of both Sidney and Fonda.

For national publicity on "You Only Live Once," special section in recent issue of Life carried a pictorial story featuring the highlights of the attraction.

Paper Reruns Page One On Jones' "Ziegfeld" Date

Local paper in Roswell, N. M., worked with Manager Ted Jones of the Yucca Theatre, on his "Ziegfeld" date in a number of ways, most important being a rerun of the front page after the regular issue was run, with a special reset of a full page banner. Newsboys were given the special edition, shouted "extra" on the streets, distributed the papers to stores. Jones also put across a double-truck on a contest to correct mispelled words. Window displays in cooperating stores were also secured.

Highly effective was Jones' 35-foot electric sign atop theatre spelling out the title on a flasher and attention-compelling was a float with p.a. system included in important Shrine ceremonial parade.

Ten National Tieups In "Salem" Pressbook

Paramount offers numerous national tieups on "Maid of Salem," pressbook carrying details of ten such cooperations kith merchandisers in various lines, running from sheets to cameras. Local promotions include study charts, school tieups, tieup ads and stills, lobby displays, etc.

Newspaper angles are also covered with four contests featured, such as "blue law bungles," Old Salem recipe and sampler limerick ideas. Radio script and other broadcast slants are suggested and among the ads composite and revamps are offered. For ease in using, the book is indexed.

Starts All Over

Heavy rains greeting the Saturday opening of a new serial, Frank Boucher, at Warners Metropolitan, Baltimore, made up for the damage by running the first episode again the following week in addition to the second. The youngsters were notified by a "Hey, Kids" herald.

Above is reproduced another distinctive co-op page, turned out by Erle Wright, Loew-Poli New England ad chief, for the theatres in Harry Shaw's division. Wright again has captured a lot of rhythm and motion with the Sonja Henie action cuts which bring attention to every ad on the page. Masthead ties the title in neatly with the rest of the page and the theatre ad in reverse is set so that it stands out above everything else but without killing off any of the other ads on the page.

French Clergymen Combine To Publish "Pastures" Booklet

Collaboration of Catholic and Protestant clergymen in preparing an illustrated booklet, printed at the expense of church societies representing both denominations was reported as one of the most effective cooperations in introducing the first Continental date on "Green Pastures" at the Cinema Edward Eight, in Paris. Booklet was distributed to church religious societies, in Sunday schools and churches. Further favorable publicity was obtained with private screenings to important church leaders, by broadcasts given by the head of the Catholic press and radio service in France.

Additional interest was forthcoming through an exposition of negro art in the theatre lobby, valuable sculptures, masks, etc., loaned by the "Musee Ethnographique du Trocadero" in Paris. Other exhibits were borrowed from private collectors and the showing was said to have stimulated attendance and newspaper publicity.

"Blaze of Glory" Week Clicks for Walt Davis

It's a big event locally, that "Blaze of Glory" week that Walt Davis puts on at the Capitol, Regina, Sask., Canada, immediately following the holidays and this year was no exception. Usually a dull week, the period returned a handsome profit, says the Round Tabler.

Merchants are tied in and among the cooperations was a local newsreel sponsored by six of the stores. On another tieup with establishments in the block facing the theatre, flood lights from the ball park (in storage for the winter) were secured and some 15 of these placed atop buildings to flood the store fronts. All windows carried the "Blaze" banners and the line was placed in newspaper advertising.

Continuing to bring the theatre a lot of effective word-of-mouth advertising is the weekly candy sale in the foyer on Saturdays. These are sponsored by the various women's organizations and Walt finds this a fine bit of community cooperation.

THEY ENDORSE AWARDS

J. R. GRAINGER

General Manager of Distribution
Universal Pictures Company

The Quigley Awards have undoubtedly served a splendid purpose in stimulating boxoffice grosses and fostering unique and unusual exploitation efforts for important moving pictures.

I feel that they have contributed a splendid chapter to the history of exploitation, which is so necessary to get the full measure of attendance and the full boxoffice value of pictures.

I am glad to know that this competition is to be continued in 1937 and I shall be very happy to accept your invitation to be judge on the committee.

W. G. VAN SCHMUS

Managing Director
Radio City Music Hall

Your plan of the Quigley Awards is so thoroughly sound in its value to better exploitation of motion pictures, I cannot see how anyone could refuse whole-hearted cooperation and time in advancing the very worthy purpose of your work and its objective.

Motion pictures today justify increasing improvement in all forms of exploitation and is that out of which we may build greater confidence with the public and in turn bigger boxoffice grosses.

ENRIQUE BAEZ

General Manager, Brazil
United Artists Corporation

I have been following with considerable interest the various awards made by the Quigley Publications for excellence in publicity and advertising campaigns and I wish to congratulate you on the progress of this very fine work.

It is one of the pet ambitions of myself and my staff here in Brazil to win one of the monthly Silver plaques and if possible, one of the annual Awards. Under the encouraging stimulus of your fair-minded method of judging entries, we have every reason to believe that we will sooner or later join the esteemed list of winners.

GUY MORGAN

General Manager, Argentine
United Artists Corporation

Please accept it as gospel from a Buenos Aires "yanqui" that progress and improvement in exploitation and publicity in Argentine theatres can be attributed in large measure to the tireless campaigning of the Quigley Awards competitions.

Latin-American showmen have taken many profitable cues from reports of American methods of showmanship—and now that they are entitled to enter the field on a competitive basis, I am sure that we will perceive an even greater activity in this line of film-promotion in the coming season.

MURRAY SILVERSTONE

Managing Director, England and Continent
United Artists' Corporation

If there is one influence that is supreme in the film trade as a stimulus to increased exploitation it is the influence of your Managers' Round Table Club and the monthly and yearly Quigley Awards. Here in England and on the Continent our publicity men and theatre managers have come to regard the Managers' Round Table Club as the foremost incentive for friendly competition in showmanship.

HENRY WEINER

Manager in Cuba
United Artists Corporation

Cuba has been making rapid strides recently in the business of exploiting films. This is due largely to the fact that you have taken the leadership in encouraging this high-powered form of ticket-selling. My most sincere congratulations to you for the good work you are accomplishing through your monthly and annual Quigley Awards.

DUKE PRINCE

Manager, Shea's Orpheum,
McKees Rocks, Pa.

In my estimation, Quigley Competitions is the finest and most worthwhile medium in aiding the men in the field. Motion Picture Herald is to be congratulated for its sponsorship.

I was very much surprised to have been successful in winning Honorable Mention, but indeed very happy. I am honored, and have received many congratulations from the patrons of my theatre who read about my winning Honorable Mention, which was published in the Pittsburgh Press.

DON WILLIAMS

Manager, Randforce Colonial
Brooklyn, N. Y.

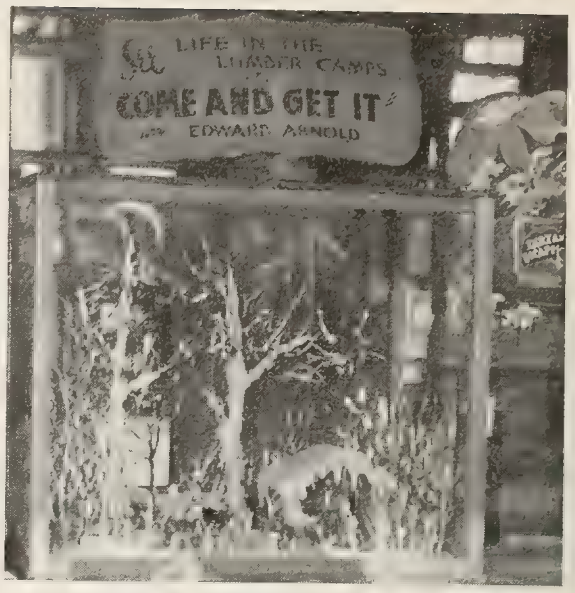
In winning an Honorable Mention in the 1936 Quigley Awards, I feel that it gave me a greater self-assurance and stimulated further efforts in the field of exploitation. Needless to say, this extra incentive required to meet the keen competition of the Awards, reflects in greater box-office receipts, not only in individual cases, but affecting the industry as a whole.

HAPPY HASSELO

Manager, Royal and Elite
Le Mars, Iowa

A grand idea and every bit of it worth the effort. No theatre manager today can sit in his office and expect to do a land office business without raising a hand to stimulate a little interest in the product he is showing.

All pictures aren't B. O. They just don't come that way. So my hat goes off to Motion Picture Herald for paving the way to better box office grosses.



Kriegsman's Lobby Miniature on "Come"

Borrows Lobby Material From Brooklyn Museum

Theatremen cover almost every angle in promoting unusual material for lobby displays and among the latest reported is Manager Harry Kriegsman's success in borrowing from the Brooklyn Museum, exhibits to publicise "Come and Get It" and "Tarzan Escapes" at the Wilson, Brooklyn, N. Y. On the former picture a miniature logging camp, in winter, with log cabins, logs and men chopping trees was obtained.

On "Tarzan" Kriegsman secured miniatures of African natives in shadow-box, grass hut, battle spears, also mounted baby ostrich, rhinoceros and elephant hides and tusks, etc. At other end of lobby, Harry constructed animated display with background of three-sheet cutout and shadow-box with foliage and grass mats. Center of display was a four-foot hippopotamus cutout.

Flood Light Across Street Illuminates "Ziegfeld" Front

The vivid decorations out front for the date on "Great Ziegfeld" at the Texas, San Angelo, Tex., were given extra attractiveness by the title across the marquee in three and four-foot high letters. To make this stand out even from a distance, large flood light from across the street was directed on the front for added illumination. Further distinction was given the flash with clever caricature drawings of William Powell.

John D. Jones, R. J. R. Theatres City Manager for San Angelo, credits the arrangement to Manager Bill Harrison, of the Texas, and H. L. Youngblood.

Greenberg's "Cain and Mabel" Animation

How to plant theatre displays, even for a short time, in spots where such advertising is not ordinarily permitted is told by Manager Ben Greenberg, Stadium, Woonsocket, R. I., who devised an animation on "Cain and Mabel" and with two men and a camera brought plenty of attention to the display.

Illustrated on this page is the animation worked by a breaker arm and dry cells which rocked the fighter cutout back and forth. Shown well in advance in the lobby, two days ahead it was set up in the busiest parts of town and the men with the camera set it up, stalling enough to gather a crowd, when they went through the motions of taking a picture. Stops were also made at local mills around lunch time and the stunt put on for the factory fight fans.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Another Giant Cake

Judging by the size of those anniversary lobby cakes promoted by Round Tablers, lot of folks must be getting their confections and pastries free of charge. Among the latest reported is one from Manager Charley Becker, Drake, Rego Park, L. I., said to be one of the biggest ever made in that sector and which was viewed by thousands.

INTRODUCING SIMONE. Theatremen at the Palace, in Danville, Ill., told the folks about Simone Simon and "Girls' Dormitory" with this striking enlargement of the new star placed prominently in black and silver background.

THE DECEMBER "FIRSTS"

The two Quigley Award First Mentions voted in December included an entry on a road-show date for MGM's "Romeo and Juliet," and a week's engagement on RKO Radio's "Winterset" right spang in the middle of December when the holiday shopping season was at its highest. Withal, the winners did a fancy job of work and the outlines of their successful campaigns follow:

In Erie, Pa., at the Warner, Jim Totman with the aid of his assistant, Bob Bowman, started his drive on "Romeo and Juliet" a month ahead by engaging local top society and clubwoman to contact and speak before schools and all important social, civic and educational organizations. Socialite who had appeared with Richard Mansfield also gave readings from the play before the high school groups and over the radio. Tickets were placed on sale in the schools and tiein arranged so that attendance at the picture was given the same credit as a book report in English classes. Announcement on this was made in class rooms through cooperation of superintendent of schools. For the first time locally, students were dismissed to attend the matinees.

Displays of many kinds were made. In connection with the lectures at the schools, series of mounted photos were placed on exhibit and libraries also cooperated by setting aside displays of Shakespeare plays. Local library made up a similar display right at the entrance and this was decorated with scene stills from the picture. Bookmarks were placed in all outgoing volumes. Pictorial displays of oil paintings were placed in many ace windows and the accompanying photo illustrates one of the most prominent.

Ties Newspaper to Contest

Newspapers were enlisted early for support, Totman arranging with the Daily Times to run the contest on the trip to Europe offered by MGM in connection with the picture. Classified ad tiein brought further publicity. School papers ran stories, cuts and contest details. Radio programs were employed, picture announcer at church services and Totman had the local chamber of commerce write members on the discounts for group sales, a real achievement, says Jim, in obtaining this unusual support.

The premiere was very swank with everyone in local society circles on hand. Local florist was promoted for corsages and Junior League girls presented flowers carrying theatre tags to patrons as they entered. Uniformed footman opened car doors out front, descriptive broadcast was promoted from lobby, photographer and reporters were on hand. To stimulate attendance during the run, sponsoring committee of top clubwomen was formed and letters mailed to select list signed by the city's leading social figure.

Other good slants were covered and among these was a distinctive front, a 30 by 40-foot giant wall banner on the face of a main street building illuminated with a powerful battery of flood lights and to cover the drawing area, newspapers in a 60-mile radius were invited to run stories on the date in exchange for guest tickets.

In Hartford, Conn., Jack Simons had a week's date on "Winterset" at Loew's Poli, and to get his share of attention while Christmas was in the air, devised a highly effective campaign topped by a daily barrage of newspaper publicity. Stressed was a reported "first" wherein the Times was persuaded to run a special feature story each day up to and including closing. All in all, Simons computes the amount of free space coming to over 200 inches, aside from regular material and in this were five mentions in drama editor's personal by-lined column, running from full columns to less lengthier comments.

Another "first time" was getting permission to placard light and trolley poles and still another was the distribution of bookmarks in all library branches. Lending libraries were given imprinted book jackets to cover all outgoing volumes. Heralds quoting critics' praises from all over the country were stuffed in magazines, distributed house-to-house and inserted in parcels at downtown stores. Heralds were also enclosed in outgoing telegrams.

Popular "question program" on local radio station included the query "What Is Winterset" in one of the broadcasts with the answer and theatre tiein plugged at the end of the hour. Week ahead, girl phoned selected list on the date. Locally important, too, was Simons' success in interesting personnel in home offices of the many insurance companies, principal Hartford industry. To the president of each company's girls' club, guest tickets were forwarded together with lengthy telegrams, the club officers requested to place the wires on the club bulletin boards. Women's clubs, schools and other spots were also covered.

Rochester Screen Tests

Eddie Carrier, conductor of MGM's recent national search for new screen talent via the traveling studio and now of Billy Ferguson's executive staff, worked with Les Pollock at Loew's in Rochester on a similar tiein with the local Hearst paper. Local girls, 18 to 28, and boys and girls, three to 12, were invited to participate with prizes to New York and Washington offered in addition to forwarding winners' screen and voice tests to the MGM studios. Paper broke with a full-page ad.

Holland Safety League Tied to "Sudden Death"

Automobile accidents, also in the news in Holland, was the subject of the tiein made by Paramount in Amsterdam on a recent date for "And Sudden Death," campaign put on with the cooperation of the League for Greater Safety in Amsterdam Traffic and police department by Hugo Lous, Amsterdam Paramount publicity director and Manager Charles Peereboom.

Among the slants covered were distribution of new traffic rules, free brake testing, safety cards on taxicabs, traffic examination of children, portable loud-speakers touring the town and radio talks. For street bally, service truck hauling wrecked car (see photo) was featured.

$25,000 Insurance Policy Protects Original Rembrandt

Valued at $25,000 was the original Rembrandt painting secured by Manager Russ Bovim for the date on the picture of the same name at Loew's Ohio, Columbus. Borrowed from local galleries, the masterpiece supposedly insured for that amount was transported to the theatre in an armored truck carrying signs to that effect. Police escort was also obtained.

After setting the painting in the lobby in a shadow-box with appropriate copy together with an enlargement of the insurance policy, Bovim secured the services of the police department to guard the treasure. He also promoted a silhouette artist to cut out Rembrandt types in the lobby.

Displays Arctic Collection On "Tundra" Engagement

From a nearby resident, Manager Ernest Martin, Fox-Redlands, Redlands, Cal., borrowed a unique and valuable collection of Arctic items for a lobby showing on his date for "Tundra." In the display was included a northern scene painted on moose-skin, mounted ptarmigans in winter feathers, carved pieces of Alaskan timber, specimens of wild animal life and prehistoric carvings.

Local papers made much of the unusual showing carrying a history of each of the pieces shown as well as a biography of the collector and praise for the picture. Tieup was found to be helpful in developing school business on the date.

Paper Lauds Van Noy

When results of the recent "Ramona" exploitation contest were announced, local papers in Anderson, Ind., carried story and picture of Manager Harry Van Noy, of the local Paramount, who was voted the first prize of $350. Daily included mention of the tieins made by the winner and interview with the theatreman.

Shaffer's Newspaper

Published weekly by Frank Shaffer to publicize his attractions at the Virginia, Harrisonburg, Va., is a four-page tab size "Movie Chatter" with all the low-down on the coming shows. Tieups are carried and merchants ads run to help get Shaffer off the nut. All in all a nice job and effective.

Loew-men Plant Page One On West "Bachelor" Contest

Among the cities putting on Paramount's "Eligible Bachelor" contest as a tiein on "Go West Young Man," Cleveland was prominent in the tieup as made by Milt Harris and Ev Steinbuch, for the date at Loew's State. The Press went big for the idea, breaking the contest with a smart page one story and photos of the star and carrying through daily with further publicity on the winner and his trip to the Coast, which was offered as prize.

Tieins were also made with Postal Telegraph with messengers carrying triangular theatre cards on their bicycles and parading to the theatre. Magazines with gummed stickers on covers were distributed house-to-house on an insurance company tieup, heralds in the same manner by a transfer company and announcements in all mailing pieces placed by one of the largest service station companies.

Sweeney Stages Wedding For New Year's Eve Show

With the three opposition houses putting on big shows for New Year's Eve, and unable to book a stage unit for the midnight date, Manager Wayne Sweeney, LaPorte, LaPorte, Ind., struck on the idea of a stage wedding and worked it from the angle: "Who Will Be 1937's First Bride and Groom?" The oldtimer put on in conjunction with "Hideaway Girl" proved to be highly profitable, with the house packed for the occasion.

Different slant was holding the wedding ceremony on the stroke of midnight just after the 1937 greetings trailer and of course, Sweeney was able to promote everything needed down to the marriage license and justice of the peace who performed the ceremony. Illustrated is the lobby setpiece carrying all the details and list of the gifts.

Editor's Signed Review Appears on Front Page

Smart campaign put on for "Dodsworth" by Manager Dale McFarland, at the Capitol, Iowa, in Joe Kinsky's Tri-States district, was topped by unusual cooperation by John O'Donnell, Davenport Democrat theatre editor, who published an advance signed review on page one that ran more than a full column and carried an eight-column streamer. In addition, paper used review by the regular picture critic on day after opening. Further cooperation by the same sheet was a contest for amateur critics, in which readers were asked to see the picture and write reviews.

Many ace windows were secured and among the other outside tieups was one with the public library (see photo) in which theatre poster was placed in back of prominently-placed bookrack.

Statewide Amateur Contest

Series of presentations of talent among amateur Oklahoma negroes from various parts of the state has been arranged by David Dallas to be held on Saturday nights at the Grand Theatre, in Holdenville, Okla. Performers from among negro schools and nearby negro CCC camp have been invited to participate.

"Tell Us What You Did."

Club Heads See "Steps"

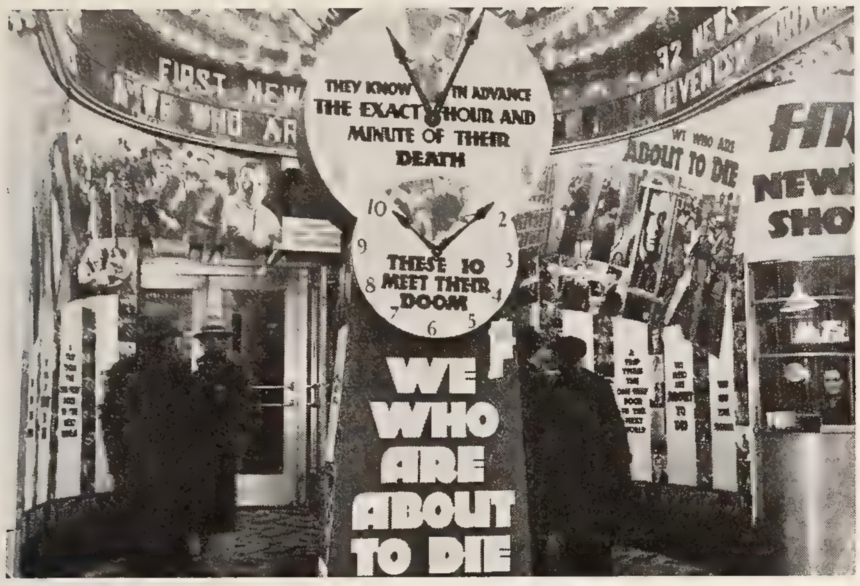
Week before opening, Manager Tom Hungerford, Lake, Oak Park, Ill., put on a special preview of Grand National's "In His Steps," inviting heads of women's clubs service and educational groups, ministers, etc. Comment cards were distributed and permission obtained to reproduce these in lobby. Three-sheet star cutout was mounted on dark background with credits in relief with reproduction of copy of book. Lights behind supplied illumination.

"Tell Us What You Did."

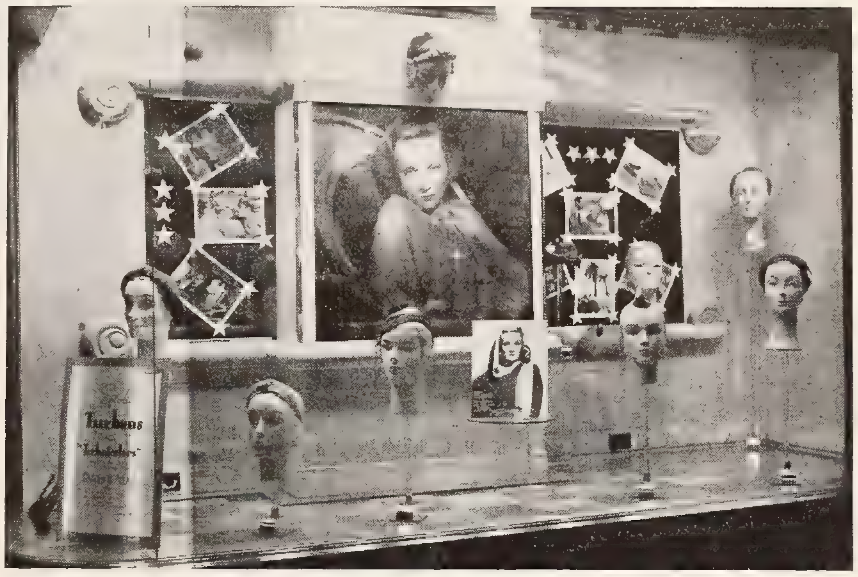
Kids Cheer New King

First group of children in the British Empire to cheer King George in a body was the group attending a Christmas benefit matinee at the Capitol, St. Johns, N. B., is the belief of Manager Walter H. Golding. During the show, accession of the new monarch was announced by short wave radio, at which the performance was stopped and children sang the national anthem.

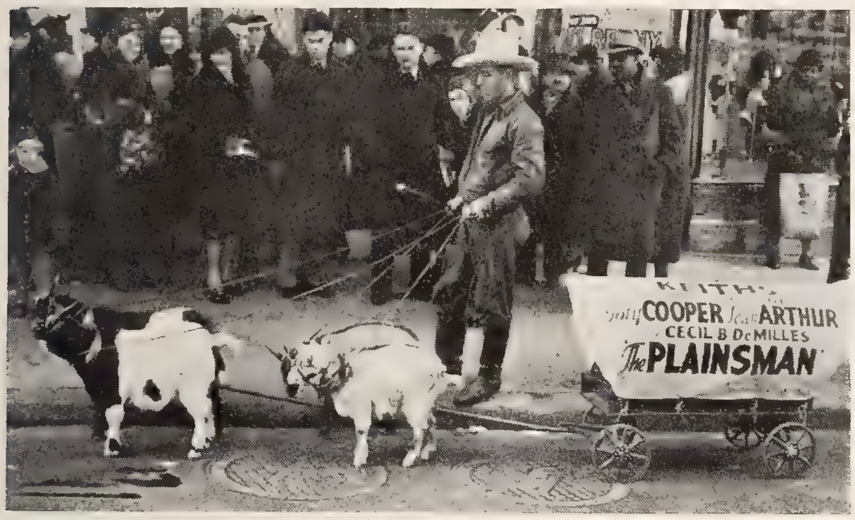
FRONTS, STUNTS AND WINDOWS



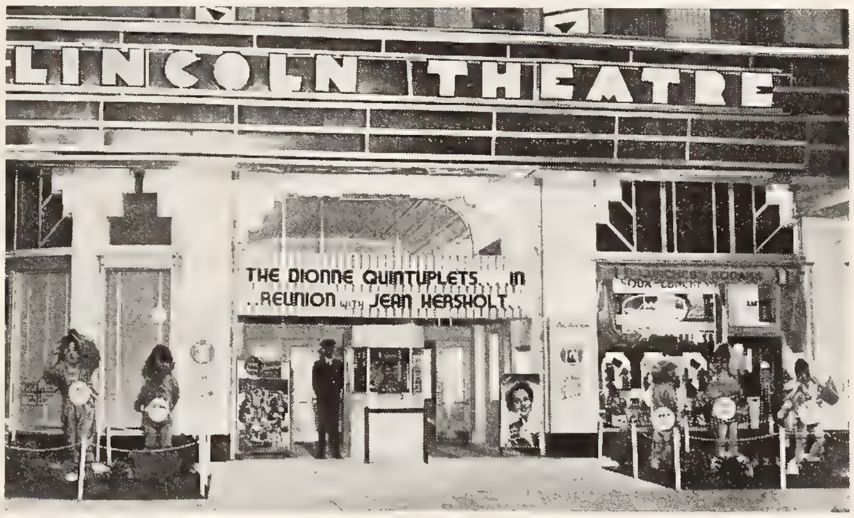
REVOLVING DISCS. Highlight of front at Arthur Mayer's New York Rialto was two large clocks both set at 11:05. Between hands was cutout showing revolving discs on which were photos of the 10 men occupying death cells in the picture.



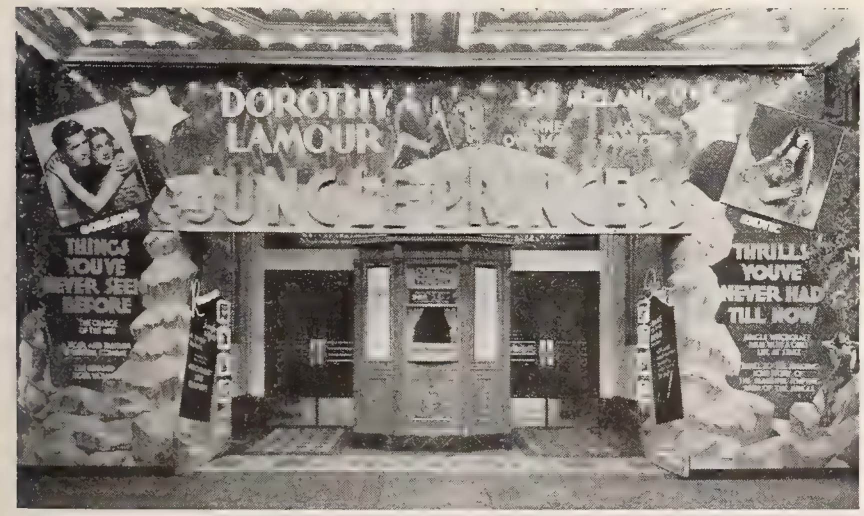
VERY SWANK. Window in one of the smartest stores in Boston was landed for date on "Garden of Allah" at Loew's State, by Joe Longo, Joe Di Pesa's assistant who worked on the date with Warren Slee. Everything was in color for nice flash.



GOAT BALLY. Folks are evidently regarding with a lot of interest J. Lawrence Schamberger's unusual street bally on "The Plainsman" at Keith's Baltimore. The four-goat team pulling the toy covered wagon made the downtown streets.

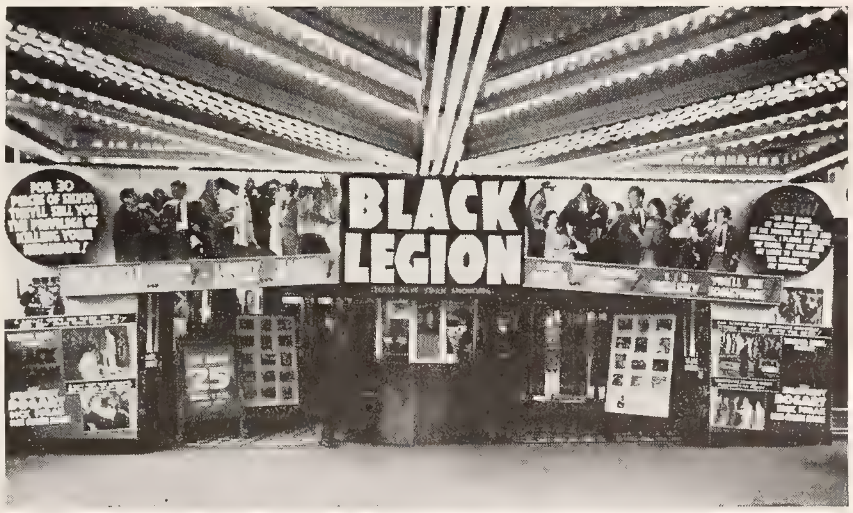


MEET THE QUINS. Life-size cutouts of the Dionnes each titled with name and description were planted in the landscaped lawns out front at the Lincoln, Miami Beach, by Wometco-man Sonny Shepherd. Enlargements were placed alongside of boxoffice.



DOROTHY LAMOUR
JUNGLE PRINCESS
THINGS YOU'VE NEVER SEEN BEFORE
THRILLS YOU'VE NEVER HAD TILL NOW

FLASH FRONT. For date on "Jungle Princess" at the Metropolitan, Washington, D. C., Frank La Falce, Warner Theatres zone ad head and Maynard Madden, manager, executed front in bright colors with sock scenes played up in the copy.



SOCK STUFF. Conceived by B. F. Moore, managing director and executed by Sid Nagler was this black and white flash on "Black Legion" at the New York Strand. Cutout enlargements were emphasized across front and above boxoffice for the date.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

McAllen, Texas

Dear Herald:

This journal, being a theatrical journal, is supposed to treat of theatrical matter, especially this Colyum, but our guess is that this time the Colyum is liable to be more historical than theatrical. This country has enough unwritten history to fill several textbooks, that even a school kid would be interested in.

Texas, as you probably know, has had six different flags, a flag for each different form of government under which she has lived, but right now she is waving the same Stars and Stripes that we all wave and she would take off her coat and fight for it just like the rest of us would.

As we understand it, this part of the state was at one time under the supervision of Mexico, and, judging from the population down here, we are wondering if the most of them don't savvy Mexicana like we do the Hoosier dialect.

Mier, for example, at one time was a city of 25,000 Mexicans but today it is known as the "City of Ruins." It is located about fifteen miles southwest of Rio Grande, city of Texas. A pamphlet tells us that Mier was the scene of the famous "black bean" episode of the Mier Expedition in which 170 Americans surrendered to a band of 2,000 Mexicans on Christmas Day, 1842. They were to draw beans from a box. Those who drew black beans were to be allowed to return to Texas, but they were placed before a firing squad. Yesterday Mier certainly looked like "The City of Ruins." The streets were very narrow and full of chuckholes and there was no evidence of activity of any kind. There was not a car in sight and but one truck on the streets. Many buildings were boarded up. The only places open for business were a curio store and two saloons, and these had all the appearance of an Apache dive in France, except a whole lot worse, if that could be possible. The road to Mier would make a jackrabbit want to ride a burro, it is nothing but a trail through the cactus and over rocks and gulleys, and if you ever think of going there you better talk it over with the folks first. Mier was at one time the home of bandits and we judge that there are a few of them left. We understand that it was the home of Villa and his band and it was from here that they made their raids into Texas and made flying targets for the Texas Rangers. We are told that many of them are slumbering under Texas soil, and when we think of these bandits and their raids north of the Rio Grande we don't wonder that Uncle Sam keeps several battalions of soldiers stationed along the river.

Rio Grande City was founded in 1847 by Henry Clay, said to have been an American soldier-of-fortune who drifted into the Valley during the Mexican war. He married the wealthy Senorita Hilaria Garcia of the Camargo family and established the town of Rio Grande City on the estate he purchased. At that time we presume it was a part of Mexico but now it is a part of Texas. Senorita Garcia must have been different from the senoritas we have seen or Hank wouldn't have fallen for her.

Reynosa is just over the Rio Grande river from McAllen, about ten miles distant. You ought to go there sometime. This town has about two thousand inhabitants, some Mexicans, some burros, two or three curio shops, a lot of dogs, several saloons, a lot of adobe houses and Dr. Brinkley's broadcasting station.

We went over there, to see a polo game between a team from Monterey and one from Brownsville, the first one we ever saw. They say that polo is a very exciting game, and maybe it is, but we'd rather go fishing with J. C. Fanning in the ship channel at Brownsville.

Outside of a small square, which has a little pavement on one side, the streets look like a path worn over the rocks by the goats. When you drive them you should hang onto something, for Reynosa don't insure your life or car.

The beer they have over there might have been made in a brewery, but salhepatica don't make a bad drink when you are thirsty. We had a little girl with us from Manitoba, Canada, and she wanted to have her picture taken in a Mexican cart drawn by a burro. A nickel took care of arrangements. Elsie, our housekeeper, wanted to have her picture taken by the side of a yoke of cattle hitched to a water cart. But as for us, we've seen Matamoros, El Grotto, Nogales and Reynosa, and that is about all of the pictures of Mexico we care to have.

Mission is where Bob Smith operates a very lovely theatre and the town is located in what is said to be the best citrus fruit section of the Valley. It is a jimdandy town (if you know what Jimdandy means). It is clean, has fine streets, lovely parks, fine business buildings, and it is close to the former home of William Jennings Bryan, who would have been president of the United States at one time if it had been left to Texas, but some of the other boys seemed to have had something to do about it. Anyhow, Mission don't seem to be kicking much about it now.

Fort Ringgold is a military station not very far from Rio Grande City and the government keeps a company of troops there. It was established 90 years ago by General Taylor and served as headquarters for a number of young officers who later won military distinction, such as Robert E. Lee, U. S. Grant, Zachary Taylor, Jefferson Davis, Stonewall Jackson, John Pershing, and James G. Harbord.

Port Isabel was first established in 1526 by the Spaniards and was for years a favorite rendezvous for pirates. In 1780 it had become a favorite summer resort for wealthy families from Mier and Camargo. In 1835 a naval battle was fought between the American ship Invincible and two Mexican vessels, and the captain of the Invincible was captured, and hanged as a pirate. During the Mexican war Taylor made Port Isabel his base of operations. Today Port Isabel is the shipping point for both Brownsville and Matamoros.

Matamoros is just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville. It was first settled in 1765. The colony was designated the "Congregation del Refugio" in 1796, and later, in 1821, the name was changed to Matamoros. At one time it had a population of 40,000 Mexicans, not including the goats and burros, but today it has about 4,000, if you include the residents living in adobe houses and the curio shops and drink emporiums. It has a boneyard in its cemetery where the bodies are taken up from the graves and burned if the tax on the grave has not been paid to the Mexican government. When you see it you will wonder if the human race really had advanced very far from the "stone age" and you will be inclined to wonder if Darwin wasn't about half right after all.

As we said at the start, this letter is mostly historical rather than theatrical, and if you have followed us thus far you will most likely agree with us, and after you have taken on some huckleberry pie we thought you might try a little corned beef and cabbage.

WHEN people say that about your theatre, they're many steps nearer your box office. For movie-goers naturally patronize the house that looks nicest, and by its very appearance promises better entertainment. And that is why, if you remodel your theatre with a Pittco Theatre Front, people not only talk about it, but patronize it.

Theatre managers and owners throughout the country have used Pittco Fronts to build up business. And they have found, almost invariably, that a Pittco Front means bigger box office.

Our staff of experts will gladly cooperate with you and your architect in planning a Pittco Front suited to your needs. And don't miss the Pittco Store Front Caravan, visiting Louisville, Nashville, Knoxville, High Point, Charlotte, Atlanta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Miami, and Birmingham during January and February. Contact our local branch for dates.

Here's a theatre in Chicago, Ill., as it looked before and after being remodeled with a new Pittco Theatre Front. Architect—B. Leo Steif. Use a Pittco Front to make your theatre more attractive, to build up a bigger box office.

EXPLANATION:

Map is divided according to film service territories. The figure adjoining name of exchange city denotes total number of theatres operating. Territories are shaded according to increase in total seats during year (see key). White territories are those in which there were seat losses. In these, the squared figure denotes number of theatres gained or lost, the figure beneath denoting the number of seats lost. The Atlanta territory (black) had the greatest seat gain, 54,619.

DISTRIBUTION OF OPERATING THEATRES IN THE UNITED STATES AT END OF 1936

CONSTRUCTION • OPERATION

VOLUME 126 FEBRUARY 6, 1937 NUMBER 6

Trend to Smaller Capacities Continues

ANALYSIS OF the official figures of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America on the number of theatres in the United States at the end of the year 1936 show interesting variations in the trend of theatre distribution resulting from local conditions. For example, the Buffalo exchange territory, which at the end of 1935 had a total of 298 operating motion picture theatres, contained 322 operating houses at the end of 1936, a gain of 24 theatres, yet lost a total of 30,985 seats.

The Atlanta exchange area also presents an interesting aspect of last year's effect on the exhibition plant. As that section of the South most extensively benefited by the recovery measures of the federal government, this territory impressively demonstrated the consistent appeal of motion picture entertainment by expressing an immediate need for the addition of a substantial number of theatres as soon as there were pay-checks for the average family. In the Atlanta territory, 126 theatres were added during the year, bringing an increase of 54,619 seats, by far the largest gain of any exchange territory.

Graphically showing the distribution of operating theatres in the United States, the map appearing on page 4 also shows the gain or loss in the number of seats per exchange territory, and the gain or loss in the number of theatres for those territories in which the total seats decreased. The total number of theatres operating in the United States on December 31, 1936 was, according to the MPPDA figures, 16,258, representing a gain of 880 houses during the year.

Some other aspects of the situation disclosed in the figures are worthy of notice. The total number of theatres operated by circuits both affiliated with producer-distributor organizations and those not so affiliated, was 6,307. The circuit group of theatres is thus shown to have added 651 houses to its holdings during the year. Independent theatres totaled 12,511 at the end of the year, giving this group a loss of 341 theatres as compared with 1935.

Last year continued the trend toward smaller seating capacities that has characterized theatre planning during the last several years. Whereas the average capacity was 656 at the end of 1935, it becomes 642 in the MPPDA's current figures. In some territories the drop in average capacity was much more precipitous. For example, the average in the Buffalo area decreased during the year from 1,361 in 1935, to 853. In other territories where there was a decrease in total seating along with an increase in total theatres, the averages show this comparison: Albany, 696 in 1935, 647 in 1936; Denver, 511 in 1935, 458 in 1936.

Flood Replacement Cost Placed at $2,500,000

REPLACEMENT and repair of equipment and furnishings in theatres located in the flood area along the Ohio river will cost in the neighborhood of $2,500,000, according to estimates based on conditions following the inundation of adjoining area last spring, and in consideration of the greater damage done during the prolonged spree of the Ohio and its tributaries.

How much greater the burden will become when the cost of building repairs is added, cannot be estimated, since the nature of the construction of the various properties and the area of the buildings affected are at too great a variance. This however, is likely to reach the proportions of the expenditure for equipment and furnishings, particularly if wiring, foundations and structural members have been severely damaged.

Approximately 300 theatres are located in the immediate flood area of the Ohio river valley, and most of these, it is repected, will be found more or less damaged As in the flood of last spring, it is believed that seats will be one of the biggest items in the theatre owner's repair and replacement bill, conceivably amounting to an amount in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. Carpeting will also have to be quite generally replaced. The average cost of replacing the equipment and furnishings most likely to be ruined in a flood of such proportions is placed at $8,000.

Construction Reports Stress South and East

PLANS FOR new theatres reported during January were particularly representative of the eastern third of the United States and the South. While a few of the capacities called for were around 1200, most of them were well under 1000. Reports indicating the trend for the month are given below.

Middletown, Ohio, was not affected by the flood waters, but it had its flood emergency just the same. Above, for example, is R. E. Peffley, manager of the Paramount theatre in Middletown, and his helpers as they are endeavoring to conform to the old admonition, "The show must go on." Middletown obtains its electric current from a Cincinnati power plant, which the flood put out of operation. Middletown's seven theatres had to close, and their patrons began going to nearby cities for entertainment. Mr. Peffley procured two gasoline engines and two generators, set them up in a lot adjoining the Paramount, and in this way obtained current enough to reopen the theatre. Heralds were hastily printed and boys dispatched through the streets distributing them. The Paramount reopened to capacity business that night. In the photograph, Mr. Peffley is standing on the steps, hatless. In the foreground, also hatless, is Tracy Barham of the Southio circuit.

Five new theatres are reported by the Pitts circuit in Virginia, in addition to remodeling projects now underway or in prospect. According to Benjamin J. Pitts, president and general manager, one seating 620 and costing $75,000 will be erected in Richmond; a 1200-seat house costing $125,000 will be constructed in Suffolk; work is scheduled to begin soon on a 750-seat theatre in Emporia, Va., this one to cost $60,000; construction of theatre seating between 800 and 900 and costing about $65,000, will begin April 1; and in Fredericksburg, headquarters city of the circuit, construction has already begun on a 1250-seat house costing $150,000. Each house will have a balcony.

Maurice Shulman and associates have plans for the first new theatre to be erected in Hartford, Conn., in quite a few years. It will seat 800 and be called the Webster Cinema. The exterior will feature a central tower of illuminated glass tiles. Pauline Shulman is reported to be the designer.

P. D. Cota has plans for a 550-seat theatre to be erected in Waukon, Ia., at a reported cost of $20,000. Mr. Cota now operates the Cota in Waukon.

Carey & Alexander, who recently built the New Lakes theatre at Monticello, Ind., and completely remodeled the Lido theatre at Lebanon and the Ritz house at Rockville, will build a new theatre this spring at Lebanon.

M. & P. Theatres is expected to begin construction of a 1200-seat theatre in West Newton, Mass., shortly. That suburban community has no motion picture house at present.

Construction contracts have been let for a new theatre to be erected in Salem, Mo., by F. V. and L. A. Mercier of Perryville. The building, designed by Johnson & Maack, St. Louis architects, is to be of one story, 55 by 120 feet, of brick construction.

Plans for a 700-seat house in Alton, Ill., are being prepared by O. W. Stiegemeyer, 4412 Lindell Blvd., St. Louis. Owners and operators of the new theatre have not been made known by the architect.

Bids will be taken from contractors at an early date on the construction of a new 650-seat theatre in Vandalia, Mo., for R. W. Asbury. Plans prepared by O. W. Stiegemeyer, 4412 Lindell Blvd., St. Louis, call for a one-story building 43 by 120 feet, of brick construction.

With the court of appeals in Albany handing down a decision in favor of the Henry Phipps estate for the erection of a theatre at Madison Avenue and 62d Street, Walter Goelet is now mapping plans for construction of a theatre at Park Avenue, between 53d and 54th Streets, New York City. Property owners had sought to prevent erection of a theatre in this area.

Work on the $110,000 Green Lake theatre in Seattle, has commenced. The house will seat 750 and be of modernistic design. Plans were drawn by Bjarne Moe. The theatre will be managed by Business Properties, Inc., headed by John Markley. The house is due to open June 1.

Elmer Harlow Brient has plans for a 1000-seat theatre on Rappahannock Street, Richmond, Va., to be known probably as the Ginter Park theatre. It will occupy a plot 60 x 160. Frederick A. Bishop is the architect. The new project is expected to be completed about April 15.

Publix-Bamford Theatres, Inc., will build a $75,000 theatre on Haywood Road between Dunwell and Herron Avenues, in West Asheville, N. C., with completion set for late spring. According to Carl R. Bamford, vice-president, the new house will seat 800 and will be modern and fireproof. It will face 27 feet on Haywood road and the lobby section will go back 100 feet and have a width of 89 feet. The building will be L-shaped.

The Fox-Midwest circuit will spend approximately $250,000 for construction and improvements during 1937. The first project will be a 1200-seat house at Mt. Vernon, Ill., to cost about $150,000.

Contracts have been awarded for a new $75,000 motion picture theatre in Findley, Ohio, according to announcement by Homer W. Powell, president of the Quilna Theatre Company. Construction will start within the next two months and the building is expected to be done by Labor Day.

Col. M. T. Flanagan has announced that final details have been worked out for the construction of a theatre in Longview, Tex. The announcement followed a conference between Sol Gordon, president of Jefferson Amusement Company; J. C. Clements, president of East Texas Theatres; and Colonel Flanagan. The house is to be named the Arlyne, and will be built by Flanagan and East Texas.

The Schine circuit has purchased a large lot in the business district of Gallipolis, O., for erection of a theatre, 84 x 184 feet. This town has one theatre and another under construction. This circuit also announces plans for a new theatre in Buffalo, on the site of the present Andrews theatre.

George Gessler, exhibitor of Sweet Home, Ore., announces that plans have been drawn for a 450-seat house in that city, completion of which is expected to be effected in March.

Preliminary plans have been prepared for a new $100,000 theatre on Van Horne Avenue, Outremont, Greater Montreal, Que., for United Amusements.

R. Levine and Company, architects of Chicago, reports that sketches have been completed for a new theatre to be erected by Phil Dieter at 62d Street and Western Avenue, Chicago, and also for a new 1000-seat house at Harlem and Grand Avenues. The houses are to be operated by B. J. and J. J. Cooney, who formerly were operators of several South Side theatres in Chicago.

Theodore Coleman, owner of the American theatre in Mount Carmel, Ill., has awarded a contract to Jett Brothers of Fairfield for construction of a 700-seat theatre there. Plans and specifications were prepared by O. W. Stiegemeyer.

H. H. Chase, owner of the Diamond, a 200-seat house in Odessa, Mich., is having plans made for a 400-seat theatre there, which he will build this spring. The present house will be dismantled upon completion of the new one.

Set $1,250,000 for Building and Remodeling

FOX WEST COAST has set $1,250,000 for building and remodeling during 1937. Of this amount, $500,000 will be spent on three new theatres announced previously for the Los Angeles area, and the balance for remodeling of present properties. The new houses will be the Sunbeam, at Compton, and theatres in Westwood Village and West Pico.

Would Bar Theatres Costing Under $75,000

AN ORDINANCE to raise the theatre license fee would bring Beloit an additional $450 per year in revenue. The measure was introduced at the request of T. M. Ellis, Jr., and Gerald A. Turner, operators of the Majestic and Rex, respectively, and co-operators of the State theatres. The theatres are the only ones in Beloit.

Planning for Best Use of Ground Area

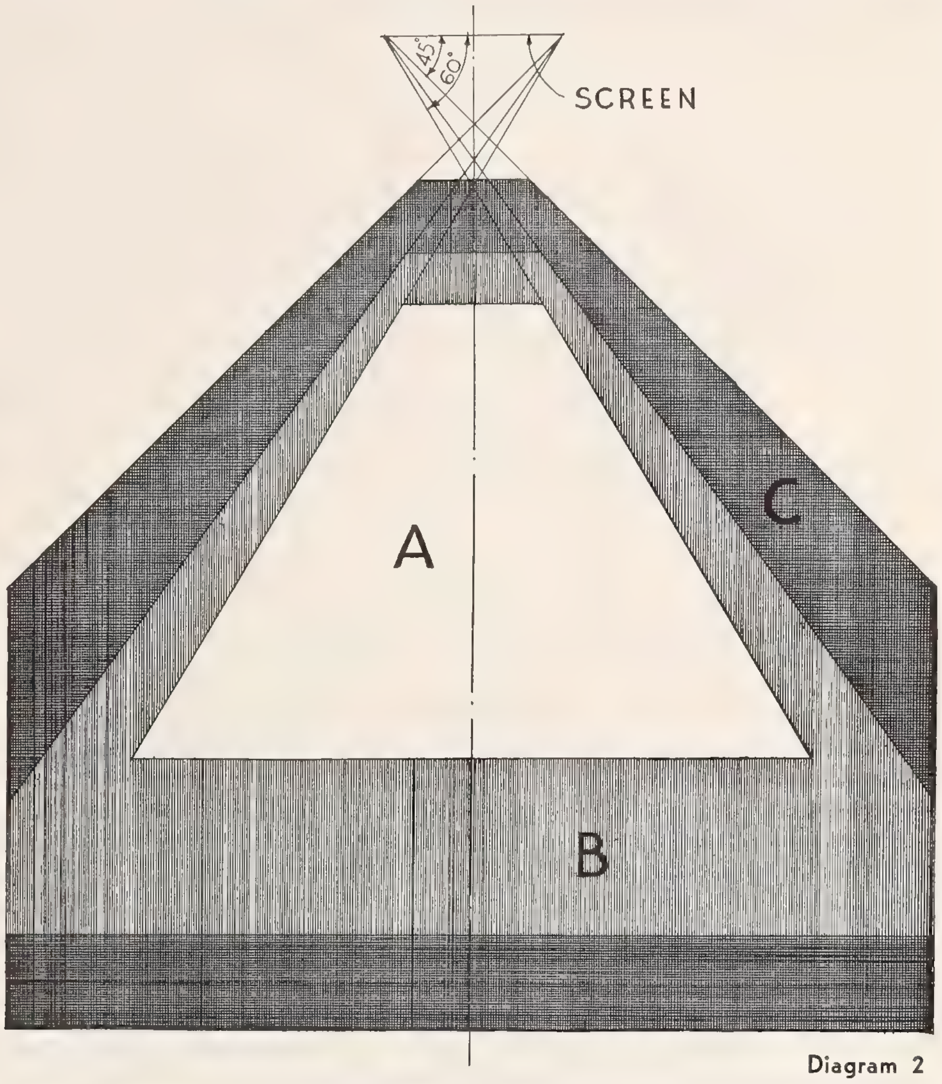

Diagram 2

- Presenting a method for adjusting auditorium form and site so as to obtain largest number of desirable seats.

By BEN SCHLANGER

TO ASCERTAIN what would be the most economic use of ground area for a motion picture theatre it is necessary to find the shape of the auditorium and the size of screen used in connection therewith which would produce the maximum number of desirable seat positions per unit of ground area. Knowledge of what would be the most efficient shape is most necessary at the time that consideration is being given to obtaining a plot or building for motion picture theatre use.

Use of a plot of ground which produces an inefficient shape of seating plan has the effect of increasing the rental and therefore the overhead costs which the exhibitor has to overcome. Seats located in positions poorly adapted for proper vision of the screen are so much deadwood, which have to be maintained at a continual loss.

Diagrams 1 and 2 are two seating plan shapes. In Diagram 1 the screen width is approximately one-third of the seating plan width. In Diagram 2 the screen width is one-fifth of the seating plan width. These plans do not include extra width which may be necessary for wall aisles or side exit passages. These plans illustrate the method of determining the most efficient seating plan shape.

In both diagrams, Area A indicates the desirable seating locations. Areas B and C the tolerable, but less desirable seating positions. Both plans contain the same amount of actual seating area, although the plan in Diagram 2 requires a slightly larger basic rectangular plot. The important difference between the two plans illustrated is that Area A percentage of the total seating area is at least 20% greater for the plan in Diagram 1 than for the plan in Diagram 2.

A general rule derived from the findings in these diagrams is that the screen width should come as close to the width of the auditorium as is practically possible to obtain high efficiency in desirable seating positions. If possible, the width of the auditorium should be an amount equal to the screen width, plus one-third of the screen width, to allow for possible wide-film adaptation, plus an additional amount equal to one-third of the screen width for curtain space, and sufficient additional width for exit passage on either side of the screen enclosure when such exits are necessary.

The limits enclosing Areas A, B and C shown on the diagrams are fixed according to the latest data available for determining proper visual conditions for viewing motion pictures. Yet any deviations or modifications which may be made in fixing these boundaries would not affect basic principles involved in this method of determining the most efficient seating plan.

Modern Forms and Materials In Theatre Fixture Lighting

● Suggestions by a well known theatre architect for theatres in which it is desired to use light ornamentally. With original designs by the author

By JOHN EBERSON

THE MOTION picture theatre—at least here in America—is no more a mere subject for the arts of embellishment. Its design today is properly functional. But its function is not so confined as some would interpret it. A theatre is, after all, a theatre. Its very environment operates as a cog in the escape-mechanism which is, for the great mass of people, that which propels them toward the theatre in their leisure hours.

This is pointed out at the beginning of this presentation of designs for modern lighting fixtures for theatres because an important purpose of such fixtures is to use light to create the kind of environment that most people seek when they go to the theatre.

The major lighting problem found in the motion picture theatre is presented by the auditorium. Today, from studies in illumination and the consequent development of more varied and effective equipment and materials, we reject direct lighting for the auditorium. Indirect light, or diffused light, only should be the means of illumination. It should be filtered, so to speak, so toned that it merely glows, is only a remote, though appreciable, presence, rather than a means of creating visibility.

Lighters—or, as they are usually called, for no good reason, "electric lighting fixtures"—that are used in the lobby should be entirely directional, applied with sufficient theoretical and practical knowledge of the efficiency of incandescent lamps so as to take full advantage of reflective surfaces, making them integral parts of the lighter itself.

Calculation of proper illumination level in foot-candles for various sections of the theatre, has been frequently undertaken, of course, and reams of paper have been used to offer theories about the matter. Theories they remain, however. No general rule is available for practicable guidance—every auditorium, every lobby is different, each presenting its own type of contributing factors in dimensions and reflecting surfaces to advise pencil-and-pad decisions. One must consider distance, texture of wall finishes, floor coverings, specific colors present, cross-lights, and so on.

The designs chosen for illustration here offer a variety of suggestions, for a variety of purposes. In Figure 1 we have a fixture for women's lounge, consisting in a mirror plate at the ceiling from which a silver globe is suspended. It has a whimsical, airy theme, with white porcelain lambs, glazed, upon a base consisting in a graduated series of convex forms in chromium-plated metal.

A fixture to take the place of the typical rear wall bracket is shown in Figure 2. This has solid sides, emitting no light toward the screen. Etched ground glass is placed at the bottom, colored in pastel tones to give a soft light under the balcony.

Figure 3 represents a directional sign. It is open at the bottom, illuminating door and threshold. The glass is etched and colored, with a central piece of crystal glass bars, making this directional sign a lighter as well. Tubular lamps should be used for best results.

Figure 4 is a louvre chromium-plated unit for a marquee that has been poorly lighted. This unit is equipped with a 100-watt lamp, and is good-looking enough to be exposed. It can also be used to spot the box office, the entrance doors, or display frames.

Figure 5 is a fixture for a men's lounge. It represents pipes and a tin of tobacco. The pipes are in natural meerschaum color, and intermediate socket amber round lamps should be used inside the pipe bowls for the "glow" of the pipes. The central piece and other metal elements are in dark bronze. A standard 75-watt lamp inside the "tobacco can" is the light source, and a frosted ground glass plate is placed at the underside to soften the light.

In Figure 6 we have an effective combination lobby and display frame fixture, to be used over built-in display frames. Metal parts are chromium-plated, and lumiline lamps are used behind crystal glass rods. For lobby ceiling use, the rods run parallel to the ceiling; for display frames, they run vertically. An effective color combination for this fixture is straw-color and "surprise pink."

An effective fixture for a lobby or foyer ceiling is shown in Figure 7. A mirror plate is against the ceiling, from which is suspended a ring of semi-concealed tinted lamps behind a facing of catalin rods. The bottom is open except at the center, where there is a convex mirror, its rounded side upward, and this reflects the light so that the lamps are multiplied many times, with an optical illusion of great depth.

Figure 8 represents a shelf lumiline lamp fixture for the sidewall of an auditorium. The lumiline lamps are entirely shielded from the main floor and balcony, practically all the light going toward the ceiling, with the audience conscious of only a diffused glow issuing from tinted louvres.

Figure 9 shows a large trough light for a lobby. It is built up of sections of catalin rods with the main light source behind ground glass ribbed plate. All glass and catalin care carried in metal arbors, and the entire fixture is in a paint finish.

In Figure 10 is shown a special ceiling fixture consisting in a broad dome from which is diffused unobtrusive lighting during the performance. It contains rim lights, punch house-lights, diffused by a rim of ground glass plates. Access for relamping is by means of a catwalk.

An unusual and very practicable women's lounge furnishing is shown in Figure 11. It consists in a dressing table to be placed against a large wall mirror. The fixture contains a concealed lamp which sheds soft reflected light upon milady's face, while she is grateful for the magnifying mirror within the lamp head.

In planning lighting for the auditorium, this division of the theatre is to be considered as great shadow-box, with the luminous screen as its focal point. There must be no interference with this shadow-box function, and properly designed fixtures can provide suitable ornamentation, create a warm, welcoming and stimulating environment, and supply a judicious amount of illumination to permit patrons to feel safe and find seats, without at the same time reducing the clarity of the picture or distracting patrons seated in certain sections of the house.

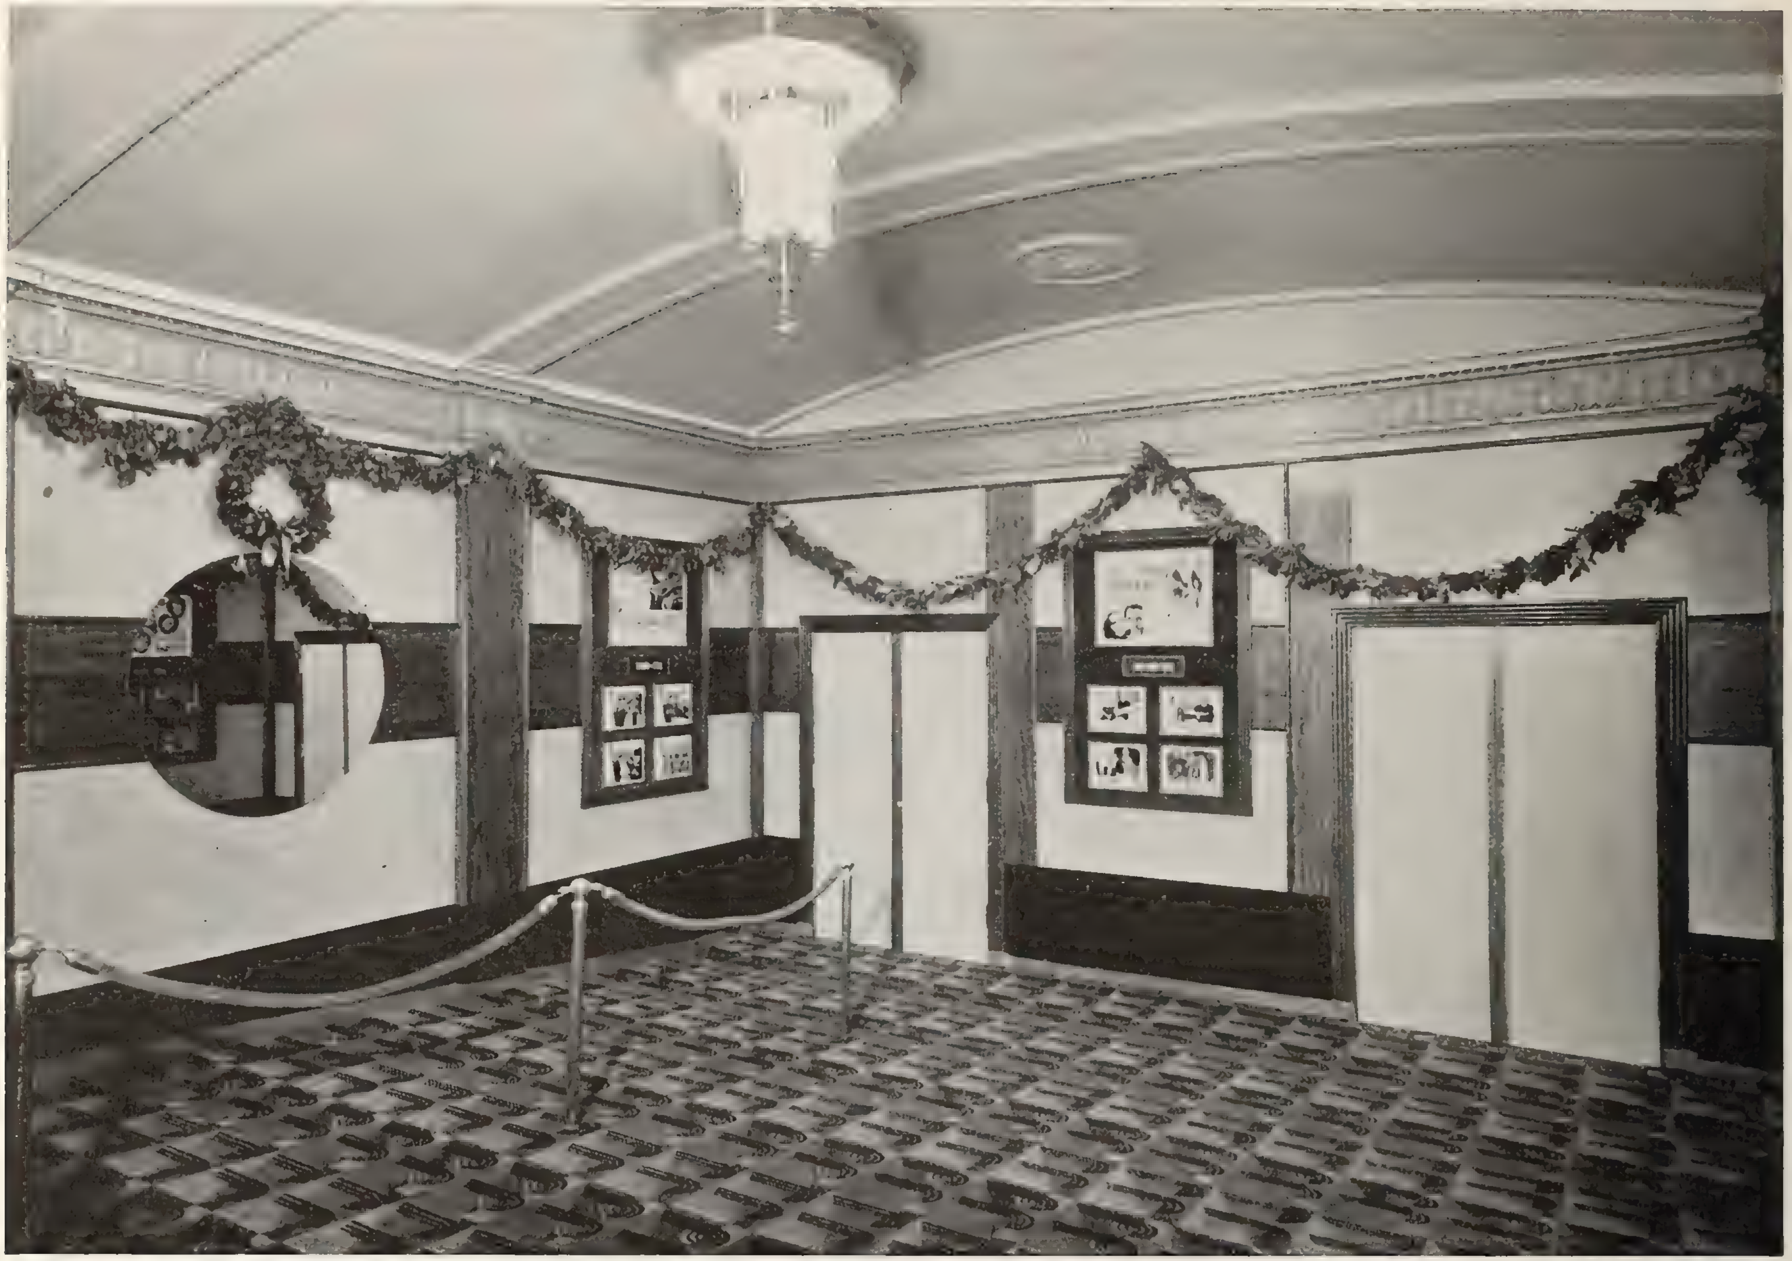
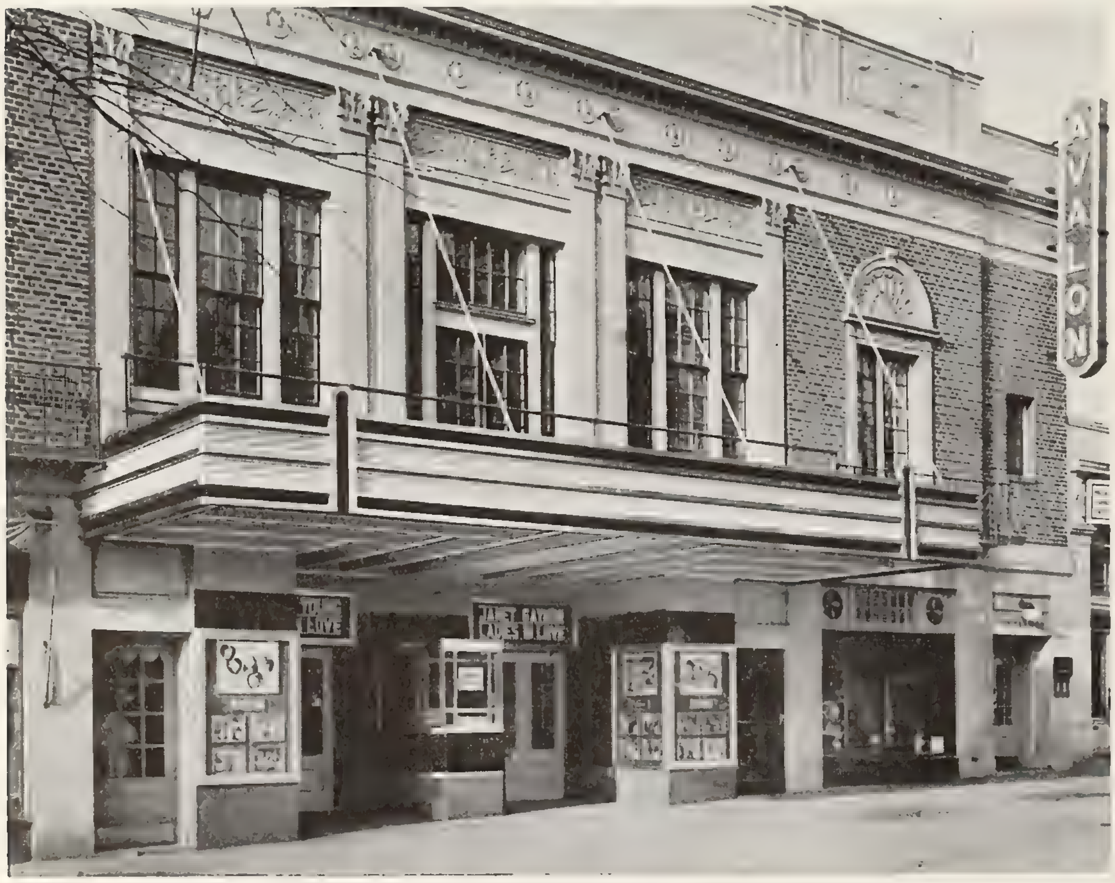
A Quick Change in Modern Materials



Below: Entrance area as refinished in Vitrolite and Formica. Above: the lobby, with walls in wood veneers above a Formica base.



WITH THE theatre actually closed for only a week, a complete transformation of Warners' Avalon in Washington, D. C., has been effected in the new materials, including wood veneers, architectural glass, synthetics and fabrics. The Avalon is one of fifteen Warner theatres in the nation's capital, and the remodeling was conceived and executed under the direction of A. Julian Brylawski, head of the circuit's real estate department in the Washington zone, and Herman Maier, chief of construction.

The erection of a new marquee and front give the Avalon a completely new appearance on the exterior. Vitrolite, in panels of red, black and sun-tan, the latter at the top panel to match the ceiling of the marquee; Formica doors with glass center panels, and a new box office made of Formica and stainless steel; and stainless steel 40x60-inch frames, complete the transformation here.

The lobby is decorated with birdseye maple and walnut, with walnut frames and trim. A black Formica panel, 1½ feet in height, runs around the base. The new carpet is in an attractive design of black and red figures on a gray field. The display frames in the lobby are of walnut with blue velour background. The ceiling is vaulted and of plaster painted in off-white.

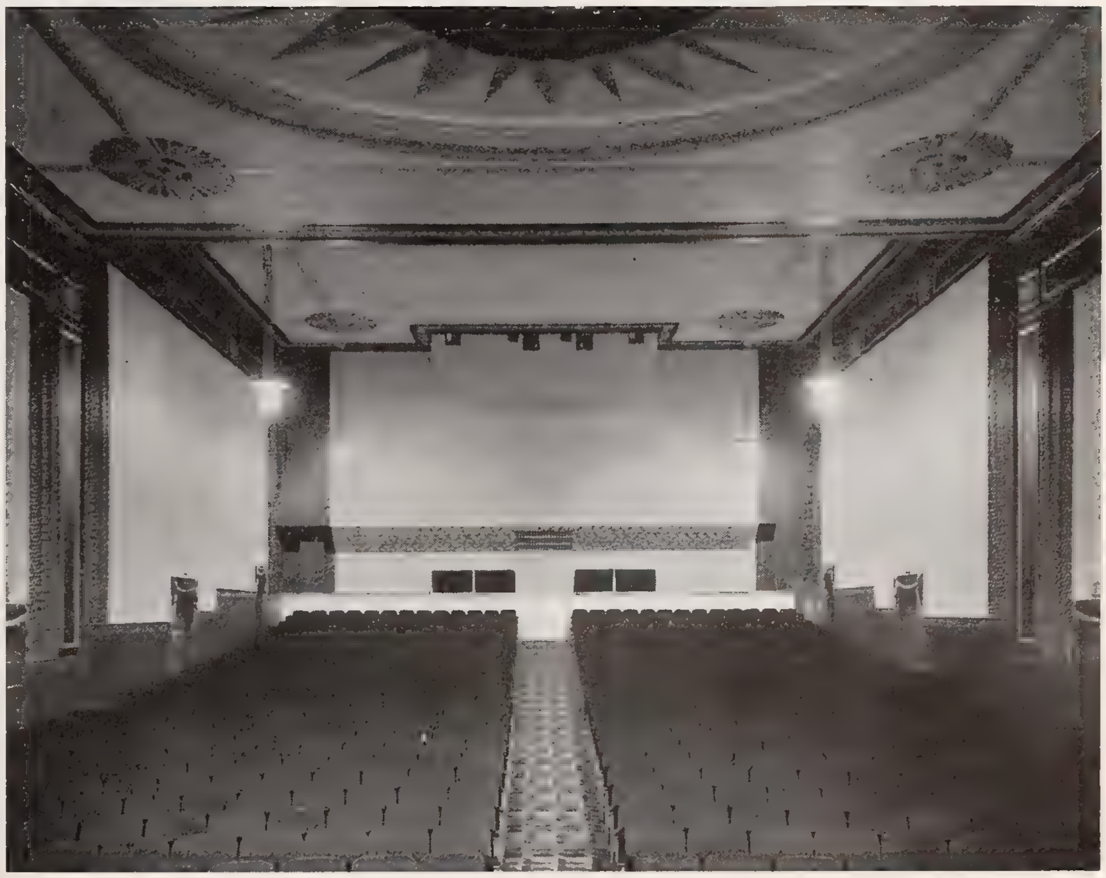
Five new lumline fixtures have been installed, four in the auditorium and one in the lobby. They are of the chandelier type.

Walls of the auditorium have been covered with ivory damask, with a leaf figure, and with trim of wine-colored damask. A new stage set, of ivory and wine color, and a redecorated ceiling, were also parts of the alterations. Beams and pilasters in the auditorium were treated to give the effect of walnut wood.

The transformation included new seating by the Ideal Seating Company, with blue mohair back and seat. Complete air-conditioning equipment was also installed in the Avalon.

The Avalon, which seats 800, is managed by Lamar Keen. Keen under the supervision of John J. Payette, Warner Brothers Theatres zone manager in the Washington area.



A 528 Seat Theatre Generally Modernized At a Cost of $12,000

Section of the new foyer.

AS PART OF the extensive program of remodeling being undertaken by the Sparks circuit in Florida, the Victoria in New Smyrna, one of the smaller units, has been modernized in both decoration and equipment. The cost of remodeling and new equipment is placed at $12,000.

At the front, a new marquee was erected, of metal construction with red and blue trim, while a new name was also added (sign work by Flexlume). To further improve the front appearance, bases of Carrara glass were placed beneath the display windows of the stores adjoining the theatre entrance area.

Changes in the auditorium, in addition to general refurbishing, consisted in the placing of panels along the side walls for both decorative and acoustical purposes. The panels are surfaced in dark red figured damask, and this fabric conceals balsaam wool acoustic treatment. The auditorium was entirely reseated with 528 spring-bottom chairs (by American Seating Company).

The same material used for the auditorium is employed in the foyer above plaster wals painted light ivory. Entrance lobby walls are painted a two-tone buff, with ivory trim. The box office has been placed well behind the sidewalk because of the presence of store display windows at the inner corners. Carrara glass is also used for the base of the box office, the upper part of which is trimmed with silver and black enamel.

Included in the new equipment are two Artic Nu-Aire blowers, which are installed on each side of the stage, over dressing rooms. Ducts run to two auditorium grilles, which open over heating units. Latest type RCA Photophone sound equipment was also installed.

A British Design Emphasizing Light

A RATHER distinctively British adventure in novelty, but with practical demonstrations of the theatrical value of modern, dynamic lighting, is the Grosvenor cinema in Rayner's Lane, Middlesex, England. The house seats 1250 on two floors and erected at a reported cost of $125,000.

The Grosvenor is strictly of modern feeling throughout all its forms and appointments, but not with any degree of severity. The interior in particular has a warmth that extends even unto an impression of intimacy.

The exterior is in general extremely plain, of brown brick construction with little trim. The facade treatment consists principally in a central pylon, recessed, with a smaller pylon-like element, also recessed, on each side. Theatrical character is lent this portion by a curving central element, a part of the structure, which is traced in luminous tube lighting. The pylon recesses are also outlined in tube lighting.

The most striking feature of the foyer, which is quite spacious, is a sunken floor area for tea service, with an oval ceiling treatment above consisting in a series of lighting troughs. The ticket booth is situated in this room, just inside the entrance doors, and it repeats the curve motif of the facade. The main foyer staircase leads to an ante-room from which traffic proceeds to the balcony. A women's lounge is on this level.

The auditorium also takes up the curve motif of the facade, particularly in the ceiling lighting, which supplies practically all of the illumination of the auditorium. The ceiling lighting is from plaster troughs concealing 1600 lamps.

The general color scheme of the auditorium consists in tones of cream, green, orange and gold.

How to Avoid Liability in Dealing With Disorderly Theatre Patrons

● Setting forth procedure indicated in the rulings of the higher courts in damage suits brought by persons claiming physical or moral abuse

By LEO T. PARKER

EXHIBITORS and theatre managers and their house staffs not infrequently have to contend with unruly or disorderly patrons. The method of doing so is extremely important. The price of not knowing the rights of patrons and the legal limits to which theatre representatives may go in dealing with such situations may be a dear one, either in damages or loss of good-will.

To guide them, fortunately, the courts have laid down certain well settled rules which, if carefully followed, go far to indicate how to avoid any liability in handling disorderly and otherwise undesirable patrons.

Obviously, it is by far best to explain to a disorderly patron the necessity for quietness, because other patrons insist upon it, but in cases where explanations are not effective it may be necessary to deal firmly with such patrons. And there the danger lies. If a manager or member of the staff who has authority to eject patrons, fails to be diplomatic and publicly remonstrates with a patron who is innocent of creating disorder, the humiliated patron may recover damages. However, if the patron is quietly and gently requested to refrain from further disturbance, the incident may pass unnoticed and the patron cannot recover damages.

LAWFUL DEGREE OF FORCE

THE COURTS have consistently held that a person is deemed to know the exact consequence of his acts. Therefore, where a theatre proprietor has just cause to eject a disorderly, drunken, or otherwise undesirable patron, he may exercise reasonable judgment and request the patron to leave, after which the proprietor is justified in using sufficient force to eject the patron who refuses to leave quietly. However, irrespective of the degree of force required to eject a patron or to start to eject him, the theatre representative must remove his hands from the patron as soon as he is (a) off the theatre premises, or (b) states that he will leave quietly. In other words, care and prudence must be exercised to avoid using more force than actually is necessary.

On the other hand, if a theatre proprietor or his employe desists from using force when a disorderly patron is ejected, or being ejected, and the patron attacks the proprietor or his employe, the patron is liable for damages to the extent of the injuries sustained by the proprietor or his employe. Furthermore, the theatre owner or his employe may use great force to protect himself against injury.

"REASONABLE RULES"

Still another important, well established point of the law is that a theatre owner has a legal right to eject any patron who persists in violating reasonable rules and regulations. In one case a patron violated a theatre rule against protruding feet in the aisles. The court held that under these circumstances the proprietor's duty is to request the man to obey the rules and then, if he persists, he should be requested to leave, after offering to return the admission paid, and if he refuses to go, the theatre owner or his employe, may use the necessary force to eject him, without incurring liability.

FOLLOW THESE RULES IN EJECTING PATRONS

In order to avoid liability, when ejecting a patron, follow these rules: (1) Approach the patron in an orderly and quiet manner and explain to him in a low tone the reason why he is being requested to leave the theatre.

(2) If the patron refuses to leave, then a sufficient amount of force may be used to eject him from the theatre, bearing in mind that no liability exists unless undue and unnecessary force is used to eject the patron.

(3) While the patron is being ejected he should not be cursed or otherwise abused.

(4) If, while he is being ejected, he plainly states that he will leave in an orderly manner, give him a chance to do so.

In fact, the various courts have held that a theatre ticket is merely a license issued to a patron, and without explanation the theatre owner may refund the price of admission and request the patron to leave.

There are, of course, certain liabilities, in view of State laws, which will not be discussed here, as to a theatre owner's liability for refusing to permit a theatre patron to enjoy an exhibition because of color, race or religion. In many states, including New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois, the courts do not approve of theatre owners refunding the admission price and compelling patrons to leave because of color, race or religion. On the other hand, it is not unlawful in any State to refuse to admit patrons into a theatre, or for ejecting those who refuse to obey rules. For example, a theatre owner was held not liable when he refused to sell a ticket to a person who was unclean (158 N. Y. S. 867). In another case, a proprietor was held not liable when he refused to admit a person who had no collar (78 N. Y. S. 1109). Obviously, a theatre owner cannot escape liability where he refuses to permit one person to enter who is unclean, or who does not wear a collar, when others of this classification are permitted to enter, if such may be proved.

LIABILITY FOR FORCEFUL EJECTION

IN ORDER that readers who are up against these problems regularly may have before them actual illustrations of acts which result in theatre owners being liable for using too much force in ejecting patrons, we shall review the facts of a few recent and leading higher court cases in which theatre owners actually have been held liable.

CHARGES ASSAULT

In one case (Shramek v. Walker, 149 S. E. 331), it was disclosed that a proprietor struck and seriously injured a patron who refused to leave when the former merely requested him to go. In view of this testimony the court held the injured person entitled to $3500 damages stating the following important law:

"If a man strikes another and inflicts a battery upon another, and can show a law-

Soliciting Feminine Patronage With Lounges and Trained Maids

• In the RKO theatres in Cincinnati, the women's lounge has been made a featured service, with a maid especially schooled. And the service has paid, says Mr. Goetz, division manager

Lounge attendants of RKO theatres in Cincinnati, with Mrs. Dorothy Rader, supervisor.

THE LOUNGE facilities for women patrons is a much more important adjunct to the theatre than the average manager is wont to regard it, is the opinion of Joe Goetz, assistant division manager of RKO Midwest in the Cincinnati area. The average woman patron visits the lounge at least once, and sometimes oftener, when attending the theatre, he found, and forthwith decided that this division of the theatre is capable of influencing a favorable or unfavorable reaction to the theatre as a whole, in proportion to the way the lounge is equipped and maintained.

"No matter how attractive and well kept the front of a theatre, the lobby or the auditorium may be," he told this writer, "an indifferently maintained lounge can quickly counteract, if not destroy, the good impressions gained in other sections of the house, and this reacts against the entire house."

And in accordance with these views, he has made a feature of the lounge in every RKO house under his jurisdiction in Cincinnati. A first step was to refurbish, in some cases to remodel, these lounges. The second was to provide maid service.

But merely stationing a maid in a lounge to wait upon milady (and what woman doesn't crave that sort of thing?) was not enough. Even though instructed in their duties by the managers, they were more or less inclined to be mere automatons, and although creating "atmosphere," given to performing their duties in a perfunctory or routine manner, which Mr. Goetz regards as being really worse than not having anyone in charge of the lounge. Women are quick to resent indifference, and thus the service would prove a boomerang.

Untutored maids, as experience has proved by reports filtering through from managers, have been guilty of inattention, impertinence, curiosity, eavesdropping on patrons' conversations, and in some cases, even unsolicited participation therein; arguments have occurred, and other unbecoming conduct practiced, obviously, through clination, habit or impulse.

To eliminate such conditions, Mr. Goetz organized a regular school for the staff of colored maids in order that they might attain the highest degree of efficiency in the discharge of their duties, and carry on with the utmost tact, diplomacy, dignity and reserve. The maids were placed in charge of a white supervisor, Mrs. Dorothy Rader. They meet once a week in regular class sessions. Talks are given by the supervisor, theatre managers and others on the most effective ways and means of serving and dealing with women patrons.

One maid is on duty in each lounge from the opening of the theatre until 6 p.m., when she is relieved by another who stays until closing. The supervisor visits each lounge daily at unexpected times to check up on the maids and thoroughly inspect the department. This, obviously, is something which the managers could not do with propriety. The supervisor makes periodical reports to the division office, thus placing the lounge on a par with other theatre departments.

The net result is that now when a

About People of the Theatre

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

Joseph A. Lurie of Hartford, and Samuel Miriam of Providence, have acquired the lease of the Strand theatre in Wallingford, Conn., from John Kata. Both of the former are newcomers to the business in Connecticut. Mr. Kata operates the State in New Britain.

David Flexer, operator of the Varsity theatre in Columbus, Miss., has purchased the Ritz at New Albany, Miss.

Ted Emerson, manager of the Paramount theatre in Omaha, which has been closed by Tri-States, has been named publicity director for the circuit's 14 Nebraska houses. He succeeds Charles Schlaifer, who resigned to become publicist for the United Artists theatre in San Francisco. Assistant Manager Breck Fagin of the Paramount, goes to the Orpheum as assistant, while Assistant Manager Oscar Peck of the Orpheum goes to the Omaha as assistant. In other changes, Treasurer Leroy Voorhees of the Paramount, goes to the Omaha as treasurer, and Assistant Manager Jack Kolbo of the Omaha, returns to the Orpheum as treasurer.

The Park in Boston, managed by Max Michaels, is in line for remodeling and renovation within the next few weeks. Estimates are already being asked.

Oscar C. Johnson, who owns three theatres at Falls City, Neb., has been elected a director of the Chamber of Commerce of that city.

Robert Word has opened his new Ritz theatre in Scottsboro, Ala. The house was built at a reported cost of $10,000 and seats 500.

Boyd B. Horton, owner and manager of the State in Concord, N. C., has installed new lighting fixtures, supplied by Roman Art Company, Inc., of St. Louis.

The engagement has been announced of Newell B. Kurson, Graphic Theatres Circuit owner, and Miss Eleanor J. Wallerstein, daughter of a New York attorney. The wedding will take place in New York sometime in February. Mr. Kurson's headquarters are in Bangor, Me.

Western Electric sound equipment will be installed in the ten Standard Circuit theatres in Oklahoma City, Okla., according to Pat McGee, general manager, who has been in New York making the arrangements. The theatres include the Criterion, Midwest, Liberty, Capitol and Warner, downtown. The others are suburban situations.

Nathan Lampert, operator of theatres in Colchester, East Hampton and Moodus, Conn., has purchased a theatre site in Glastonbury, Conn.

The Princess in Jacksonville, Ala., has been renovated at a cost of $2,000, the new equipment including seats and floor covering. J. L. Townley is owner and manager.

Theatre openings have been running ahead of closing in New England during recent weeks. J. L. Thayer has shut Leddy's in Epping, N. H. George Roberts has sold the Vergennes in Vergennes, Vt., to Interstate. M. Lerner has opened the Premier in Gilbertville. Watt Hall in Thomaston, Me., has been opened by Ella Andrews. The Armory in Eastport, Me., has been closed by Mrs. W. Shea. J. D. Santamore has shut the Mansfield in Underhill, Vt. The Pepperill in East Pepperill has been opened by Gerald Swaebe. The State in Farmington, Me., formerly operated by H. H. Paul, has been reopened.

ALL'S WELL—THAT ENDS WELL

It was like this, insists Francis Gooch, manager of M & P's Columbia theatre at Bath, up in Maine:

He had scheduled a special morning performance. But the feature picture didn't arrive. So he borrowed some shorts. Then the feature did arrive—only it was the wrong one. So o-o-o-o—

He got up on the stage to announce that patrons could get refunds or passes. Whereupon the lights went out—breakdown in the power company's plant.

Well, there was power again for the evening show—only it proved too little for projection. Again Mr. Gooch ascended to the stage, this time to ask for volunteers for an impromptu amateur show. Two patrons responded. A phonograph was borrowed, but there weren't any records. So a radio was borrowed. But it wouldn't work.

In the meantime the house was filling up. Eventually there was enough juice for projection, and without any advance billing whatever, Mr. Gooch ran the films he had in the house to an all-time record audience!

It only goes to show. . .

The Kayton, now under construction in Montgomery, W. Va., by E. W. and T. S. Kelly, will be opened in March, according to present plans. The house has been leased to Kayton Theatres, Inc., of which P. V. McKay and T. L. Houghton are the controlling factors. The company also operates houses in Grove City and Franklin, Pa.

The Schine circuit has taken over the Moose theatre at Norwalk, Ohio, heretofore operated by the Moose Lodge. The house will be remodeled. The company also operates the Forum in Norwalk. William K. Selman is in charge of both houses.

Clifford L. Niles will open a theatre at Anamosa, Ia., about May 1. An existing building will be remodeled and made into the Circle theatre as the new member of the Niles group.

Wayne Talkington of Harrington, Wash., who operates a circuit of houses in that state, has purchased the Family theatre in Endicott from Mrs. Anna Green.

M. M. Buchanan, district manager of Malco Theatres, Inc., of Memphis, Tenn., has announced the leasing of the May theatre, which will be remodeled.

Kermit High, manager of the Carolina theatre at Wilson, N. C., for the past five years, has been transferred to the Carolina at Burlington, N. C. Spencer Wester of Greensboro, succeeds him at Wilson.

D. J. Foley, who recently closed the Mida at Sweet Springs, Mo., due to adverse weather conditions, has joined M-G-M's staff of checkers.

A. A. Richards, operator of the Neptune Palace in Alameda, Calif., has transferred the house to Abe Markowitz of San Francisco.

Glen W. Dickinson has disposed of his interests in the State theatre at Larned, Kan., to H. L. Reed, Larned banker and owner of the State building. Mr. Reed will operate the house.

Willis M. Reeves, aged 64, operator of the Highland theatre in Little Rock, Ark., died recently. He is survived by a son and daughter.

The new Rena theatre has been opened in Kellogg, Ida., by Fred F. Moe.

A. V. Jecminek, owner and operator of the Empress theatre in Verdegre, Neb., has installed a single channel boom socket amplifier and speaker combination. The equipment was supplied by the Goodall Electric Manufacturing Company.

The State, a new theatre, has opened in Hertford, N. C., under the supervision of W. T. CULPEPPER of Elizabeth City.

M. & P. Theatres has taken over the Hyde Park, which M. SPERO formerly operated in Boston, and the Bayside, which DANIEL MURPHY previously ran in Nantasket.

MRS. C. CASHEN has leased the West Bend (Ia.) theatre to GAIL PETTIT of Algona. Mr. Pettit also operates the State in Algona.

The Kingsbridge theatre in the Bronx, New York, owned by Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, Inc., has installed a portable public address system using Amperite microphones. Provision is made for two mikes and radio or phonograph input. The equipment was installed by Temple Sound Equipment Company.

S. H. LYLE, who has operated the Macon theatre at Franklin, N. C., for the past ten years, has sold the theatre to GARLAND L. TOMLIN and associates of Clayton, Ga. CHARLES INGRAM will be house manager.

The mother of J. A. KAIRIS, manager of the Auditorium in Waterbury, Conn., died recently.

HARRY DORSEY has reopened the Gaity theatre at Santa Maria, Calif.

WYLIE R. and BURGESS CONLEY plan to erect a theatre in Reedley, Calif.

JAMES EDWARDS, JR., will shortly open the Garvey theatre at Alhambra, Calif.

The Twilight theatre in Greensburg, Kan., has been equipped with new lighting fixtures, supplied by the Roman Art Company. LAWRENCE JUSTICE is manager of the house.

R. L. BUSBY of Washington, D. C., and MARVIN SMITH of White Stone, Va., have opened their new Dixie theatre in Kilmarnock, Va., operated for negroes. The Dixie seats 300.

WILLIAM MCCOURT, former chief-of-staff at Keith's Memorial in Boston, has been transferred to that house from the Albee in Providence. He is acting as assistant manager.

KENNETH POWELL, owner of the Oliver theatre in Palisade, Neb., has installed a low-type intensity rectifier, supplied by the Goodall Electric Manufacturing Co.

The Trans-Lux theatre being constructed in Washington, D. C., will be ready for the public between February 15

THE CLIMAX REFLECTOR is a new patented device which employs individual reflectors and natural color lenses so as to collect and amplify the entire light output of a lamp, much of which is ordinarily lost, and redirect it into useful channels.

The unit, a complete weather-tight assembly approved by the Underwriters Laboratories, screws into the standard socket in place of a lamp and is easily cleaned without danger of breakage.

It employs a 3 or 6 watt, 115 volt lamp made and guaranteed by General Electric or Westinghouse. Lamps are quickly replaced in the original unit. The use of the unit eliminates troubles encountered with heavy loads on flasher systems.

Francis M. Falge (Nela Park Engineering Department, General Electric Co.) says: "A clear lamp in your reflector has its end candlepower increased 3-fold. Thus . . . 6 watts bcomes almost as effective as 25."

The Atkraft Zephyr Pre-Fabricated Marquee can now be equipped with recessed Climax Reflector Borders, making flush construction. Easy to clean—no breakage.

Willard Seale has purchased the Rialto in Hillyard, Wash. Mr. Seale formerly was assistant manager at the Orpheum in Spokane. He plans to remodel the Rialto and install new equipment. James Keefe, assistant manager at the Fox in Spokane, has been named to take Seale's place at the Orpheum. James Ashlock moves to the Fox from the Liberty. Dick Reed moves up to assistant manager from doorman at the Liberty.

Harry Luft has assumed full ownership of the Diluf theatre in Spokane, Wash., from H. Dillingham, and has changed the name to Rainbo.

Max Conniff, owner of the Avalon theatre, at Pass Christian, Miss., has taken over the Majestic at Newton, and the Lyric at Bay Spring.

Joseph S. Griggs, former manager of the Lyric in Columbus, Ohio, and Myer Rothstein of Downers Grove, have purchased the old Star theatre, a Columbus suburban house, which is being modernized. The house will be renamed the Florence in honor of Grigg's mother.

Gore Brothers have arranged for installation of new type RCA Photophone sound equipment in their two houses, El Rey and Lido, now under construction in Beverly Hills and Los Angeles, respectively.

William A. E. Drescher, vice president of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, Rochester, N. Y., who died recently, after a brief illness, was associated with that company more than 60 years. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Joseph F. Taylor and Mrs. Gordon C. Baird; a son, Theodore Bausch Drescher, and eight grandchildren.

R. D. Stallings, formerly connected with the booking department of North Carolina Theatres, Inc., Charlotte, has been appointed manager of the Palace theatre in Raleigh, N. C., succeeding Al Barber.

The Harvey Amusement Company, headed by J. A. Harvey, Sr., has plans for the remodeling of the Glas theatre in Madera, Calif. The seating capacity will be increased to 800.

The Tamalpais theatre in San Anselmo, Calif., owned by Blumenfeld Theatres, will be remodeled throughout at an estimated cost of $30,000. Plans for the remodeling are by S. Charles Lee.

C. E. Mosher is the new manager of the Casino and Chieftan at Sac City, Ia. He was located at Rockford for the last year.

W. D. Sears, operator of the Palace theatre in Taylorville, N. C., has installed latest type RCA photophone sound equipment.

The Legion theatre in Ruthven, Ia., will be opened the last of February under the direction of Lyle Naland, who operated the old Legion theatre, which was destroyed by fire.

The Noe, new 1000-seat suburban theatre in San Francisco, has been opened by R. A. McNeill, Mike Naify and Mark Keller, owners of the Golden State circuit. Some $200,000 was expended on the house. Deichman & Jorgenson were the architects. The Palmer theatre, 400-seat Golden State theatre in the same district, will be kept dark until the lease on it expires in some five months.

John Callopy, who operates the Dora at Turon, Kan., is opening a house at Cunningham, Kan.

A. C. Wooten, formerly manager of Glen W. Dickinson's Booth at Independence, Kan., is planning a new house at Paola.

The Ocilla theatre in Ocilla, Ga., was opened late in January by Mr. and Mrs. Gammon.

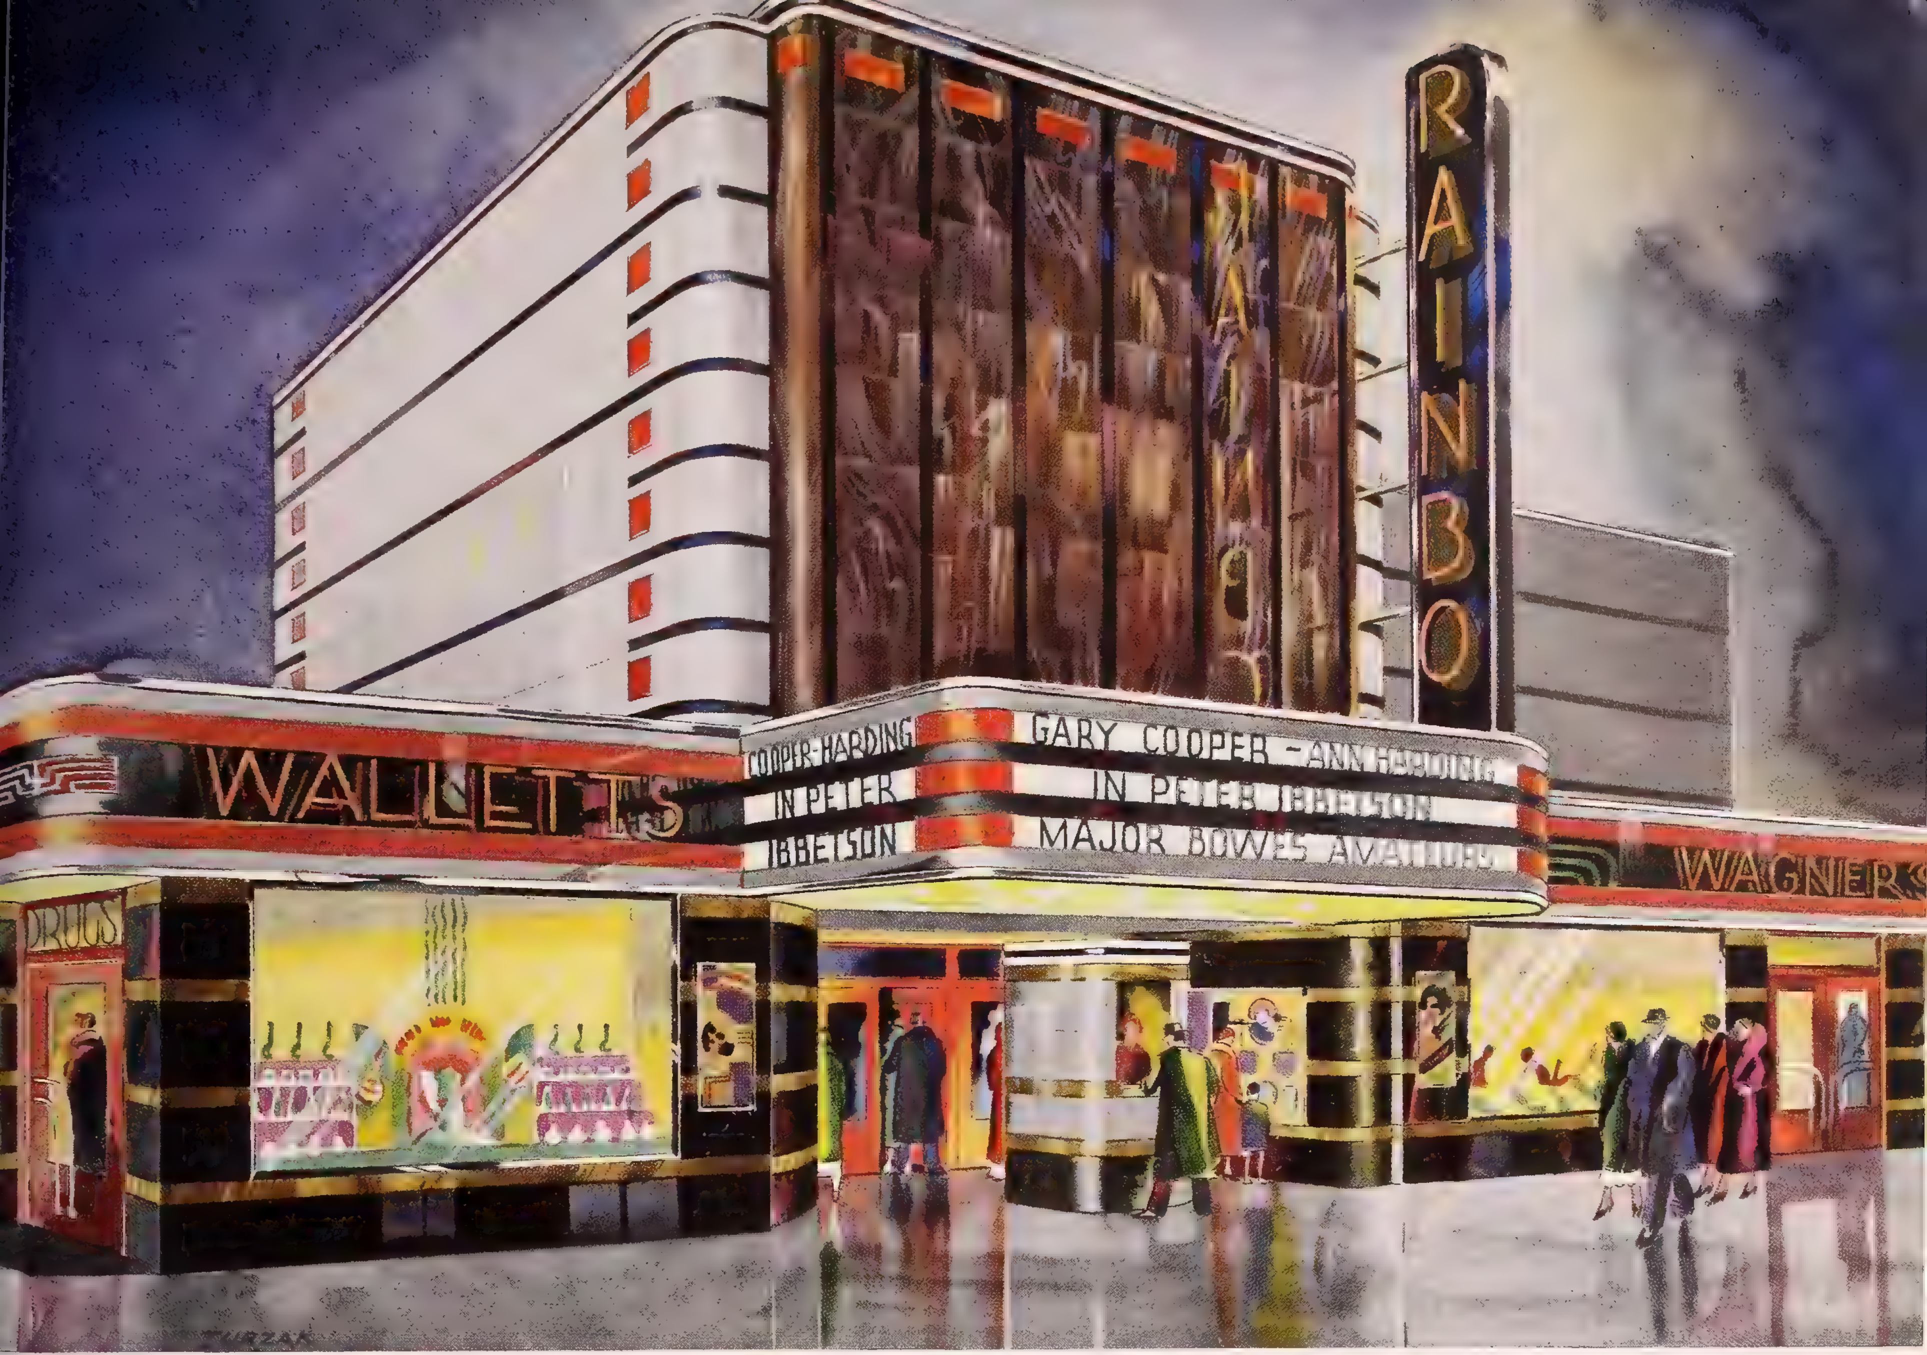
Mrs. Arthur K. Howard, wife of the New England manager for Allied Theatres, won second place in the annual New England Women's Bridge Tournament, held by the Boston Chess Club. Only one point separated her from the winner. Mr. Howard is a former New England bridge champion.

A new ticket register, General Register Corporation three-unit type, has been installed in the Venus theatre, Neighborhood Theatres house in Richmond, Va., by the National Theatre Supply Company.

Wilbur J. Vachon of the Strand in Portland, Me., has been named president of the projectionists' local union there. Morris Eaton was elected vice president, Leslie Way secretary, and Earle G. Hamm treasurer. Warren Moore was made executive officer, and Irving Robbins sergeant-at-arms. Selwyn Blanchard was installed on the board of trustees. C. A. Waldron is business manager for the ensuing year.

C. W. Bunn, general sales manager of Electrical Research Products, Inc., has left New York for the coast for conferences with Erpi representatives. His itinerary includes stop overs at Chicago, Kansas City and other important key centers. He expects to return to New York by way of the Southern states about March 1.

Bob Oliver and Mrs. Muriel Frandsen plan to open their new $25,000 theatre, tentatively named the King, at Onawa, Ia., about March 1.



Vitrolite BECKONS THE CROWD..

Vitrolite makes glamorous surroundings which appeal to the dramatic instinct of theater goers. Stunning modern designs are inspired by Vitrolite's wide color range, and the effects obtainable with sandblast, inlay and metal trim. Vitrolite lasts a lifetime, and the brilliant beauty of its sanitary surface is easily maintained by cleaning with a damp cloth.

Theatre owners have found that Vitrolite fronts, lobbies, ticket booths and washrooms are a profitable investment because—they increase patronage—they reduce maintenance cost—they save redecorating costs.

Vitrolite is not only the last word for ultra-modern construction in new buildings, but also the most effective material for remodeling. It is easily, quickly and economically installed on exterior or interior surfaces. Our Engineering Department will be glad to cooperate with your architect in suggesting the effective use of Vitrolite for your theatre.

For display windows, be sure to use L·O·F quality plate glass. For interior purposes, mirrors of L·O·F polished plate, clear or in colors, offer interesting decorative possibilities.

A DEPARTMENT OF PRACTICAL COUNSEL AND TIMELY INFORMATION

● ● CONDUCTED BY J. T. KNIGHT, JR. ●

The Argument for Lower Electricity Costs to Theatres

● Power factor, power load, peak demand—with such terms the power company too often succeeds in convincing the theatre operator. So let's see what they're really all about in the final check-up

WITH THE tremendous increase in the connected electrical load of the theatres of this country, due primarily to the large number of air-conditioning jobs that are being installed, the question of electrical rates becomes one of greatest importance.

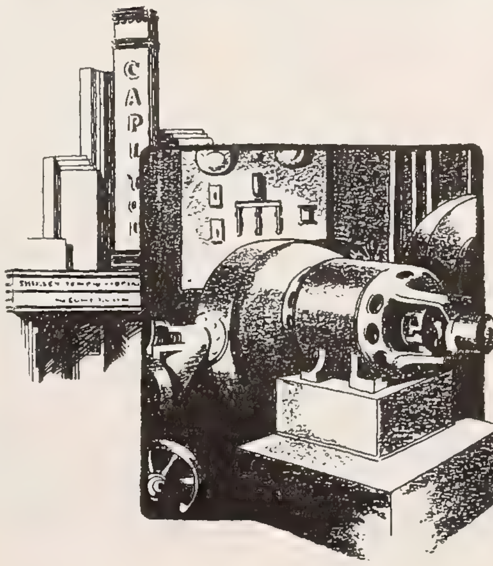
The increase in the electric power bill after air-conditioning is installed represents the largest single item in the operating expense of the plant. There are many theatres that can afford the initial investment for air-conditioning, but are deterred by that ghost of upkeep and operating costs. Something must be done to reduce the electrical operating costs to theatres if we are to continue the progressive campaign for theatre improvement throughout the country.

This is definitely a problem of the entire industry and not just the responsibility of any one individual or circuit. Because of the lack of concerted effort on the part of the industry, the power companies in most instances are indifferent to the scattered demands made to them.

In order to approach this problem of electrical costs from all angles, I am going to classify the industry into three groups, as determined by the attitude and interest of the individuals in those groups:

In the first group are those individuals or companies who have recognized the fact that a problem does exist, and who have employed the services of a so-called expert to analyze their contracts and check their bills. This expert is sometimes placed on the payroll, but frequently he is reimbursed on the basis of savings. Fifty per cent is the general fee—a rather handsome consideration when you realize that he obtains for the customer only those benefits which they are rightfully entitled to under any circumstances!

When we employ an architect to build a new theatre, we may pay him anywhere from 4% to 15% (the prescribed fee is 6%), and for that we expect and generally do get a building that complies with all the laws, regulations and codes in existence. In addition we gain a lot of useful knowledge and experience in our contact with him. Why then should we pay the rate expert 50% of the savings? Most of these experts' training consists in previous employment by a power company; therefore they "know the other side of the picture." They know that every contract held by any power company is not an equitable contract, and they know that errors in billing exist in many instances which have continued for years. But I have never yet heard of any new or more favorable rate which has been created as the direct result of the efforts of any of the so-called experts.



The rate expert can do little more than any other intelligent individual can do if he would take the time to study the rate problem. Yes, of course, the years that the expert spent in the utilities business has given him a circle of friends and acquaintances that makes his work somewhat easier! But in summarizing, this first group is composed of individuals who recognize the problem and are satisfied with half a loaf when they are justly entitled to the whole loaf.

The second group is composed of individuals who recognize the problem, sense the apparent futility of trying to alter the situation and bend their efforts toward analyzing each of their specific situations—improving load factors, power factors and operating schedules, and reducing wattage, so that they can make the most of a bad situation.

The third group is composed of exhibitors who are entirely indifferent to the situation, either through ignorance or because they are too busy to be bothered. In this group we find the exhibitor who spends his time blaming Hollywood for all the evils of the business. His usual reply to a question about electrical rates is, "If Hollywood would turn out better box office pictures, we would not care what the electrical rates were." Despite this shortsightedness, our business is a good business. It is a good business because we can make so many mistakes and still make money!

ANSWERING POWER COMPANY ARGUMENTS

NOW LET US look into the few stock arguments which all power company executives pass out in answer to our pleas for new rate consideration:

The first is, "But consider the poor power factor of the equipment in the Blank theatre!" Now, just what is this thing called power factor?

The power factor can be simply expressed as the ratio of the power-producing current to the electrical total of the power-producing current, plus the magnetizing current. This power factor may be expressed as a percentage; if it is low, we must pay for a greater amount of current than we

HOW IMPROVED VENTILATION WAS OBTAINED WITH EXISTING FANS

THERE WAS a comparatively new theatre which was equipped for ventilation only. It had two fans of ample capacity located above the stage and delivering air through four grilles, all at the same height, above the auditorium floor. The total grille area for each fan was three and a half times the size of the fan discharge opening. The distance of the fan discharge to the grilles was about 12 feet. The management stated that they never had anything approaching adequate ventilation.

On two previous occasions mechanics or engineers had been called in to correct the condition. What they did was to put elbows on the grilles, making them very unsightly, and speeding up the fans to such an extent that additional money had to be spent to line the short ducts with sound-absorbing material.

Finally, the problem was assigned to me, and this is what I did to make the installation satisfactory:

Calculations and measurements indicated that the fans were of ample size for the theatre. With both fans running at the increased speed, there should be more than 127 cubic feet of fresh air per minute for each seat in the auditorium, or an air change of the total cubic content of the theatre every minute and a half. But a check of the air escaping from the theatre showed that the air could only change every twelve and a half minutes, because after the pressure has been created, as determined by the characteristics of the specific fans, the fans cannot put any more air into the theatre than the amount which escapes or is released from the theatre. Consequently, the fans were just making a pressure chamber out of the auditorium. This condition indicated two things:

First, that the stepping up of the speed of the fans, which was previously done, was in error and accomplished nothing except to increase the operating cost, as 10-horsepower motors were required instead of the original 7½-h.p. motors.

Secondly, that the theatre needed a mechanical exhaust system in order to permit the air change within the theatre, which was expected when fans of that size were selected to do the job.

So the 10-h.p. motors were turned in for some 7½-h.p. motors, and the fans reduced in speed to their original capacity. Then a second-hand blower of about 60% capacity of the two combined delivery fans was procured and installed with ducts to the balcony, the main floor under the balcony and the foyer. Fans were also installed to exhaust air from the toilets. This still left about 35% of the total air to be lost, or to escape through the lobby.

These changes were so effective that the manager wanted to stop right there. However, the job was not completed. The air from the delivery grilles was coming in at too low a velocity owing to the fact that the short duct run increased in size from the size of the fan discharge to the combined grille sizes, which, as earlier stated, was some three and a half times.

The duct system was reduced in size and so were the grilles reduced in size, making the appearance from the auditorium very much more attractive. These new ducts were made so that the two having the shorter throw had a velocity of about 450 feet a minute, and the two that were smaller and directed toward the small balcony (the longer throw) had velocities of about 800 feet a minute. With this done, there was not a seat in the house which did not receive its proper amount of air; there were no stagnant spots and every person benefited from the apparent cooling effect of air motion.

The entire job cost less than the amount of money which had previously been spent in trying to correct the unsatisfactory condition.

It pays to get the advice of an air conditioning engineer rather than rely on the suggestions of the sheet metal contractor or ventilating contractor.—J. T. K.

actually can convert to lighting or power use.

Because of low power factor, a large percentage of the theatres of the country are actually buying much more current than is required for the kilowatt hours which are used in the theatre. In buying electrical energy for the operation of equipment such as any induction type motor, we buy actually two kinds of current, i. e., power-producing current, which is converted by our equipment into useful work. This is the current that is registered on the meters. After that we are penalized for magnetizing current, which our equipment requires. This current is not converted into useful work. Although we must have it with certain kinds of equipment (and this is generally the older motors and generator sets), it might be considered as loss in the operation. However, as we must have this magnetizing current, and it must be provided by the power company, we must pay for it—and pay for it we certainly do!

We may as well concede this point of bad power factor to the power companies, because even a hurried study of a few situations will indicate the truth of this contention. But I question just how serious the power companies do consider this factor to be. Perhaps their argument about bad power factor is just a smoke screen, because very few theatres are now operating under contracts with a power factor clause in them.

The next time a power company representative gives you this argument, you say, "All right, tell us what the power factor should be in this theatre, and when we bring it up to that, then what are you going to do about reducing my rates?" At that point they will want to change the subject, or else tell you that they won't reduce the rates, but that you will profit by the greater economy of your operation. You may, or you may not, depending upon your contract for light and power.

IMPROVING POWER FACTOR

Power factor improvement merely means installing certain equipment to neutralize the effects of the magnetizing current. Power-factor improvement equipment is available and on the market today. It can be connected directly to the terminals of a motor, or to the incoming distribution lines, and this equipment actually neutralizes partially, or entirely, the magnetizing load effect of all current supplied to the particular motor or to all equipment served from the distribution system.

One of the leading manufacturers of power factor improvement equipment gives the following as the benefits to be derived from the installation of such equipment:

1. Power bills are substantially reduced in cases where a power factor clause is in force.
2. Line-voltage drop is reduced.
3. Lamps will deliver their full quota of light.
4. The load on the transformers is reduced making it possible to supply power to more equipment from the same bank of transformers.
5. Line losses will be reduced in the plant wiring system.

LOAD FACTOR

The next argument that the power company is likely to present is, "But look at your load factor, we must have stand-by equipment to serve your entire connected load should you desire to operate all equipment and all your lights." This may sound like a logical argument to everybody, but it isn't to a theatre man. We know that with the policies of operation in vogue today, we never have everything on at once. Even in the "good old days" of large stage shows we never had everything on. The inherent nature of our business demands a much greater investment in electrical installation than other businesses, and because of that we should receive a classification that would not penalize us for the rest of our life just because we operate theatres.

The load factor is the ratio of the actual horsepower or kilowatt load in the theatre, to the maximum horsepower or kilowatt load if every motor and every lamp in the theatre and every light on the stage, both projection machines, all spots and effect machines, Standby generator, all pumps, fans, vacuum cleaners, and all signs and exterior lighting were burning or being used at the same time. I will let anyone answer this one, "Does that condition ever exist?" As a matter of fact, it is an absolute necessity for every power company to have among its users a rather large percentage of low load factor customers.

Let's assume that every customer in a particular community served by a power company had a 100% load factor. What would happen if somone bought an electric fan? The moment the switch is turned on the whole system for the entire town would become overloaded. We know that this does not exist—if it did, the situation would be unbearable. However, in such a situation, the customer who would promise the power company not to operate all of his equipment at any one time, in other words, deliberately create a low or bad load factor) would profit handsomely by it.

So the argument of poor load factor is not very convincing. The power company needs low load factor customers, and the fact that theatres, even in the most prosperous times, can never have a 100% load factor, means that the power company will never be called on at one time to furnish current for all lights and equipment connected to our lines.

PEAK DEMAND

Now the third stock argument of the power company goes something like this: "Most of the demand made by theatres is during our peak period, which is between 5:30 and 8:00 p. m. each day." Assuming for a moment that this is true, and reverting to argument No. 2, should they at that time be happy that we have a bad load factor? I am quite sure that if it were possible to see the charts of any power company, they would indicate a peak in the consumption of current between 5:30 and 8:00 p. m. on five days a week, Monday to Friday inclusive, and it would show much less of a peak on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays. We operate during those off-peak days just as we do on the on-peak days, and because of this fact we should receive some favorable consideration. As it is, we are penalized because we operate on peak periods, but when one figures out the number of Saturdays, Sundays and holidays in the year in relation to 365 days, it is easy to see that during almost half the year we are very satisfactory customers.

Everyone likes to do business at a uniform rate, but they don't tear down the peak business—rather they try to build up

CONTRACTOR'S BOND: The premium for a contractor's bond to guarantee the faithful performance of a contract is 1½% of the gross amount of the contract. Such bond is in force for a period of two years, unless sooner released. If released before the expiration of two years, there is no refund of any part of the premium.

CONTRACTOR'S EQUIPMENT: Every contractor is obliged either to own or to rent considerable equipment. The larger items of equipment, such as concrete mixers, steam shovels, hoists, etc., are rented to the job whether or not they are owned outright or rented by the contractor. Such equipment rental charges go into the cost of the job.

FREON REFRIGERANT: Contrary to the opinion of many theatre managers, a freon refrigeration compressor is a comparatively simple piece of machinery, and modern units are built to operate without constant care and attention. This does not mean that they are or should be locked up in a room and never looked at. Between now and May I make it your business to understand the operation of the compressors in your theatre.

FAN MAINTENANCE consists mostly of bearing repairs, tightening belts, cleaning dirt from the fan blades and electrical work on the motor and starter. If direct drives are used, the flexible coupling may need attention. In most theatres, the winter time is the opportune time for this work.

BOILER PROTECTION: Automatic protective devices on boilers, such as water feeders, regulators, motor cutout switches, gas cutoff valves, low water cutoffs, etc., are only of value if they function. When have you, as one in charge of a theatre and responsible for property and the protection of your patrons, made a test of those devices?

business in the hours of the day when there is capacity to do more business. The usual method is to offer some form of inducement to those who will do business at specified hours—hours other than capacity hours. We do the same thing in operating theatres by admission price changes. Why is it unreasonable to ask or expect some favorable consideration along this line from the power companies? It is logical and reasonable, and the only reason we don't get it is because of the franchise which the power company holds—we can't throw out the service and trade elsewhere.

CONSUMPTION RATING

The fourth and last of the stock arguments is, "You know, the theatres are not our largest consumers—look at the Blank department store, the Blank hotel, and the Blank apartment houses. Any one of those pays us more per year than all five of your theatres put together." And that is the only time that our five theatres are put together or even mentioned in the same breath. Now in each separate theatre we pay for our current in the brackets where the per kilowatt rates are highest, just as if each of our theatres purchased electrical energy from five different power companies. The power companies are the only people whom we do business with that do not recognize our company as a company, but break us down to our component theatre units. No other concern not protected by more or less exclusive franchise could afford to do busines on such a basis.

But going back to the comparison of total bills for theatres, as compared with other lines of business: I ask any power man to compare the per-kilowatt rates paid by the hotel, the department store and the apartment house with the per-kilowatt rates of the theatre, and he will see that the differential more than amply makes up for the seemingly large disparity in totals. Furthermore, the small group of large users represents a relatively small proportion of the total output of the power company, and in the final analysis it is the mass medium and small users that is the bread and butter of the power company.

It stands to reason that a sub-station with a fixed investment and established operating costs is more profitable if it serves a large number of small consumers paying for their energy in the higher brackets per kilowatt-hour than if a sub-station of the same output capacity serves but five or six customers who pay for their energy in the lower brackets per kilowatt-hour. So again I say that there would be a smaller percentage of profit for the power companies if all of their consumers were in the big user class. The small man and the average account is the backbone of every business, just as the small theatre has proved to be the backbone of the motion picture industry.

Because our smaller theatre operations are of such great importance to our business, the battle with the power companies becomes one of equal importance. There will be more about rate structure in a later article.—J. T. K.

ARE YOU TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THESE NEW LIGHTING IDEAS?

● A suggested theatre front capitalizing the attraction value of new materials and new lighting methods. Inset shows facade treatment.

● One of the many ways to make more efficient and effective use of light for illuminating large areas. These pre-fabricated squares are composed of two triangular pieces of light colored, mat-finished corrugated metal with accents of smaller squares of clear or colored translucent material in the corners lighted from behind.

Are you taking advantage of today's new building materials, new lighting methods, and modern lighting effects to give your theatre exterior the maximum attraction value with minimum cost?

One of these new lighting ideas is shown here. The luminous front sketched above has a border treatment and vertical sign of specular corrugated metal lighted by inside-frosted MAZDA Lumiline and natural-colored lamps. The exposed lamps or reflector letters are of high brightness.

The facade is made up of blocks of corrugated metal with accents provided by glass panels, as shown in detail in the inset photo. Floodlighting and the light from the sign bring out the texture of the metal. Lamps behind the glass panels give them a delicate coloring or a shimmering sparkle that imparts a jewel-like appearance to the front.

Solid Screen With Perforated Mask For Tweeter Unit

A SCREEN WITH unique provisions for the transmission of sound, under development for some time, has been brought out by the Hurley Screen Company of Long Island City. The picture screen itself is solid. The only perforated area employed is that of a black, unreflecting strip of fabric extending across the top of the screen. It is behind this that the high-frequency speakers or cellular horn is placed, while the reproducer covering the low frequencies is located behind the unperforated screen.

The accompanying diagram, with notations referring to an installation in conjunction with Western Electric speakers, indicates the positions of the speaker units relative to the solid and perforated sections. "Note 4" designated in the area between the low-frequency horn baffle and the high-frequency horn unit, refers to the maximum distance allowable between these elements in order to maintain them in proper phase. This distance is 3 feet.

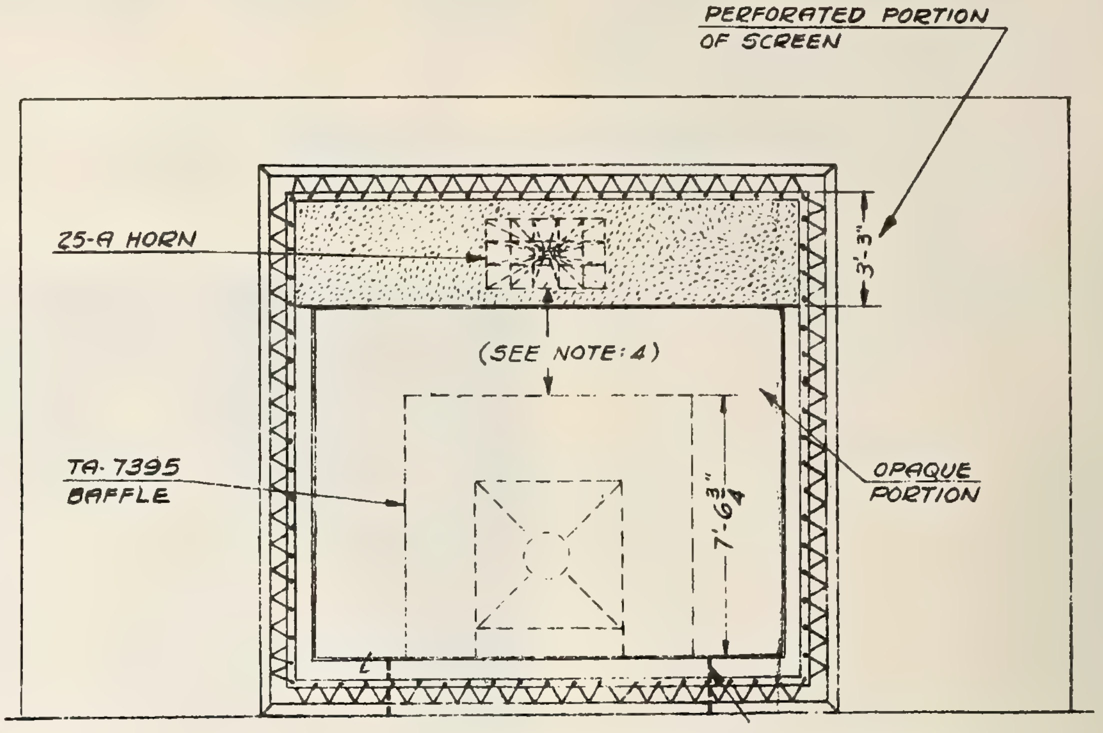

Diagram showing relation of screen elements to horns.

The perforations of the black strip at the top are of standard area. Elimination of all perforations in the screen area proper, of course, reclaims the light loss represented by standard perforations, which has been established at 9%. The sound attenuation of this solid area, as rated by Electrical Research Products, Inc., following tests, is given as 0.5 decibels up to and including 300 cycles. The finished screen employed has a reduced thickness (11/1000 of an inch), with a weight of one ounce per square foot. The reflection factor is given by the manufacturer as 92%.

The perforated strip is sewn to the screen proper, and both sections are attached to the frame as a unit. Use of this type of screen installation in connection with the low- and high-frequency horn units of the type now standard with Western Electric and RCA Photophone reproduction equipment, is limited, because of the phase factor, to theatres requiring an image no more than 14 feet, 10 inches high.

The R.K.O. HAMILTON Reseats with 1777 H·W Streamline Chairs

THE R. K. O. Hamilton at 146th Street and Broadway has reseated with 1777 Heywood Streamline Theatre Chairs.

● A smart, modern combination was selected for this New York house . . . beautiful rust mohair upholstery and silver Ceramite on the streamline backs. Thus, another popular house is added to the long list of Heywood Streamline installations. These swanky modern chairs are mighty practical because they prevent soiling by patrons' hands . . . eliminate chances of upholstery wearing or cutting through. They are styled and built to take plenty of use and abuse without ever showing it. That's something every operator appreciates. And . . . they have that big advantage of quickening your house traffic because the streamline edge on the backs (chromium or colored Ceramite) makes it easy for patrons to locate their seats. If you are planning a new house or reseating your present theatre . . . ask your H-W Sales representative to give you the complete story on these modern swanky, streamline chairs.

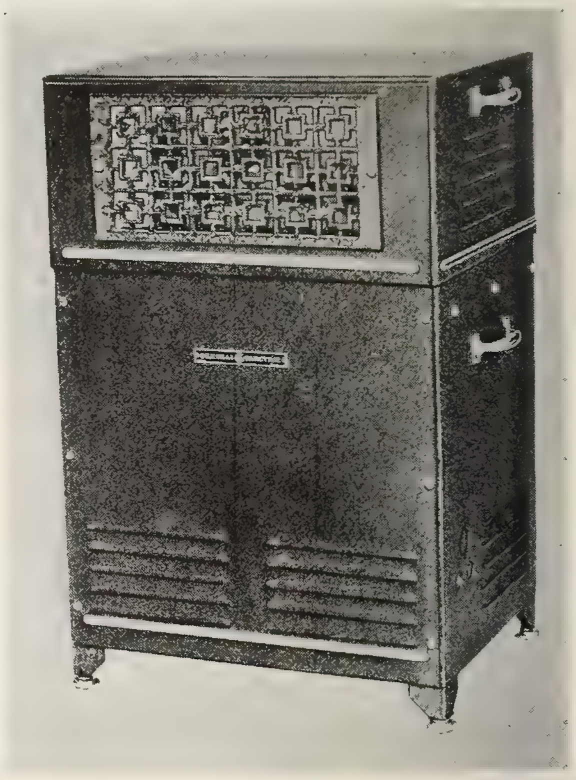
Two-Unit Type Rectifiers for Suprex and L. I.

THREE NEW copper-oxide rectifiers for motion picture projection have been brought out by the General Electric Company's Appliance and Merchandise Department, Bridgeport, Conn. They employ the established principles of rectification used in previous models and feature two-piece construction, simplified steel bracket mounting, cooling system, remote control, and a new system of fusing.



The new units retain the same number of copper-oxide elements for respective ratings as were used in previous units, and the same output ratings have been maintained: a 40-50 ampere unit for the 6-7 mm. Suprex trim; a 40-65 ampere unit suitable for use with either the 6-7 mm. or the 6.5-8 mm. Suprex trim; and a 20-30 ampere, 50-55-volt unit for low-intensity lamps. Stock models are designed for operation on 230-volt, 60-cycle, 3-phase A.C. supply (other A. C. voltages and frequencies, either 2-phase or 3-phase, can be supplied).

The new two-piece construction provides for two assembly sections. The base section contains the copper-oxide elements, the blower system, and the control relays. The top section consists of the transformer assembly and control panel. Separate pack-

In the mounting, individual stacks or units are supported at each end by a heavy steel bracket or hanger, with hangers so arranged that they form the electrical connections to the stacks. The stacks are interconnected by heavy copper bus bars, bolted to the hangers to eliminate multiplicity of connecting wires and soldered joints.

The cooling system forces air through the copper radiating fins of the rectifier unit and maintains the operating temper-

Sound System Amplifier With Hearing Aid Cut-In

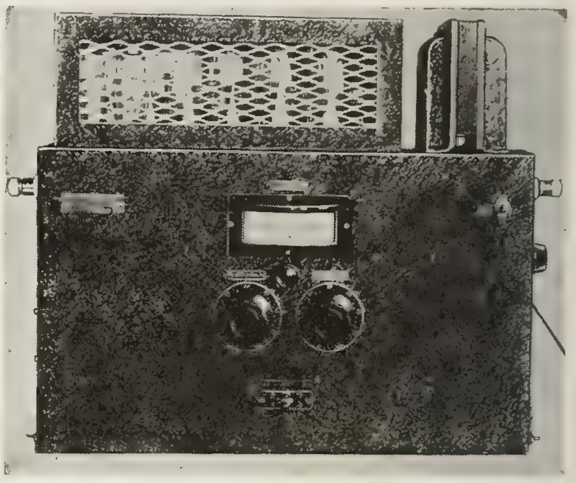
AN AMPLIFIER for theatre sound systems designed to cover the full available frequency band, and with special provision for functioning as a hearing-aid system amplifier, has been developed by the Gates Radio & Supply Company of Quincy, Ill.

The amplifier uses audio-transformers with high permeability cores, low-loss hum resisting windings, built into heavy cast metal cases to prevent electrostatic or magnetic coupling. It has four stages for the sound film, and four stages for the pickup, with separate mixer tubes for each purpose. Provision is made for phonograph pickup (200 ohms), and also a cut-in for either a crystal or high-impedance microphone. Output is variable at 50, 125, 250, 333 or 500 ohms.

Photocell connections to the two projectors are made through special locking type and removable plugs on each side of the amplifier, and the microphone also connects in a like manner. Projector balancing controls are provided on the side of the amplifier. Phono pickup connects to a terminal strip provided, and its volume, as well as the microphone, is controlled by a volume dial, another dial controlling the sound volume.

Exciter lamp voltage is supplied for either 10-volt, 7½-ampere, or 10-volt 5-ampere lamps with changeover switch provided. The hearing aid attachment is brought directly out of the amplifier so that headphones, if desired, may be connected to equip from one to ten seats.

A visual volume indicator is a feature of the design consisting in a meter device with an arrow which swings back and forth over a calibrated scale. When the arrow swings too high, it means the volume is too high; and when too low, it means the volume is low, and the operator may at once adjust the volume until it is correct, which is so indicated on the meter. This meter may also be used for balancing projectors, exciter lamps, etc.



Tubes used are two 6C6's, one 76, one 6A6, two 2A3's, and one 5Z3. Normal output is 12 watts, with a peak rating of 15. Line consumption is 250 watts. Current for exciter lamps, 10 volts a.c., with 7½ or 5 amperes and variable. The response rating from 30 to 12,000 cycles is given as uniform within 1½ decibels.

The amplifier has a casing finish of black crackle. Exclusive of tube cover, it is 12 inches high, 20 inches long and 5 inches deep. The tube cover adds 5 inches.

Transformer for A Broad Range of Neon Installations

DESIGN specifications have been released by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company on transformers developed for supplying luminous tube signs and ornamentation. The transformers are available for all standard secondary ratings, ranging from 2,000 volts, 18 milliamperes up to 15,000 volts, 60 milliamperes. On units of 6,000 volts and above a mid-point, grounded design is used. This feature reduces the electrical stresses on tubing and cable to one-half.

Primary coils are wound with a special paper-insulated quadruple enameled wire which puts insulation between each turn.

The secondary coils are wound with quadruple enameled wire with glassine paper between layers of wire. Start and finish of coils are space wound.

The transformer cores are made of the same double annealed iron used in large power transformers. When the core and coils are completely assembled in the case, the unit is then filled with "Zerotherm," a special insulating compound. "Zerotherm" will stand temperatures of plus 200° Fahrenheit without cracking.

All cases are constructed of rust-resisting steel and are welded at the joints. Cases are given a black, "crinkle" finish.

Binding posts are mounted on special process porcelain bushings designed to prevent flashovers and corona discharges.

High power-factor transformers with a corrective capacitance incorporated within the case and of advantage where public utilities have established bonus and penalty clauses for power factor in their rate schedules, are also available. These are rated from 15,000 volts, 60 milliamperes to 9,000 volts, 30 milliamperes, and from 9,000 volts, 18 milliamperes to 7,000 volts, 30 milliamperes.

Maintenance of the Projection System to Insure Good Sound

● Examining the relationship between the sound system and visual projection elements and how faults in the latter affect the quality of sound

By AARON NADELL

WITH NEW developments in sound recording and reproduction making a finer motion picture available to the public, and with widespread replacement of older models of reproduction equipment rapidly taking place as a result of these developments, it is timely to consider—in some respects, yet again—the practical operating relationship of the projection mechanism proper, to the attainment and consistent maintenance of sound quality.

One of the ways in which projection equipment influences sound quality is in its effect upon the steadiness of motion of the film, as it passes the photelectric cell. The importance of smooth motion of the film at that point in its path can readily be understood by looking at any sound track. One type of track consists of a series of changes in the width of the clear area. The other consists of a series of changes in density. In any good sound equipment the motion of the diaphragm of the loudspeaker keeps step, to the minutest degree, with the progress of these changes in sound track appearance as they pass the photoelectric cell.

FILM MOVEMENT

If any condition in the projection room causes the film, even for a moment, to move more rapidly than it should, the diaphragm of the loudspeaker will pump more rapidly than it should. Having moved more rapidly than it should, the film, obedient in the last analysis to a constant-speed driving motor, must in turn move more slowly than it should, since the motor will hold it back, and the loudspeaker behind the screen now compensates for a sound too high in pitch by emitting one too low in pitch. At some tones, especially at high ones, the original note may be lost entirely, and replaced by series of other notes higher and lower than the original. At other tones or frequencies, the original note remains in the sound, but is reduced in volume and accompanied by other, spurious tones higher and lower in pitch, which were never present in the original, and which constitute a form of sound distortion peculiarly displeasing to the human ear.

This type of sound distortion can be divided into two general classes, which differ from each other in accordance with the rapidity with which film speed changes. One of the most common rates of speed variation is, as will be seen below, 96 per second. On the other hand, film speed may slowly increase over a period of a second or so, slowly decrease over a corresponding period, introducing a different and more recognizable, but equally disagreeable distortion into the sound.

To check upon some of the many ways in which projection equipment, as distinct from sound equipment, can cause these forms of distortion, it is only necessary to consider the course of the film as it passes from the upper magazine to the lower one. In any standard theatre projector there are three sprockets—upper, intermittent and lower. The upper sprocket draws the film from the upper magazine. The reel in that magazine rotates slowly at first; more rapidly as the amount of film remaining decreases, but the upper sprocket rotates steadily, and film passing it theoretically moves at constant speed at all times.

The author has been identified with sound and projection for many years. He is the author of a book on sound, and also of the chapters on sound in F. H. Richardson's Bluebook of Projection. — THE EDITOR.

SPROCKETS

The intermittent sprocket of course does not move at constant speed, but starts and stops 24 times a second. In this portion of its path the film also moves and stops 24 times per second. The lower sprocket again moves steadily and restores substantially constant motion to the film. The loops are left in the film between the intermittent sprocket and the two steadily moving sprockets, theoretically absorb all the intermittent motion.

From the lower sprocket the film passes into the soundhead, and thence to the lower magazine. Now in the case of the upper magazine, the film is drawn downward by the upper sprocket, and the reel rotates merely because of the pull on the film, the speed varying with the amount of film.

THE TAKE-UP

The lower magazine reel must also change its speed of rotation in accordance with the amount of film already reeled up. At the beginning of the run, the diameter of the film and hub may mount to 6 inches, and the lower reel revolves approximately once a second. At the end of the run the diameter of film and hub may be perhaps 12 inches, and the reel revolves approximately once in two seconds. This gradual decline in speed is, of course, effected by means of a friction clutch, which drives the reel as fast as the film, coming down from the soundhead, will allow it to turn. Naturally, any roughness, wear, or defect of lubrication in that friction clutch will make the pull of the lower magazine jerky instead of steady.

In examining in detail how this assemblage of mechanism can cause unsteady sound, it is necessary to remember that despite the weight and bulk of the apparatus, it constitutes a machine of extreme delicacy.

Slippage on the part of the film in the order of one one-thousandth of an inch is enough to cause seriously bad sound, and the mechanical parts of the mechanism are built to tolerances of one ten-thousandth of an inch. It takes very little excessive wear, very little carelessness in lubrication, to destroy accuracies of that order.

SPROCKET-HOLE FLUTTER

The form of distortion that has been given most careful study by engineers to date is sprocket-hole flutter, the effects of which have been investigated in great detail, and are very thoroughly known. The pitch of sprocket holes—that is, the spacing on standard film between the center of one hole and the center of the next—is 0.187 inch. The film moves at the rate of 18 inches per second. Dividing 0.187 into 18 shows that 96 sprocket holes engage and disengage in one second's time. If sprocket teeth are undercut, because they have been kept in use after wearing beyond the point where they should have been replaced, the film will slip 96 times per second, because, no matter how many teeth seem to engage simultaneously, actually there is only one tooth that does the driving, except under impossible conditions, in which all teeth, and sprocket holes, are exactly the same in size. Under normal circumstances sprocket hole slippage at the rate of 96 slips per second must be expected.

In every soundhead there are devices designed to keep the film moving steadily at the point where it passes the photocell, and these devices will absorb the normal slippage that is always to be expected because of imperfect sprockets and sprocket holes. When sprockets are undercut, however, slippage may become so great that the filtering devices in the soundhead cannot remove all of it, and the familiar 96-cycle flutter appears in the sound.

Another cause of the same condition is enlarged or torn sprocket holes. In this cause defective equipment in one theatre can spoil the show for many others, and such things do have a wide-spread influence upon the show-going habit of the general public, even though we choose to ignore this effect.

Three other types of defect in the projector mechanism, all resulting in the type of bad sound caused by irregular film speed, may be classified roughly as eccentricity in a rotating part, excessive vibration, and poor takeup action.

It is obvious that sprockets and guide rollers must either sustain wear or wear against the shafts on which they rotate. The result may be that the rotating part comes in time to fit loosely upon its shaft, or its bore becomes egg-shaped instead of truly round. Lastly, the shaft may be sprung in some way. Any of these causes results in eccentric motion of the bearing surface of the sprocket or idler roller.

If the motion of a sprocket is eccentric, the film speed accelerates and declines each time the sprocket revolves. If the effect is not completely filtered out in the soundhead, the pitch of the sound will change approximately five times per second. If the motion of an idler roller bearing upon a sprocket becomes eccentric, the film will be pressed down upon the broad base of the sprocket teeth and allowed to spring back toward the points of the teeth, each time the idler revolves. In consequence, there will be a periodic change in film speed at a rate determined by the diameter of the idler.

VIBRATION

Excessive vibration in the projector mechanism may result from many causes—eccentricity in any of the driving gears, worn intermittent movement, excessive play in the moving parts, etc. Excessive vibration may be heard in the screen speakers as direct noise. For example, the filament of the exciting lamp may be physically shocked into vibration, which of course will be heard. Vibration may also be imparted to the two knife edges that form the slit within the lens tube (spacing, one one-thousandth of an inch). Vibration, either of the edges of the slit or of the filament of the exciting lamp, will result in periodic increase and diminution of the amount of light reaching the photocell, and create a noise of the pitch of the vibration.

Many of the forms of vibration that appear in a projector mechanism are discontinuous; that is, they renew themselves, perhaps several times a second, continuously dying down and coming back. In consequence, the noise in the screen speakers cannot be ignored by the ear; it calls attention to itself precisely because of its discontinuous nature, and concentration upon the message of the pictures becomes proportionately more difficult.

Flutter caused by the mechanism of the take-up is imparted to the film by jerky action of the lower reel. Like all other forms of irregular film motion, this type of flutter will be absorbed by the filtering arrangements of the soundhead, and by the loops of the soundhead, if it is not excessive. But film loops cannot absorb all disturbances, since film is not infinitely flexible. Nor is any filtering device 100% effective. When the friction clutch of the take-up slips and then holds, the pitch of the sound will decrease at each slip and increase during each new tug upon the film. The effect is strongly accentuated by worn teeth in the "hold-back" sprocket of the soundhead or worn, over-sized sprocket holes in the film.

TRACK INJURIES

Still another way in which defective projection equipment interferes with good sound is by scratching the sound track. The really damaging scratches are, of course, the smaller ones, a succession of which may sound like a simple noise, or like a string of firecrackers.

Oil on the sound track has much the same effect, since it catches minute particles of dust and grit, which create noisy sound partly by scratching the emulsion, and partly by their mere presence. In a properly lubricated machine oil can reach the film, of course, only when worn shafts or bearings admit excessively thick films of oil and allow the lubricant to leak out and spatter.

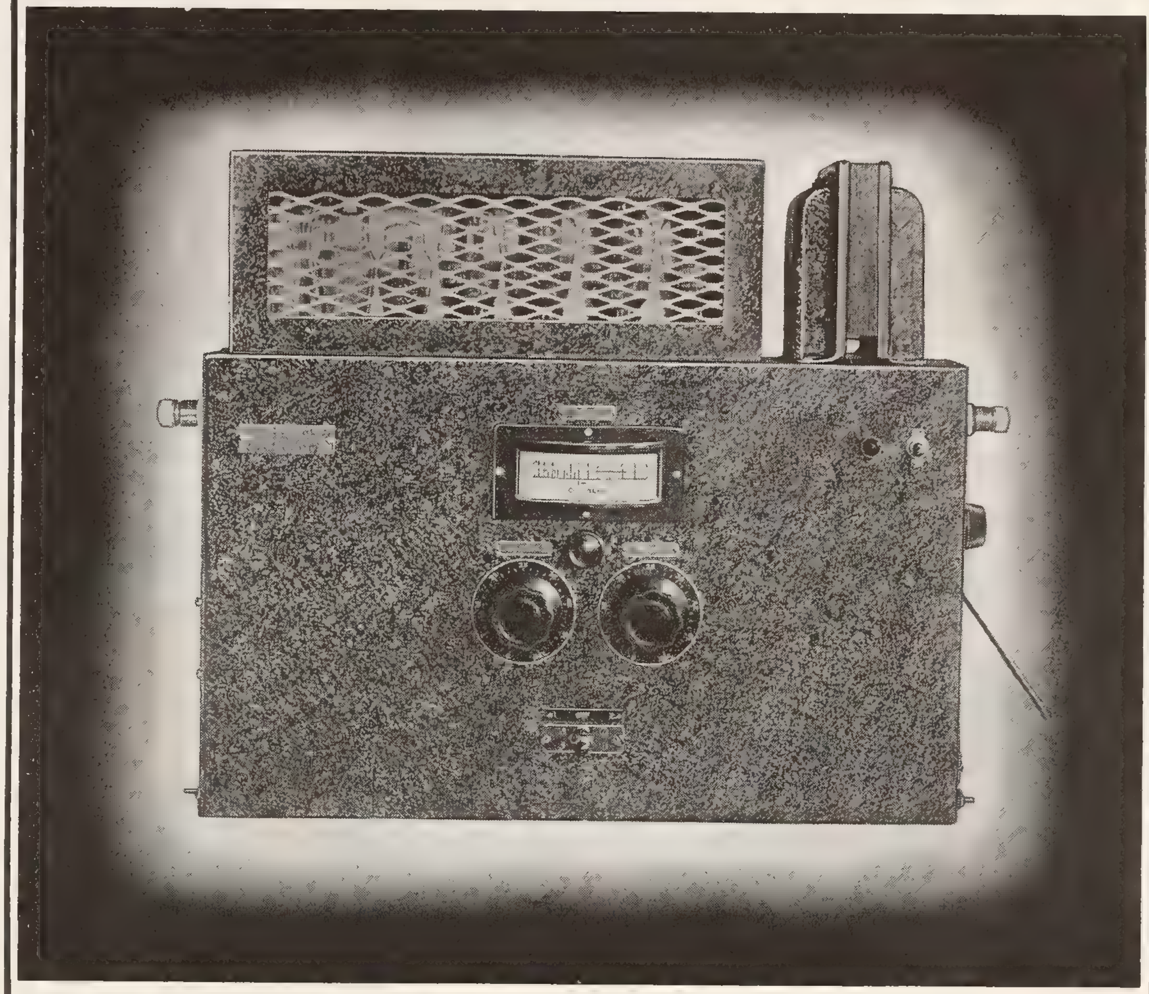
BUCKLING

Excessive heat at the aperture, of course, is likely to cause the film to buckle to some appreciable extent, and buckled film cannot give good sound. When projectionists try to counterbalance the lowered reflective power of a deteriorated screen by "hiking up" the amperage, excessive aperture heat may be produced, particularly with those projector heads not equipped with rear shutters. Color films usually require greater projection light intensity, and consequently the amperage generally goes up when they are projected, with buckling not uncommonly a consequence. No device is known by which the track of such film can be kept in exact focus and the higher frequencies—which many theatres recently have paid a good deal of money to add to their sound—are necessarily lost. Since buckled film passes from one theatre to another through the exchanges, it is not only the house causing the trouble, but the industry as a whole, that pays the freight.

The lamphouse is also responsible for certain extraneous noises not infrequently heard in the screen speakers. Arc feed motors and feed relay contacts in worn, dirty or otherwise neglected condition, will spark. The electrical disturbances created by sparking are often picked up by the wiring of the sound system, and appear in the speakers as noise.

Announcing—A New Creation

The Gates Deluxe HIGH FIDELITY Theatre Amplifier



WITH a great deal of pride we announce the release of our new Deluxe High Fidelity Theatre Amplifier after many months of careful design and research in our laboratories. Built for the finest metropolitan theatre yet at a price the smallest theatre can afford it offers for the first time, true "High Fidelity" at a moderate price.

Equipped for dual projector sound film operation, Crystal or Velocity Microphone, phono pick up, a hearing aid provision without extra amplifiers and the exclusive Gates feature "The Visual Volume Indicator," this equipment is destined to go into many of the country's finest theatres.

Technical men who are interested in the cogs inside will appreciate the large audios with high permeability cores and balanced windings, the unique engineering design to eliminate hum, the complete photo cell filter and the wide flexibility provided for coupling various reproducer systems.

Write for bulletin 2002 or aggressive theatre equipment dealers will soon have this amplifier in stock.

THEATRE AMPLIFIER 44-A

A new low priced complete theatre amplifier for sound film service having unusual quality and hum free performance. For theatres that must hold their investment to the lowest figure the 44-A will out perform most amplifiers selling for much more and with a well chosen reproducer system be a distinct improvement over amplifiers of an earlier year. You will find this item also on bulletin 2002.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

PROJECTION STANDARDS TODAY— AND THE TERM "PROJECTIONIST"

LOOKING BACK over the years, I am deeply impressed by the vast difference in projection standards, both in technics and personnel, between then and now. During merely the last ten years the improvement has been notable. True, we still have a good distance to travel—particularly in the direction of standardized practices—but the gains so far made are a distinct credit to the technical organizations, theatre management, the equipment manufacturers and the men in the projection room.

When I first took up projection work in 1904, the projectionist—to be more accurate, "operator"—was definitely—well, we may as well be frank about it—a roughneck. He was wholly untrained, and he had absolutely no pride in his work, which was regarded merely as one of various possible means of eking out a living. Projection wasn't even regarded as skilled labor.

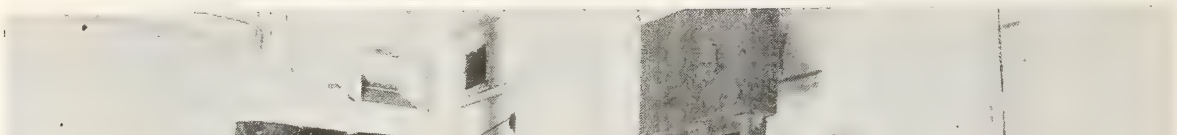
The decision of the Moving Picture World in 1910, to begin publication of a projection department, caused some amusement. Matters improved very little during the years immediately ensuing. Although equipment began to be substantially improved along in the later 'teens, the interest of the average projectionist in extending his knowledge of his craft did not loom up very large until sound came. Here was something he was totally ignorant of—and it was dumped right in his lap! The necessity to learn was urgent. And in the process of learning about sound, he became aware of his deficiencies with respect to other things in projection.

Today, projection is a highly skilled craft, and the men who represent it are for the most part proudly conscious of the important part they play in the great motion picture scheme. They are no longer "operators"—they are projectionists. Which reminds me. . . .

It was in the spring of 1917 that I proposed calling them projectionists. It was my idea that the men would not bother to learn if they did not take pride in their work, and the term projectionist seemed to me one that would elevate their work in their own minds. In addition, it of course described their work better than the term "operator." Well, as many know, the new title, which I began to use regularly, was laughed at. For at least five years I was the only one to use it seriously.

Ultimately, however, it began to be used by others, at first by a few and just now and then, but later quite generally. Today it may be said to be the term accepted by the industry for designating a person in charge of the projection equipment.

Therefore, I take this occasion to repeat my hope that the IATSE & MPMO will soon officially change the latter portion of its title, "Moving Picture Machine Operators," to one more in keeping with present terminology, such as "Motion Picture Projectionists." While there are other matters of more importance for IA conventions to deal with, this one seems to me worthy of some attention. It should be seriously considered, I think, for discussion by one of the annual gatherings.



The projection room of the Carolina theatre in Charlotte, N. C., showing new equipment recently installed, including Brenkert Enarc projection lamps and a Brenkert F-7 effect projector, installed by the Wil-Kin Theatre Supply Company. Projectors are Simplex; the sound system, Western Electric. Projection arcs take current from Hertner Transverters, while exciter lamp and speaker field supply is from a Forest rectifier. Projection arcs are operated at 42 amperes. The Carolina is one of the North Carolina Theatres circuit, of which H. F. Kincey is general manager. E. W. Street is manager of the Carolina. The projectionists are W. H. Fowler and S. R. Ellis.

PERSUADING THE PENNY-WISE MANAGER

A LETTER recently received from a New England projectionist brings a familiar complaint. He writes, "What course would you suggest in dealing with a manager who refuses to permit expenditures for badly needed repairs? I am a projectionist in a small city. The theatre seats 400. The projector mechanisms are very old. I do not believe they ever had a complete overhauling—in fact, anything more than new parts installed by the projectionist. It is even a hard fight to get new parts, and the manager either laughs or gets very angry when I try to talk to him about having the mechanisms overhauled.

"I have tried very hard to follow your various instructions. I have not only purchased, but have to the best of my ability, studied, every Bluebook of Projection issued since I commenced as reel boy in 1921. I take pride in my work and try to get the very best possible I can, but frankly I am getting discouraged. The manager is part owner. He is a most friendly gentleman until I try to talk about needed repairs, then it is all off. Nothing doing! You have been my mentor and guide for years. I now ask you: what shall I do?"

Yours is a tough proposition. Your question is one that may only be answered more or less in generalities. From what you have said I am led to suppose your manager really means well, but has not devoted any portion of his time to studying the effect of screen and sound faults upon box office income. He perhaps has never considered the cumulative effect of several small defects set up or caused by lack of fine precision in the equipments, viewed as a whole. You perhaps call his attention to some worn part, and he says, "Oh, that doesn't do much harm."

Quite true. Its evil effects might pass, for at least a time, almost unnoticed. But if we add to it another small defect in results caused by some other worn part, plus a few others, the effect is no longer invisible. It may indeed be sufficiently obvious to lower the whole effect very noticeably. It may, indeed, be quite enough to make the difference between a snappy, pleasing show and one that is not. And if that be the case, as it well may be in your theatre, the box office will suffer just as certainly as night follows the day. Perhaps you can demonstrate to him the relationships of the elements of the equipment in such manner that he will appreciate the significance of each, and realize how the effectiveness of the whole depends upon the effectiveness of its parts.

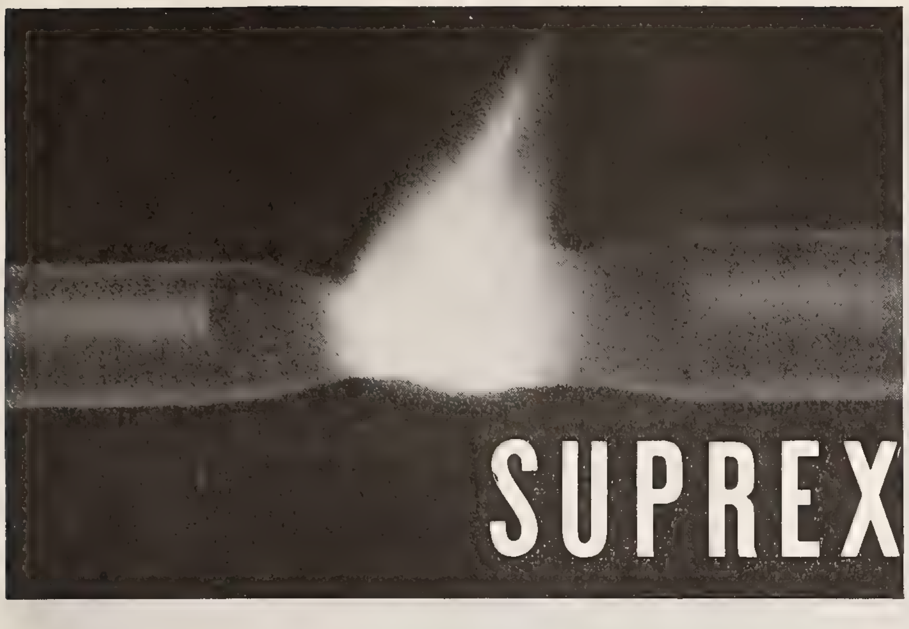
SMOOTH SHOW AND LENS BREAKAGE

FROM THE Rev. H. H. Fowler, chaplain of the Kansas State Penitentiary, comes the following communication: "I have charge of entertainment affairs, including motion pictures, in this institution. The projectionist requests that I submit the following questions to you for adjudication.

"First, what is the proper method of changing from newsreel or short to feature? Should 'The End' title be permitted to show on the screen, or is it better procedure to follow the last short picture frame with the feature title? Would that make a smoother, more continuous show?

"Secondly, we experience much trouble with breakage of the protector glasses we use on the arc side of the collector lenses. One out of a dozen may last for months. Others break in perhaps ten minutes. We have Powers Type E lamps using 6.5-inch condenser lenses. The collector lens itself breaks unless we use the protector glasses. The clamping ring is not screened down tightly. Light source is 3.5 inches from face of protector glass, which distance is required in order to secure proper diameter of light beam at spot. Is this breakage due to faulty adjustment of equipment, or to faulty glasses and lenses? We have your three-volume set of Bluebooks of Projection; also we receive BETTER THEATRES and follow your Comments studiously."

The matter of permitting "The End" to appear upon the screen, or not to do so, is a controversial subject. My preference is to permit just a flash of "The End" upon the screen. To me this is the more natural division. It is a definite termination of the subject under view, whereas jumping from the last frames of one subject to the title of another seems just a bit too abrupt.



SUPREX CARBONS

HELP MAKE YOUR THEATRE Safe

Recently published records show that a major factor contributing to accidents in motion picture theatres is the low visibility experienced by patrons entering the darkened interior from the brilliant light of the street. Darkened interiors are necessary when the level of screen illumination is low, but SUPREX CARBONS provide an intensity of screen illumination which permits supplementary lighting adequate for comfortable vision from the moment of entrance.

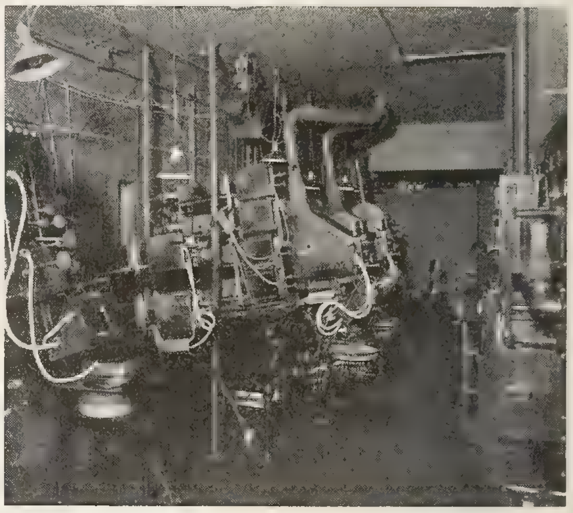
However, there is an honest difference of opinion upon the matter among projectionists and showmen.

As to breakage of protector glasses or collector lenses, it might be due to any one of several things or to a combination of several of them. It often is an extremely difficult matter to handle. Sufficient information is not submitted to enable formation of any definite opinion. I should like to know the amperage pulled, what is the voltage at the arc, whether the ventilation of the lamphouse is open and free with all the air passing through that can be permitted, whether or not the projectionist opens the lamphouse door while the lens is still very hot, a draught of air blowing into it. Also, what kind of arc is it? This information is necessary to an understanding of the conditions.

SOME THINGS NOTED DOWN OHIO WAY

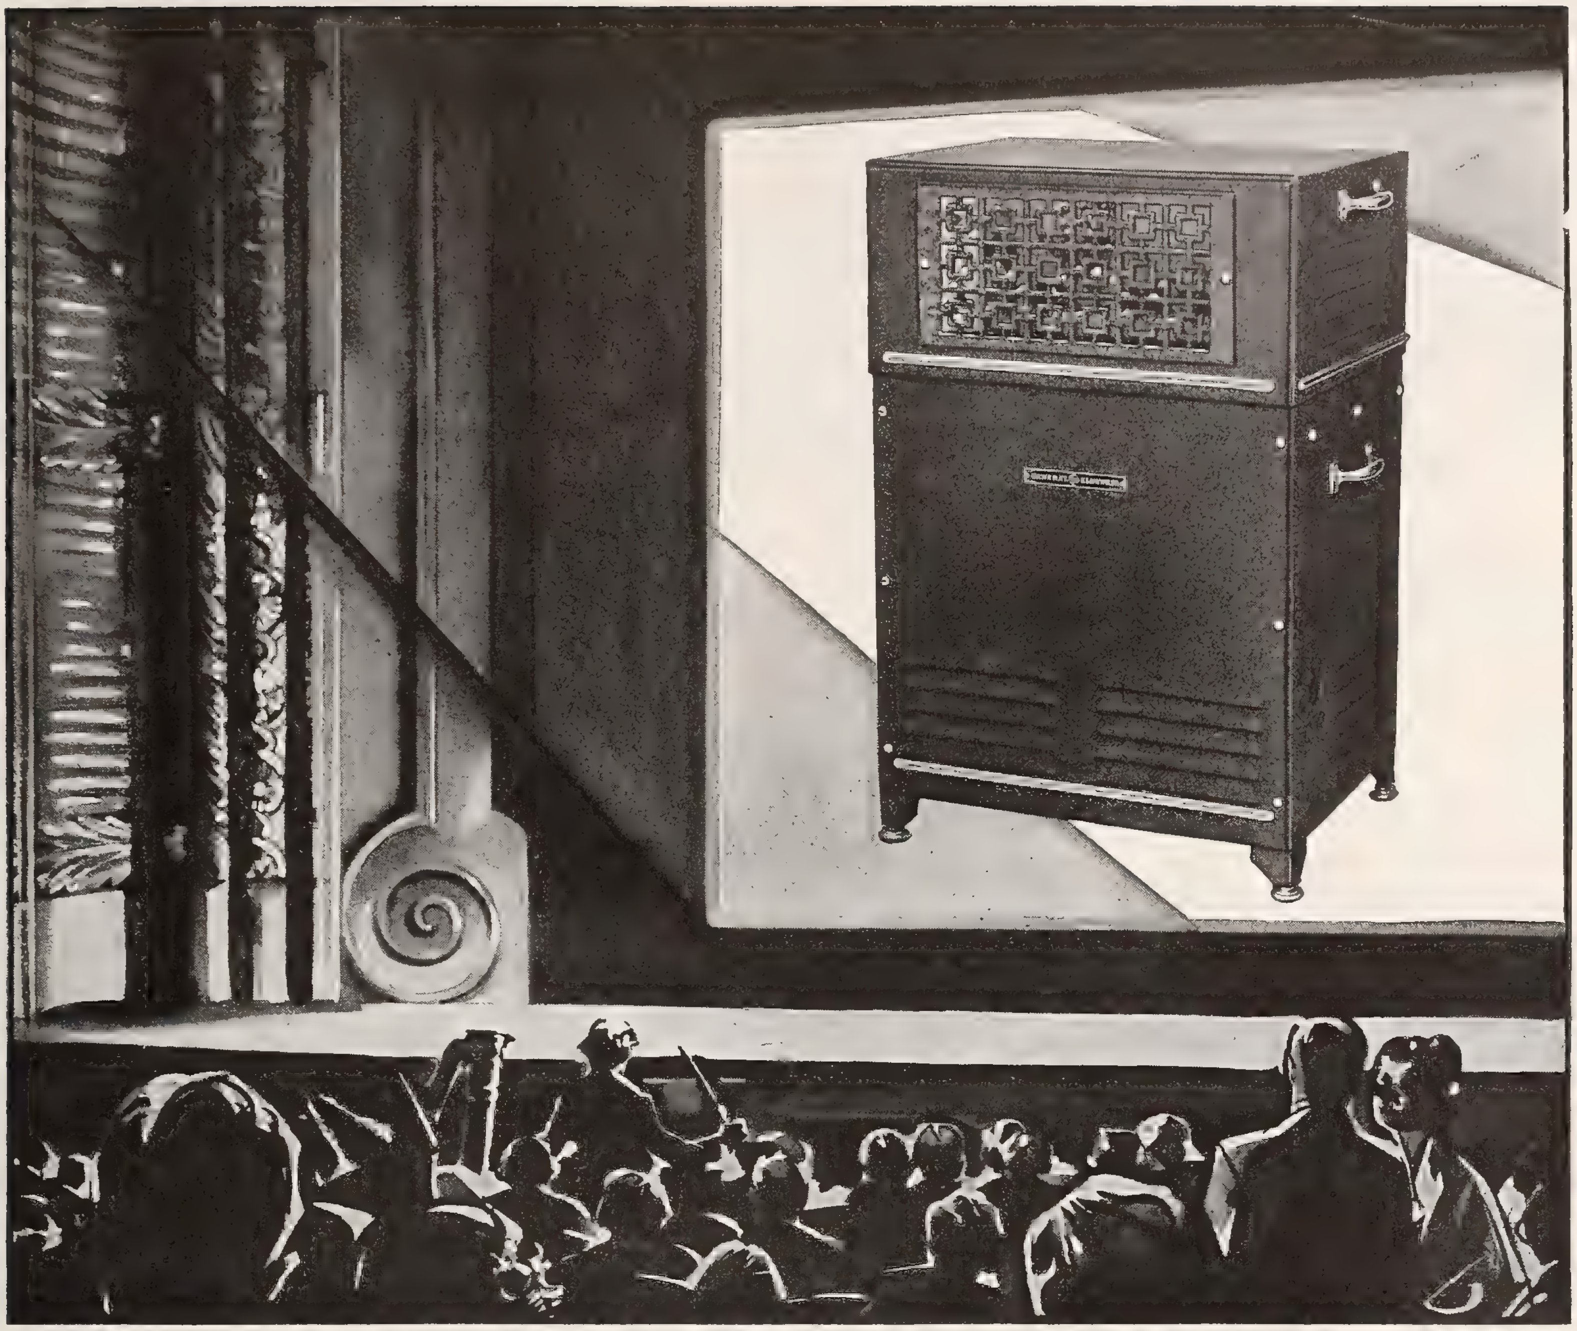
I THINK most of you know of Mr. Otto Nelson, who has for many years directed the projection activities of the National Cash Register Company, at Dayton, Ohio. I present herewith a photograph of the projection room of the 2,240-seat auditorium at the company's factory, where each work day a production is put on, while as many of the employes as may wish are at liberty to enjoy it while partaking of their lunch.



The room is 11 feet from front to back and 34 feet long. It contains three Simplex projectors. The sound system is Western Electric. There is one single- and one double-dissolving stereopticon, and one effect projector; also, a public address system with 16 microphones, and six speakers.

In addition to this great auditorium, there is projection equipment at the company's agent training school, where there is a 400-seat auditorium. Here there are two Simplex-Acme sound projectors, a dissolving stereopticon, two spotlights, and a nine-microphone public address system.

The company also has sales service lecture rooms, three night class room company schools, and two factory lecture rooms, all of which are fully equipped with projection apparatus; there also are several road projection outfits which upon occasion are sent out to educate merchants and others to the value of National cash registers. I might



Presenting A NEW SERIES OF G-E COPPER OXIDE RECTIFIERS FOR MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION SERVICE

Many refinements and improvements have been incorporated in this new line of G-E Copper Oxide Rectifiers for projection service. One noteworthy feature is the two-piece construction. The copper oxide elements are assembled in the base with the blower system and control relays. The top section contains the transformer assembly and central control panel. Installation is greatly facilitated since either section can be handled by one man.

The same number of copper oxide elements as in previous models assure maximum life and operating efficiency. A new method of mounting the copper oxide stacks eliminates a multiplicity of connecting wires and soldered joints.

Output ratings are the same as formerly: a 40 to 50-ampere unit for the 6—7-mm. Suprex trim, a 40 to 65-ampere unit for use with either 6—7-mm. or 6.5—8-mm. trim, and a 20 to 30-ampere, 50 to 55-volt unit for low-intensity lamps. By connecting a pair of G-E Rectifiers in series, a spot light can easily be operated. For detailed specifications on this new G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier, just mail the coupon today.

add that Mr. Nelson has had complete charge of all this work for more than the quarter of a century.

While spending the holidays with Mr. Nelson, I made a short visit to Cincinnati, calling first at the National Theatre Supply Company office, located in what might be styled the Cincinnati "Film Colony," inasmuch as in the immediate vicinity are the offices of many different film companies, and theatre supply dealers. Cincinnati alone has 56 theatres. At the National offices I enjoyed a chat with the manager, Mr. J. Stallings, and one of his lieutenants, Mr. Gelman. Mr. Stallings told me that exhibitors in his territory were beginning to realize the injurious effect that failure to keep equipment in good condition has upon business. They now are rapidly replacing such equipment with new apparatus of latest pattern, he said, and putting equipment not too antique and decrepit into first-class condition.

Mr. Stallings showed me a most interesting, very genuine antique in the form of a projector dating back almost, if not quite, to the very beginning of life-size motion pictures. Its lamphouse is about 6 inches square (arc light) by 10 inches high. The projector, which is in excellent condition throughout, is driven by a crank, the shaft of which passes through the lamphouse, on the other side of which is a large belt wheel. The intermittent movement differs from any I have yet examined.

With Mr. Gelman I called at the RKO branch and chatted with Division Manager Arthur Freudenfels, who confirmed Mr. Stallings' report upon present motion picture business conditions in and around Cincinnati.

Next we called at RKO Lyric theatre projection room, where we met Jack Harthorne, president of Local 327, and also Charles Smith, both of whom were then on duty. Arthur M. Fix, business manager of Local 327, was also there.

And now I want to pay a well deserved compliment to Local 327. Time was, and not so long ago, when the organization stood in need of a thorough overhauling. The job was finally undertaken, and from what I was able to see in the short time at my disposal, was well done. The offices, consisting of an executive board room, sound engineer's office, president's and business manager's office, secretary's office and a central office, with which they all connect, are located in a fine downtown build-

ANASTIGMAT LENSES FOR PROJECTION

L. J. MICHAELSON of Vancouver, B. C., writes, "I have always understod that what is known as 'anastigmat' lenses are unsuitable for motion picture projection. Is or is not this correct, and why? I cannot understand why so valuable a correction in lenses should not be employed in these lenses."

Anastigmatic correction is now used in the higher grades of projection lenses. Super-Cinephor is an example. I quote from a Bausch & Lomb phamphlet:

"Anastigmats have not heretofore found favor for projection because, for large relative apertures, the correction for astigmatism and curvature of field has been obtained at sacrifice of definition in the center of the field."

I am not, of course, an expert in the making of lenses, but if you will write the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, Rochester, New York, or any other responsible lens manufacturer, full information, I am sure, will be supplied.

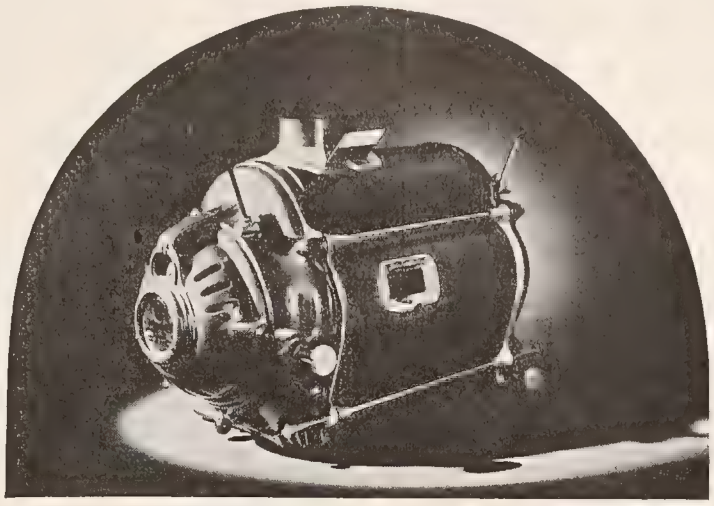
BRUSH POSITION

Connecticut asks: "Should brush position of generators ever be altered from that marked by the manufacturer? What is the duty of the projectionist in the matter of film inspection and repair of film received from an exchange?"

Brush position should be in accordance with manufacturer's markings, except it be desired to reverse direction of rotating element, or to connect the machine either in compound or in parallel with another machine. However, this is only a general rule. It does not apply strictly to all types of machines. If you have reason to believe the marking is wrong, or if you wish to do something that you believe will require change of brush position, you should consult the manufacturer, sending all name plate data and full description of what is



BETTER LAMPS BETTER PROJECTION

BETTER BUSINESS!

By every standard, Strong Arc Lamps have attained a treasured reputation for being the reliable guide to better projection.

Dependability above all things is the prime requisite of a projection lamp. This essential characteristic is dependent on correct design—highest engineering skill — careful manufacture. Strong spares no expense to attain trustworthiness —the ability to render faithful, trouble-free service and to withstand long, continuous use at high amperages.

Strong Lamps are completely manufactured within the Strong factory, where every step in production can be rigidly controlled to comply with the high standard set by Strong.

Strong Lamps are backed by an unconditional guarantee and by the Strong reputation, built on years of specialized projection arc lamp manufacturing experience.

proposed, or what causes you to think the position marked is wrong. The manufacturer should know all peculiarities of the machine he makes better than anyone else.

As to your question concerning film, if you address Mr. Earl R. Morin, Inspector Connecticut State Police, 23 Robson Street, Fairfield, Conn., asking for a copy of "Rules and Regulations Governing Motion Picture Exhibitions," you will receive a copy, I am sure, and on page 31 will find the following:

"It shall be the duty of projectionists to make thorough examination of all films before each exhibition. No film which shows excessive wear or deterioration, faulty patches, torn sprocket holes or other imperfections shall be run. Whenever a projectionist shall find film that is in such poor physical condition as to create a hazard, he shall immediately report such finding to the Department by telegram."

It will be observed that you must project no film in which are torn sprocket holes or faulty splices; also, that you must examine the film carefully before each exhibition, and if such faults are observed, report the matter to the police department by wire. However, while the intent of the paragraph undoubtedly is good, I must say it is not quite as definite in meaning as might be wished. For example, it says all film must be carefully examined "before each exhiibtion," which might be construed to mean either before each show, of which there may be three or four a day, or upon receipt of the films from the exchange. And if the former, may I ask just how, in one-man rooms, this could possibly be done? Then, too, the "report" matter is quite indefinite. As it reads, if two torn sprocket holes or two faulty splices be found in a production, under strict interpretation that production cannot be projected. Probably what is meant is that it shall not be projected until it has been competently repaired. But that is not what it says.

TOO MUCH TENSION

From New Mexico comes this one: "I am working for an exhibitor who once was a projectionist. He tells me I should know whether or not the aperture and take-up tensions are set at correct values, but refused to tell me how to do it. Just said I should know such things and gave me two weeks to "dig up" (as he put it) the information. I don't know where to look except to you. Will you kindly tell me how to do it?"

If you owned a Bluebook of Projection, asking such questions would be wholly unnecessary. Your employer was exactly right in saying you should know. The aperture tension is for the purpose of stopping the film over the aperture the instant the intermittent sprocket comes to rest. This must be accomplished exactly, else the picture upon the screen will be unsteady —will move up and down if the tension be too slight; if it be too much, there will be excessive wear upon the intermittent sprocket teeth, upon the intermittent movement parts, and upon the gear train, as well as an unnecessary load upon the driving motor. All this is obvious and easily understood.

Setting the tension is a hard job and one that takes time. It is a matter of bending the tension springs until (without any audience present) the screen image becomes slightly unsteady, whereupon they must be bent in the other direction until the movement ceases, being careful to bend both springs exactly the same. It is an adjustment by "trial and error" that requires great care and good judgment.

Projectors should be provided with a practical means for tension adjustment. Lack of it does huge damage to film in the form of excessive sprocket hole wear and strained holes, as well as excessive wear of intermittent sprocket teeth. If you can crank your projectors, after disconnecting the motors, at 100 feet per minute and so set the springs that the screen image becomes slightly unsteady at that speed, it is, up to now, the most practical method I know of for making correct adjustment. Plans have been formulated for measuring the pull of the film, but up to now none of them are in such form that they are reliable.

As to take-up tension, it should be adjusted to just the value that will insure rewinding all the film each time. There must of course be some little excess to insure complete rewinding, but the general tendency is to have abnormal excess, which not only wears the hold-back sprocket unduly, but also produces unnecesary scratch marks in the emulsion.

CLICK TEST

Montana asks: "Will you please advise what is meant by the 'click test,' and how it is made? I have this trouble: The manager employs two ushers and has told each of them to ring a bell which he has installed in the projection room ceiling, once when the sound volume is too low, and twice when it is too high. They drive me nuts! One will ring the bell once, and when I raise the volume level, the other immediately rings it twice, and I must raise it again! They seem unable to agree as to what the level should be. What is the answer to that one Dad?"

The click test is to show that the sound systems is functioning. It is made by moving the finger, a pencil or other narrow, opaque object up or down through the exciter light beam just in front of the sound gate aperture. If the system is functioning, there will be a click or noise from the speakers, failure of which calls for immediate investigation.

As to the usher observers, they have not been drilled by the manager as to what is acceptable volume level, or they are stationed in different parts of the theatre where conditions call for different sound levels, or one or the other of them has a more acute sense of hearing than the other. The manager should readjust matters.

BRUSH SPARKING

Iowa inquires: "Will you be good enough to name the various causes of commutator brush sparking? Also, what causes a commutator to rise above its usual normal operating temperature?"

There are many possible causes for brush sparking, as follows: (1) Machine overloaded. (2) Brushes have either not enough or too much pressure, or are not properly fitted to the curve of the commutator. (3) Commutating-pole field gap may not be right, though this should never occur, as it is fixed at the factory and ordinarily not thereafter altered. In any event it is not a fault projectionists are likely to be able to rectify. (4) Brushes not of suitable grade. (5) Mica between commutator bars too high. (6) Loose commutator bar. (7) Brush too tight in holder or worn down to end of its travel. (8) Rough or dirty commutator. (9) Brush angle not right, or incorrect position (with respect to circumference) of brushes. (10) Unequal pressure that causes one or more brushes to be overloaded—to take more than the fair share of current. (11) Brush dirty or burned on contact end. (12) A loose connection or open armature circuit, either of which faults will cause a bright ring of fire extending either partly or wholly round the commutator.

A commutator may heat because of overload, too much brush pressure, excessive sparking, a roughened surface causing poor contact; also, it may heat because of too little lubrication, which is a matter taken care of by many types of brushes which contain a lubrication element.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer inquiries pertaining to preliminary considerations in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticism. Working plans, however, cannot be supplied. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification.

THE QUESTION:

We want to remodel our theatre and would appreciate any help that you can give us. This building is an old style brick opera house with opera boxes both down stairs and in balcony. High ceiling, plastered walls, large stage and auditorium has round back walls.

The front of building has two large plate glass windows, one on right side to entrance to lobby, and other on left in express office. This extends across front. We want to change balcony steps and have them go up from right side of lobby.—J. A.

THE ANSWER:

I suggest that you remove the boxes on each side of proscenium arch; if ceiling in auditorium is too high, suspend it and use sound absorbing tiles or boards cemented to a scratch coat of plaster. An interesting design may be obtained by laying these tiles in different patterns.

Your sketch indicates that there is a foyer between lobby and auditorium (this space is where you show the steps). If my presumption is not correct, a foyer should be provided. It should be easy to change the stairs to the balcony, but it would be better to have this stairway start from the foyer than from the lobby.

I also notice that there are steps in front of building at sidewalk line—this is bad. Can the floor in the lobby be lowered flush with sidewalk level and give the lobby floor an incline? If some more steps are needed, add them to the foyer steps. I also suggest that you place the ticket booth in front at the sidewalk, with entrance doors on each side. By the use of, say, structural glass and the installation of some poster frames, an attractive modern design may be obtained.

After the boxes have been removed, plan for a drape panel in these spaces. Install some new modern electric light fixtures on each side of drape panel; after the walls have been redecorated, you will have quite a transformation.

THE QUESTION:

I have in mind erecting a theatre on a lot 30 x 120. I would like to make this property accommodate a seating capacity of about 495. Would you suggest a balcony?

What seating arrangement would you suggest with and without balcony? What would be the seating capacity without balcony and what measurements would you suggest for lobby, foyer and screen and stage? Heating and ventilating plant to be placed under stage.—I. J. C.

THE ANSWER:

It will be impossible to obtain a seating capacity of 495 in a theatre of 30 x 120′ on one floor. The maximum seating capacity on one floor will be 390 seats, so it will be necessary to provide for a balcony of 105 seats.

Under these conditions, I suggest a seating arrangement with thirteen seats across the width of the auditorium and with a wall aisle on each side. The depth of the lobby should be 12′ minimum, foyer 8′, stage or platform, 12′.

An early American style for a modern theatre in Kansas City. This architect's sketch shows the front of the Brookside theatre under construction in the Brookside section of the Western Missouri metropolis, not far from historic Westport Landing, one of the last outposts of civilization in the days of '49. The building is of dry-pressed brick laid in white mortar, with all trim and ornamental work in white, similar to the materials and treatment used in early Westport mansions. The vestibule and lobby continue the simple dignity of the facade, while foyer and auditorium are treated in a style typical of the prairie country along the Santa Fe trail. Side murals will tell a story of covered wagon days. The theatre is being constructed by Louis Dolgenow and Stanley H. Schwartz and associates, and will be leased by W. D. Fulton and Mr. Schwartz, Kansas City operators. Robert Boller of Kansas City, is the architect.

THE QUESTION:

WOULD LIKE to receive from you approximate cost to build a theatre with tile completely fireproof, having a store on each side regulation size 30 x 100 feet, with lobby entrance 15 feet. In other words the front of the building to be 75 feet.

The theatre is to be large enough to seat 600. Seats to be spaced 32 inches, with standing room for 200. The stage is to be large enough to put on a stageshow such as a town of 1100 would be able to have, with dressing rooms on each side. The building to be air-conditioned. The price of the building not to include fixtures, seats, sound equipment, etc.

Would appreciate a sketch of a building you would recommend that would be suited to my needs at the lowest possible price to construct.—C. S. W.

THE ANSWER:

ACCORDING TO your description, the lobby of the theatre will be of the same length as the store rooms on each side, namely 100′. Behind these stores and lobby will be the location of the theatre proper. As you may require right-of-way for each store room, I suggest you make the auditorium 46′ wide, the center line of auditorium to be the same as the center of lobby.

The seating arrangement should have a center section of thirteen seats across, with aisle on each side and two wall sections each with 4 seats across. A stage 20 feet deep will answer your requirements, so the area of the foyer, auditorium and stage would be 46 x 122 feet. The minimum cost of such a building would be $40,000.

THE QUESTION:

I HAVE A lot 60 x 123 feet and am planning on building a theatre to seat 350 to 375. The lot has plenty of slope and will not require much excavating to make a basement under the entire building. I plan on making two store rooms on each side of the lobby. Will you kindly advise how this should be laid out to get the best results?

This is a small town and I don't want to spend too much money. Do you think I can build this for $15,000, including plumbing, wiring and heating plant? Kindly advise building material to use.
—J. D.

THE ANSWER:

THE WIDTH of your lot, 60′, is ideal for a theatre with the minimum amount of aisles. For the seating layout, I suggest a center bank of 14 seats across, with a 4½ foot aisle on each side, and two wall banks of seven seats across each. With such an arrangement there will not be any waste space.

The depth of the building will allow for a larger seating capacity than you require. According to the suggested seating arrangement, it will only require fourteen rows of seats and I am afraid that the auditorium will look out of proportion. If no larger seating capacity is required, it may be well to consider reduction of the width of the theatre so that there will be at least 25 rows of seats.

If you expect to build a building large enough to cover the entire lot, $15,000 will be far below the actual cost of the various contracts; and even for a building to accommodate 375 seats, you should not figure on less than $18,000.

For building material, I suggest a foundation of concrete; auditorium floor, concrete; exterior walls, brick with hollow tile backing or reinforced concrete; roof, steel trusses with either steel deck or steel joists, and concrete; ceiling of auditorium, acoustical plaster; walls, plaster or wood-grained sheets.

THE QUESTION:

WE ARE inclosing herewith rough sketches of a theatre which we have purchased, and which we plan to remodel. We wish to increase the seating capacity, add rest rooms, completely redecorate same, all at the lowest possible cost.

We originally planned to tear out the center wall between the theatre and the empty store room, but feel that this will run into more expense than we care to put into this theatre. As a second choice, we have decided to use this section of the building for lobby, lounge, rest rooms and a shop, and lengthen the auditorium to secure the increased seating capacity.

We plan to use stucco on the outside to cover the present stone walls, and plan to use Celotex on the walls and ceiling inside the auditorium, lobby, foyers and loung.—M. M. W.

THE ANSWER:

AFTER GIVING your sketches careful study, I find that you have solved your problem very satisfactorily. Removing the center wall would have been a costly proposition.

One item which, according to my opinion, could be improved upon, is the location of the stairway in the lobby leading to the men's room in basement. It may be difficult for patrons to reach this stairway when the foyer and lobby are filled with standees. If there is enough space available in basement, I suggest that you plan for a stairway 5′ wide in the lounge along side wall, this stair to lead to a lounge in the basement; the individual men's and women's rooms could then be located as remotely as possible on opposite sides of the stairs.

The ticket counter is a very good innovation, but I question if the location of same is practical relative to the entrance doors to foyer. Do you not think that it might be better to place this counter in the center of the wall between lobby and lounge, and locate two sets of doors between lobby and foyer? This is merely a suggestion. Place some attractive poster frames on each side of the entrance doors; and by the use of some structural glass, you will obtain quite a modern effect.

Materials mentioned in your inquiry are inexpensive and satisfactory, but suggest the use of hard plaster wainscoting in places where patrons might lean against walls.

The treatment of steps in front of screen is also very nice, especially if the screen is placed directly inside of proscenium arch without a cyclorama or drapes.

THE QUESTION:

DUE TO FIRE which destroyed our theatre, we are confronted with the unthought of proposition of building a new theatre immediately. We realize that if we go ahead and build according to our own ideas or those of the first architect who happens to come along, that in the end we might have a job which would not be the best in design or the most for our money. Information from you which will put us on the right track for a correct start will be greatly appreciated. The following is idea of what we have in mind.

House to seat approximately 485. To be of fireproof construction—that is, with concrete foundation and floor—tile walls, brick front or something of the sort. Design to be along ultra-modern lines but not fantastic or overdone. Cost of building, with heat, necessary ventilation and lighting but less all other equipment. not to exceed $15,000.—L. W. B.

THE ANSWER:

THE MOST economic seating plan for a theatre with a capacity of 485 would have a center section of 12 seats across, with aisle on each side, and two wall sections, each with four seats across, making the total amount of seats across the width of the auditorium, 20. This requires an overall width of 46′ for the building.

Even with this plan, it will be impossible to build such a building of fireproof construction for $15,000. Exercising the greatest economy in design and construction, you should not figure less than $20,000, and it would be very difficult to get the general, plumbing, heating, and electric wiring contracts awarded for that amount of money.

THE QUESTION:

I AM WRITING to ask for some information in regard to building a theatre, so when I do go to an architect to do business I can talk to him in his own language.

What size plot would I need for a theatre of 2500 seats with stage, back wall to footlights, 35′; elevator pit for 40 men, 12′; orchestra seating length, 60′; standing room, 20′; lobby (with box office as in Roxy theatre) 30′

The upper floor I leave to you for the size. What size booth for two projectors and four spots? Now would you advise using Lumar-Luminous marble for the entire face of the building?

What would the cost be on the above, including everything, no extras to the builder, also architect fee for same. Now can you tell me where I can see the plans and specifications of the Ziegfeld theatre and the Earl Carroll theatre, now called the French Casino?—S. W.

THE ANSWER:

THE SIZE of a lot for a 2500-seat theatre depends a great deal on the seating arrangement of lower floor and balcony, and on the provision or omission of more than one balcony.

Suppose you were planning for a theatre with 1800 seats on the lower floor, and 700 seats in a balcony. The dimension of the auditorium should be at least 90′ wide and 120′ long (this is from orchestra railing to rear wall). Add to this the dimension you have in mind for the other parts of the theatre, providing for exit courts on each side. The minimum size of such a lot should be 110 x 220′. The dimensions you gave in your inquiry for the different parts of the building are all right, with the exception of orchestra seating depth. I presume that by "standing room" you mean a foyer.

Relative to the material you name for the exterior, I am not familiar enough with it to recommend it, but you could obtain an alternate figure for its use from the contractors.

The minimum cost of such a building, including equipment, architects fee, etc., would be $300,000. Architects' fee is generally calculated at 6% of the total cost of the building.

The projection room for your requirements should not be less than 12′ wide and 25′ long.

The Ziegfeld theatre was designed by the late Joseph Urban, but it has since been changed somewhat. You might be able to get the information you seek by writing Loew's, Inc., 1540 Broadway, New York. The decorative treatment of the original Earl Carroll theatre was by John Eberson, 1560 Broadway, New York. The present restaurant was designed by Thomas W. Lamb, Mayfair Theatre Bulding, New York.

Soliciting Feminine Patronage with Lounges

woman patron visits the lounge, she has at her command what might be likened to a hostess—someone to help her off and on with her wraps, hold her packages, mind the baby, if necessary, light her cigarette, see that she is entirely comfortable, and render a number of other courtesies and attentions with due discretion and restraint. The maids have the scheduled starting time of features, are posted on highlights of current programs, and have data on coming attractions. This and other information is graciously imparted to the patron when requested. They also have been schooled by Red Cross and other recognized authorities in first aid work and know how to take care of an emergency which might arise in connection with the patron on the premises.

Typical of the various weekly talks to the classes by managers is one recently given by Joe Alexander, manager of the Palace theatre.

"It is neither possible nor necessary to instruct you on the physical side of maintaining the lounge," he told the staff of maids. "Your own common sense will at once show you whether everything is as it should be, and you act accordingly. The average lady patron spends from 15 to 25 minutes in the lounge when attending the theatre. The effect of a good show can be very quickly spoiled if she is not properly taken care of in the lounge. She may become a disgruntled instead of a satisfied patron, and the theatre gets a 'black eye' through her comments to others.

"By the same token, your proper attention to the patron builds good-will for the theatre. Never argue with a patron under any circumstances. Speak only when you are spoken to, and then in a quiet, reserved manner. In case a patron is inclined to argue with you or find fault, refer her to the manager or the assistant.

"Women occasionally resent it when a woman brings a small son into the ladies' room when other ladies are present. This is a very delicate situation to handle. Explain the matter in a nice way and with reason, and offer to send an usher with the boy to the men's room. But use tact. As a rule, the patron will gladly comply.

"Keep your first aid cabinet properly supplied. Always have a quantity of matches, buttons, needles and thread, pins, etc., ready for use. Have a supply of change in various denominations always on hand for use in the telephone and other vending devices in the lounge. At all times see that supplies of towels, soap, tissue, napkins and other essentials are kept replenished. Make frequent inspections of mirrors, dressing tables, lounge chairs, ash containers, wall fixtures, carpeting, booths, waste receptacles, shelves and the general condition of the room. Always be on the floor at the 'break' of a show. This is the time when the lounge is frequented most."

These matters are of great importance—which recalls a humorous incident at one of the meetings. The speaker referred to a matter as being of paramount importance. One of the maids immediately inquired whether it was not just as important to the other theatres as it was to the Paramount. The maids have been outfitted with attractive uniforms, alike in all houses. The lounges have been artistically redecorated, and in some instances, refurnished, at least in part. Some idea of the general appearance may be gained from the photograph showing a partial view of the large Albee lounge. This is typical of the others, though, of course, each treatment harmonizes with the style of the theatre. The walls and woodwork in the Albee lounge are tinted in a dull ivory, with heavy gold drapes to harmonize. Carpets, upholstery and wall decoration of the stairway are in a subdued shade of red. Frames of the furniture are in gold, table tops of marble, and lamp shades in tan (a color scheme harmonizing with that throughout the lobby and auditorium). Sections of the lounge not shown in the photograph contain extra wide mirrors in appropriate frames and extending almost to the floor.

Although the school has been in operation but a comparatively short time, it is producing excellent results, according to Mr. Goetz. That the new plan is finding high favor among Cincinnati women is evidenced by the fact that many have gone out of their way to express appreciation to the management of the treatment received in the lounge, and to pay compliments to the general appearance of the rooms. This, in the final analysis, substantiates Mr. Goetz's original deduction—that to cater to the whims, vanity, and above all, to the comfort and convenience of the women attending the theatre pays handsome dividends, for after all, the feminine element constitutes an important factor in influencing theatre patronage, both in the home and in social affairs.—E. H. MAYER.

How to Deal With Disorderly Patrons

ful excuse for it, he is not liable. Now, it is also a principle of law that words are never a sufficient or lawful excuse for a battery; it does not matter how insulting or opprobrious the language may be, the law does not recognize that words are sufficient provocation to justify an assault. . . . If, however, one goes to a place of that character on a lawful mission, and he so conducts himself as to become offensive to the proprietor of that establishment, the proprietor has the right to eject. Now how must he eject him? He must proceed, first, by ordering him to leave the premises; if he declines to go, and does not go, he must first use gentle means, and lay his hands upon him gently; if he resents and refuses to go, the proprietor of the establishment may use whatever force is necessary to eject the tresspasser; but he must not use more force than is necessary."

LACK OF CAUSE

In still another instructive case (Planchard v. Klain Theatres Company, 117 So. 132), it was disclosed that a theatre patron sued the proprietor because without good reason he was forcibly ejected from a theatre. During the trial testimony was given that a lady occupying a seat near this patron fainted. The patron went to her and began to fan her with a newspaper, when another lady in the audience attempted to open a window. Soon afterward an usher approached and said: "You have no right to open it, sit down, or I will put you out of this theatre." A policeman stationed at the theatre was called, and at the resquest of the usher, took the patron from the theatre.

The usher of the theatre contended that he had the patron put out because the latter was disturbing the audience by throwing paper airplanes from the pit into the orchestra below. However, witnesses who were near the patron testified that this was false, as the latter was only trying to help one who was in distress and none saw him throwing any paper. The patron filed suit for damages. The higher court held the theatre owner liable for $500 damages explaining the law, as follows:

"There can be no doubt that, as a legal proposition, it is the duty of the managers of a theatre to maintain proper order in and about the theatre during the performance, and while the people are assembling or leaving the theatre. And whenever such managers or those charged with the duty of maintaining order have reason to believe one in the audience guilty of improper conduct, calculated to alarm or disturb the audience, they are justified in taking such reasonable steps as will be necessary to put an end to the disturbance, even to the extent of ejecting the offenders. On the other hand, people who visit such places of amusement and entertainment, and who are not guilty of any unseemly conduct, wrongdoing, or disturbance, are entitled to full protection at the hand of the managers of the theatre in the enjoyment of the privilege for which they have paid their money. And where, as in this case, a patron of a theatre is insulted, maltreated, and caused to leave the theatre by an employe of such theatre without just, reasonable, or probable cause, such theatre will be held liable in damages."

LIABILITY FOR ACTS OF EMPLOYEES

IT IS QUITE generally held by the higher courts that where a theatre owner puts the management of his business in the hands of an employe, the owner is responsible for the acts of the employe committed within the scope of employment, and in furtherance of the business. This law is applicable although the act was committed through lack of discretion or judgment, or loss of temper occasioned by the circumstances of the occasion.

A theatre owner, therefore, is liable to patrons for frauds, deceits, concealments, misrepresentations, torts, negligences and other misfeasances and omissions of duty of his manager in the course of his employment, although the owner did not authorize, or justify, or participate in, or indeed, know of, such misconduct, or even if he forbade them, or disapproved of them.

This rule of the law is founded on public policy and in no other way could there be any safety to third persons in their dealing, either directly with employers or indirectly.

Obviously, however, these established rules of the law do not apply to common employes such as ushers, cleaners, picture machine operators, or other persons who are employed to perform specific duties not related to or connected with the injury upon which a suit against a theatre owner is based.

In Nees v. Goldman (154 S. E. 769) a manager struck a patron while arguing over money which the manager claimed was due his employer. The injured patron sued for $7,500. It was contended by the proprietor that the manager was not acting within the scope of his authority or duties when he committed the assault. However, the higher court held the employer liable.

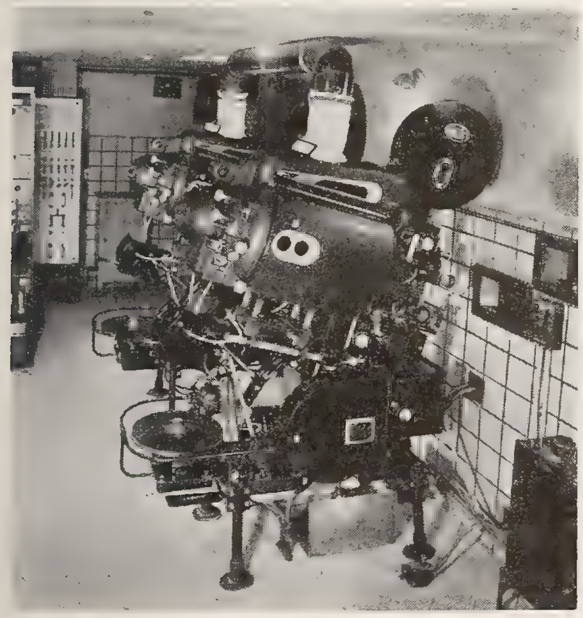
ABUSIVE LANGUAGE

In still another very significant case (64 S. W. [2d]163) an employe said in a loud voice, "I'll put every one of you damn fellows out of here." The employe was authorized to eject patrons and the higher court held the employer liable, saying:

"Since, in view of this language, which was spoken in the presence of others and is clearly abusive and insulting, appellee was entitled to recover for mortification and humiliation of feeling."

Also, in 148 S. W. 46, where there was no wrongful ejection, but the manager cursed and abused a patron, the employer was held liable for $600 damages.

It is therefore quite apparent that a theatre owner may be liable in damages where a patron is rightfully ejected from the theatre, but is cursed and abused by the theatre owner or his authorized employes. This is true notwithstanding the fact that no greater force than was necessary was used when ejecting the patron.



A recently modernized projection room in South America, that of the Gran Cine in Buenos Aires—located, it is probably well to add, on the Argentine capital's own Broadway. The projectors are Kalee, of British manufacture. The new projection lamps, however, are of American make, being Ashcraft suprex-arc type lamps. The lamps were supplied through the establishment of Eugenio M. Etchegoin, Ashcraft representative in Argentina and Uruguay, who provided the entire projection and sound equipment for the Gran Cine installation. For new theatres, and in the course of reconditioning existing houses, South American theatre operators, it is reported, are widely adopting the suprex arc for their projection light sources.

Super Simplex PEDESTAL

Since the introduction of sound reproducing equipment projectors have had to accommodate more heavily constructed devices including sound reproducers, heavy duty arc lamps, more sturdily constructed mechanisms and larger magazines. Recently the introduction of the standard 2000′ release print has placed a further burden of weight on motion picture projection equipment.

Super Simplex PEDESTAL has been designed to meet these demands and in addition permits all the necessary quick adjustments so greatly appreciated by projectionists.

Super Simplex PEDESTAL Undoubtedly the finest projector pedestal now on the market will prove a profitable investment for theatre owners and managers who fully realize the box office value of good projection. Patrons today shop for quality and Super Simplex projector, mechanism and pedestal have many advantages which will be appreciated by theatre owners, managers and projectionists who wish to give their audience the finest possible screen results.

RCA PHOTOPHONE "THE MAGIC VOICE OF THE SCREEN"

New RCA Cellular Speakers are the final link in creating perfect sound reproduction!

There's something new in motion picture sound! It's a new voice—the Magic Voice of the Screen! And it belongs to RCA Photophone equipment!

The Magic Voice of the Screen is the name for RCA's newest complete high fidelity sound system including Cellular Speakers. RCA Cellular Speakers are the final link in the chain of perfect sound reproduction which Photophone has so progressively been forging for years.

Cellular Speakers! The famous Rotary Stabilizer! High Fidelity Amplifiers!—All these make RCA Photophone the outstanding leader in its field. And these features mean bigger box office for you. That's why we urge you to join the sweeping trend to Photophone. Give your screen this great Magic Voice. Let it prove its magnetic pulling power at your box office!

RCA presents the Metropolitan Opera every Saturday afternoon. And "Magic Key of RCA" every Sunday 2 to 3 P. M., E. S. T. Both on NBC Blue Network.

There's magic in the name

that will sing you a song of profit!

Millions of Americans are familiar with the Magic Voice of RCA Victor radios. And, when you own this new Photophone equipment, you can advertise "The Magic Voice of the Screen—an RCA product"—and profit by the widespread knowledge of the Magic Voice name and by RCA's reputation. The radio Magic Voice represents the highest standard of tonal quality in the home. The Magic Voice of the Screen attains that same lofty peak in the theatre!

What the new RCA Cellular Speakers mean to you

1. They are the first speakers to distribute all higher frequencies evenly throughout the theatre.
2. They have tremendous power handling capacity.
3. They provide undistorted reproduction of all notes—lowest to highest.
4. They require less room backstage.

HERE AND "OVER THERE"

THE issues and unending problems of the motion picture industry of these United States, at home and within itself, are so many, so strenuous and so considerable that it is not surprising that we are not ever conscious of both the world problems of the screen and their involvement of the whole of American trade in a troubled world.

Information which still stands in the "off-the-record"—and damn that phrase—category, indicates anew and strongly that the wares of Hollywood are intensely important in the foreign trade picture, with bearings on the sum total effect of trade treaties and many ramifications of American industry in no manner directly related.

Everywhere the walls of nationalism are being raised against the American motion picture to the highest practical point. Practicality in this instance means the adjustment between the overseas exhibitor who wants all the American film he can get, on the one side, and against him governments which want the screen for propaganda, direct and indirect, and patriots who would like to prosper making films for their government aligned against the exhibitor and his customers.

The result is inevitably increasing restriction of imports of American film, which in turn means more and more intensive selection of hit material by the importers, putting new premium on "A" product, new handicaps on mine-run production.

MEANWHILE it is commonly asserted and probably as true as any generalization, that American picture production makes its cost at home and its profits in the foreign market.

That condition, with the influences it bespeaks, would seem to make the world market of the motion picture business a concern of and interesting, exceedingly, to the American exhibitor. It is not clear that he can do anything about it, but it can and does have effects of large importance on the merchandise which he must present. It plainly enough indicates that as the foreign market becomes more and more highly selective under its restrictions of import, Hollywood of necessity must on its major efforts direct itself with ever-growing intensity to the quest of a cosmic general appeal, which by miracle is reasonably approximated.

Meanwhile, admitting miracle, at from a million to two million per miracle, breadth of appeal does not, unfortunately, carry with it depth, and sober Hollywood will admit that to do a better job at home it could do with here and there some depth.

In consequence of this well near incestuous competition with itself, Hollywood, with more intelligence than the intelligentsia knows, is trending again, ever so tentatively.

THE trend begins to shine through in the more casual, intimately unofficial, conversations of such diverse persons of weight as Mr. Sam Briskin of RKO, with his observations of the facts about the success, in terms of "art", of "The Informer", which is in his office not exactly what the critics thought, as of Mr. Frank Capra of Columbia, just at the end of a two-million-dollar project of which he thinks well, and of Mr. Douglas MacLean of Grand National, who incidental to his graver labours is taking a slant-eyed approach at a minority market of intelligence with a native-made Chinese picture. These most practical persons are thinking about product that might be addressed to less than the entire, and cockeyed, world.

It is a casual thought that if this trending keeps on we shall presently be seeing some important experimenting and angling for minority audiences in the "B" production of Hollywood. Since the "B" picture is only a "filler" anyway, it is there that Hollywood may venture away from proved patterns.

AND now, returning to our considerations of international relations, it is to be asserted that the whole of American industry is a party at interest in the continued access of the products of Hollywood to the world screen.

It may be said without the divulgence of confidences that support of the American motion picture industry's interests abroad has been empowered importantly by the ability of its protagonist to show in influential governmental quarters that Hollywood sells not only pictures but the United States and its goods.

It is an inevitable consequence of this fact that the American film has met with oppositions far beyond any that might have been expressed against its invasive qualities as amusement merchandise. It is then only fair and proper that the American picture, this 35mm. ambassador of industry, purveying by indirection and the persuasion of drama all that America has to sell, should and does receive important, effective official support in high places.

The American motion picture can, if need be, make a very good living for itself, and satisfy its customers at home. It would not be a very good day for American industry, and its workers, if that had to be done.

This Week

Newsreels on Floods

The five newsreel companies this week allotted practically their entire footage to a pictorial survey of the floods along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, supplementing each issue with editorial shots of the stricken areas as they were filmed. In one or two cases a bit of space was given over to the automobile strike in Michigan.

An account of new damages to theatres and the industry's activities in flood relief starts on page 15.

93 Stories Bought

Hollywood's producers started their search for screen material for 1937 by making 93 purchases in January to break an eight-months' record established last May. Some 24 producing companies participated in the January acquisitions, prominent among them being Columbia, with its purchase of the current George Kaufman-Moss Hart Broadway stage hit, "You Can't Take It With You," at a price reported to have been approximately $200,000.

A complete list of stories bought, with all available credits, is found on page 23.

'Way for Melodrama

Hollywood interpretation of public demand is to the effect that there is a rising market for melodrama and producers have arranged studio schedules with a view to supplying that market adequately in the immediate future. The trend is general.

Titles and sponsors of pictures designed to meet the indicated demand are listed on page 39.

Answering Ostrer

Exhibition in Great Britain could not exist, either physically or economically, without American product, practical men in Wardour Street commented following the suggestion of Isidore Ostrer, president of Gaumont British, that American producers be required to spend one-fourth as much by buying British product as they take out of Britain with American pictures.

Details of Mr. Ostrer's proposals and the British trade's reactions are recorded on page 58.

Talent Insurance

Lloyds and other assurance companies have discontinued granting producers policies on talent while pictures are in production. The influenza epidemic, which has held up many pictures, is held accountable for the decision and for increased rates to be assessed on resumption of the practice.

The story is on page 39.

Columbia Accepts

Columbia, answering the trade practice proposals put forward by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has agreed to eliminate the score charge, cooperate in the establishment of local conciliation boards, grant a ten per cent cancellation privilege on a restricted basis, and aid in overcoming other trade practice evils.

Abe Montague's letter to Edward Kuykendall is quoted on page 27.

Quigley Luncheon

Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, was tendered a luncheon in Mexico City Monday at the Hotel Reforma, attended by a number of motion picture executives and newspaper men.

Among those present were Arthur Pratchett, Paramount; Luis Lezama, Radio; Gustave Mohme, Twentieth Century-Fox; Jacob Epstein, Universal; Gordon Dunlap and Frederick Sordo, United Artists; Carlos Niebla, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Felipe Mier, independent distributor; Enrique Zienert of the Film Board of Trade, Watterson R. Rothacker and Walter Howey.

Admission Taxes Up

Admission tax receipts for December as announced by the Bureau of Internal Revenue were $2,194,584, a new high which brings the total for 1936 to $18,457,482, an increase of more than $2,500,000 over the 1935 total of $16,406,021.

The statistics are on page 34.

Young Talent

Efforts of the motion picture companies to discover and encourage new talent and to obtain the rights to good plays without submitting to the terms of the Dramatists' Guild new basic agreement bore their first fruit this week in the announcement of the winners of five fellowships and scholarships and one cash prize in a competition conducted by the Bureau of New Plays, Inc. The bureau, under the directorship of Theresa Helburn, is fostered by seven major producing companies.

The story of the competition is on page 17.

Al Cohn with Selznick

Alfred A. Cohn, United States Collector of Customs of the Port of Los Angeles, has joined the writing staff of Selznick International. Mr. Cohn has been in the writing departments of several studios, most recently with Warner Brothers. He was for years West Coast manager of Photoplay under the late James R. Quirk.

Back to the Front

Clubwomen of Chicago have returned to the wars, and are determined to give the quietus to the double feature. Supporting the familiar arguments against the practice they have launched surveys in churches and homes, offices and schools, to find out just how many really want two features in a program.

Further developments in the Chicago situation appear on page —.

Chance Games Truce

Philadelphia exhibitors, forced to abandon chance games last week by the police, have obtained a four weeks' truce during which the games will operate and a test case will be initiated to determine the legal status of the practice. The truce was arranged at a conference with Mayor S. Davis Wilson.

The Philadelphia dispute and other chance game developments are reported on page 34.

Aylesworth Resigns

Merlin Hall Aylesworth on Monday announced his resignation as board chairman of RKO to become associated with the management of the Scripps-Howard newspapers. Thus does Mr. Aylesworth end an eleven-year association with amusements in radio and motion pictures, for the Radio Corporation.

See page 16.

Exhibitor Conventions

Organized exhibitor activity this week was marked by the MPTOA and Allied States setting March 16th and May 12th, respectively, as the dates for their annual national conventions, and by the election of officers in state exhibitor organizations in California, District of Columbia, Missouri, New England, and Maryland.

Exhibitor organization activities are reported on page 30.

Court Review Denied

The supreme court in Washington this week denied the pleas of Archibald Palmer, Louis Boehm and Samuel Zirn to review the action of the New York federal district court in rejecting applications for allowances exceeding $100,000 filed as representatives of security owners in the Paramount reorganization.

Details are on page 54.

Drunkenness Banned

A decision to curtail scenes in motion pictures depicting drinking and drunkenness was reached in Hollywood this week at a meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. Will H. Hays, president of the organization, issued a call for the annual meeting of member producers to be held in Hollywood on Thursday.

A letter has been sent by Joseph Breen, director of the Production Code Administration, to all major producers appraising them of the new policy adopted and informing them that the code authority has been authorized to eliminate scenes which, in its judgement, come under the aforementioned category.

French Outlook

With 110 features made by French studios last year, and thirty of them rated of a standard of production to be compared favorably with large foreign subjects, the producers in France are making the customary slow start but hope for an excellent year, starting in March, though they have one eye to the poiltical situation as an important factor.

A list of outstanding French pictures of the past year appears in the article by Pierre Autre, beginning on page 53.

Academy Awards

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood has started the machinery for determining the production and talent award winners for outstanding achievements in 1937, establishing a basic list of 383 features from which the selections will be made.

First nominations are listed on page 62.

101 Approved

The Production Code Administration granted seals to 101 features and 64 shorts in the two months from November 21, 1936, to January 23, 1937. Of these only six features and one short were reissues.

The record by companies is on page 62.

Nazi Newsreel Review

The newsreel review of 1936 in Nazi Germany reached the screens of Berlin this week, but only after Dr. Paul Josephs Goebbels, Minister of Propoganda and Public Enlightenment, and his staff, had done a thorough job of editing. So much so, that only three events that occurred outside of Germany reach the screen. Ralph W. Barnes, special correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune in Berlin, reviews the issue in a copyrighted dispatch to his paper.

Excerpts of his review are found on page 54.

Newspapers on the Air

A movement in Congress to check or control newspaper ownership of radio stations has culminated in the introduction of a bill by Representative Wearin of Iowa to require the separation of such interests.

Time's Birthday

With its February issue March of Time marks its second birthday. The first release, in February, 1935, played in 400 theatres and the present issue will be distributed by RKO to 9,982 houses.

See page 54.

Lawmakers

Presentation of the independent appropriations bill in Congress was the occasion for an attack this week by Representative Wigglesworth of Massachusetts on the Federal Communications Commission. Mr. Wigglesworth demanded an investigation. State legislatures in full swing are considering new or increased taxes affecting the motion picture industry.

Legislative news is reviewed on page 38.

Roxy Plan Advanced

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey this week directed that copies of the Roxy Theatre Corporation reorganization plan be sent out to security holders and creditors with the notice that the court neither has approved nor disapproved of the plan. At the same time it was revealed that the theatre showed earnings of $83,230 for the 26 weeks ending Dec. 10, 1936, which was at the rate of 4.63 per cent on its first mortgage bonds.

Mid-season Sales

Mid-seasonal sales campaigns are on in full blast, ten companies presently engaging in conferences between both coasts to start off their field forces on the second lap of 1936-37.

Meetings and special drives form part of the new sales efforts, as described on page 42.

Salaries

Supplemental salary lists reported to Congress this week by the Treasury Department included a lengthy report from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Greta Garbo was reported as having received $332,500 from that company in 1935.

The list is on page 61.

Production Recedes

Production eased noticeably during the final week of January with but four new pictures going into work as seven finished, netting a total of 51 pictures on the schedule.

Personnel and titles of pictures started and finished are given on page 39.

Unfair Methods Charged

Charging unfair methods of competition in the leasing and renting of advertising motion pictures, the Federal Trade Commission in Washington this week issued a formal complaint against Royal Revues, Inc., West Coast Discount Corporation and their officers, and Royal Film Studio, Hollywood. Later, cancellation of the complaint was announced by the Commission, on the basis of a stipulation under which respondents agree to discontinue the practices complained of.

Details are on page 22.

INDUSTRY RUSHES FLOOD RELIEF; NEWSREELS MAKE RECORD COVERAGE

Theatres in Memphis and St. Louis Areas Closed; Barring of Trucks on Roads Restricts Distribution

Motion picture exhibition and distribution this week were still almost completely demoralized in the inundated areas of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. While the waters of the Ohio showed some signs of abatement, other towns farther down the Mississippi were threatened. At the same time, the industry was staging benefits and raising donations for the American Red Cross.

Theatres in the Memphis and St. Louis areas began to feel the effect of the floods as high waters forced them to continue closed. Distribution in the affected areas was virtually paralyzed by the refusal of the authorities to allow trucks to operate on the lightless roads. Electrical Research Products, Inc., in New York, announced abatement of service charges to stricken theatres. Film interests in 24 cities led by New York and Hollywood, completed their donation quotas or drew up plans for staging benefits.

While flood refugees continued to pour into Memphis by tens of thousands, theatre business outside the city was reported at virtually a standstill. The city itself was still high and dry and likely to remain so, but busineess has slumped severely in all Memphis theatres.

Theatres Dark in More Towns

Among towns served by Memphis exchanges, in which all theatres were darkened in the emergency were Marked Tree, Monette, Miller, Lepanto, Leachville, Parkin, Earle, Clarendon, Cotton Plant and Holly Grove, in Arkansas; Senth, Mo.; Ridgely and Ripley, Tenn., and Hickman, Ky. Schedules were interrupted or stopped entirely in Owensboro, Henderson, Fulton and Princeton, Ky.; Covington, Obion, Halls, Dyersburg, Newburn and Dyer, Tenn.; Wynne and Brinkley, Ark.; Kennett, Mo., and Shelby, Miss.

Memphis exchanges were reported to have suffered heavy losses in damaged and lost prints.

Up the Mississippi, in the St. Louis territory, breaking levees along the Ohio caused the flooding of Mound City and Mounds, Ill., and back waters were reported in Harrisburg, Ill. The three theatres in these towns were reported to have escaped damage.

Cincinnati Houses Reopening

Farther north, in Cincinnati, all amusement places still were reported closed, but Millard M. Blattner, RKO city manager there, expected to have his suburban theatres opened late this week and other managers hoped to be operating at a normal schedule within another seven days. Theatres in Shawneetown, Equality and Metropolis were forced to close as the lack of power or high waters darkened the Ohio towns of Middletown, East Liverpool, Martin's Ferry, Bridgeport, Bellaire, New Philadelphia, Dover, Newark, Batavia, West Union, Ripley, Woodsville, Wellsville, Pomeroy and Blanchester, and all theatres in northern Kentucky.

In West Virginia, Wheeling, Huntington, Parkersburg, Point Pleasant, Ravenswood, New Martinsville, Kenova and St. Marys continued among the closed situations and many nearby Indiana towns were similarly affected.

BENEFIT CANCELLED ON PROTEST BY MINISTRY

The Altoona, Pa., Ministerium this week came in for severe editorial comment by local newspapers for protesting and bringing about the cancellation of flood benefit motion picture shows scheduled for last Sunday. The clergy, it was said, felt the shows were being used as propaganda for Sunday pictures in the town.

In Pittsburgh damage to the industry was estimated above $20,000. The waters were receding, giving the theatres in the danger zones an opportunity to clear the debris from their flooded lower floors. The Stanley was still closed over the weekend, the management announcing that the noise of the pumps in the basement interfered with the programs.

Double Shifts in Exchanges

Pittsburgh film exchanges for the last 10 days have been taxed to the utmost trying to serve Cincinnati accounts. Double shifts still were being maintained in most of the offices. Film deliveries to seven theatres in Wellsburg, New Cumberland, Wheeling and New Martinsville in West Virginia are being made with difficulty as the roads were crowded with relief trucks and Red Cross cars.

Whitford S. Drake, executive vice-president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., in New York, announced that telegrams had been sent to all its branches which serve theatres in the flooded areas asking them to notify exhibitors that during the emergency and until these houses can reopen, service charges will be abated.

The theatrical division of the American Red Cross will hold a huge benefit show to obtain funds for the relief of flood sufferers, on February 11, probably at the Music Hall, it was anaounced following a meeting called by Theatre Authority, Inc., clearing house of theatrical organizations. The Authority has been designated as the official unit of the Red Cross in charge of all theatrical benefits for flood relief and has waived its usual 15 per cent on the show.

It is planned to start the benefit at 12 midnight, with boxes on a subscription arrangement and regular admissions scaled from $1 to $10. The show is expected to last three hours and a radio arrangement has been made to broadcast the program by 15-minute periods, with a sponsor for each, at $1,000 a period.

The Fabian, Fox theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., was to hold a benefit on Friday night.

Beetson Heads Committee

At the same time, Fred W. Beetson was named to supervise solicitation of flood relief funds in Hollywood industry by D. C. MacWaters, chairman of the Los Angeles Red Cross. The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has already subscribed $5,000 to the fund. A special benefit

More Than 100 Men in Crews Shooting River Tragedy; Short Wave Radio Stations Help Make Contacts

The treatment being accorded the flooded states along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers by the combined forces of Paramount News, Universal Newsreel, News of the Day, Pathe and Fox Movietone News, has called for the greatest concentration of men on one assignment in the recent history of newsreels, executives said in New York this week.

More than 100 men are actively engaged in bringing pictures of the disaster to the screens, 20 more than the number who photographed the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

Universal Newsreel is covering the flood with 12 regular cameramen using airplanes, coast guard vessels and rubber boats, and these men are being assisted by freelance cameramen. Charles Ford, editor, has been directing activities from New York through Norman Alley, who is flying an amphibian plane through the flooded areas. Merle Johnson, assignment editor, has been in charge at Paramount, directing 10 regular photographers and many freelance operators. Likewise, the editors of the other reels also have personally directed the filming of the disaster, issuing orders directly to their photographers by telephone, usually the only means of communication.

Meeting the Flood

Most of the newsreels spread their men down the Ohio Valley from Pittsburgh to Cairo and then down the Mississippi to Memphis. The crews operating from Pittsburgh are following the receding waters and the units working out of Memphis have worked north to meet them.

It is estimated that over 100,000 feet of negative was exposed by the combined cameramen in the first week of the disaster.

Robert Butler of Movietone News received a head injury when his car crashed as he was traveling from Indianapolis on an assignment. Jack Barnett, Kansas City staff man of the same reel, was marooned for 20 hours in the Ohio before being rescued by Coast Guardsmen, and a forced landing near New Madrid grounded Mr. Alley for a night.

Use Magnesium Flares

No electricity has been available in the stricken areas for night shots and most of the views have been forced use magnesium flares for this type of work and in the few cases where sound was recorded the batteries in the trucks were brought into service.

Radio communication also was utilized by the newsreels to a greater extent than ever before. Two stations, one in Louisville and another in Nashville, cooperated by reading instructions and bulletins to crews in the field, all of whom carried long-wave sets tuned in on the stations' wave lengths. Jack Whipple of News of the Day set up a short-wave receiving set with his unit and listened to the official relief messages for possible photographic material.

All of the reels issued specials over the weekend including the scenes shot as late as Friday night in the St. Louis territory along the Mississippi and it is planned to release another series of specials each week until the waters subside.

AYLESWORTH LEAVES FILMS FOR PUBLISHING

Chairman of Radio-Keith-Orpheum on General Management Staff of Scripps-Howard

Merlin Hall Aylesworth on Monday announced an abrupt termination of an eleven-year, widely diversified association with the amusement interests of the Radio Corporation of America, to join the publishing business of the Scripps-Howard chain of daily newspapers, on or about March 1st.

The conclusion of Mr. Aylesworth's present association, as chairman of the board of Radio-Keith Orpheum Corporation, is considered significant of the proximity of that company's reorganization from receivership. It does, however, interrupt Mr. Aylesworth's ambitions to effect a "marriage" of the motion picture and the radio, a union already well on the way, and credited largely to Mr. Aylesworth's efforts.

Mr. Aylesworth, representing the RCA interests in the RKO production, distribution and exhibition corporations, has been active with the RKO management and the bankers in building the plan for reorganization.

Mr. Aylesworth said the RKO reorganization plan is "intelligent and fair."

He was instrumental in the negotiations with Floyd B. Odlum's Atlas Corporation which resulted in Mr. Odlum's purchase of one-half of the Radio Corporation's holding in Radio-Keith-Orpheum, and also Mr. Odlum's purchase of an option to buy RCA's remaining half. Lehman Brothers participated with the Odlum interests in this transaction. Atlas, however, has not as yet exercised its option for the acquisition of the second half.

After a study of the entire RKO situation, Atlas presented a financial plan for the reorganization. The plan is now before Judge Alfred Bondy, in federal court in New York.

"During the period of Mr. Aylesworth's connection with RKO," said the announcement, "the company has passed from heavy operating losses to substantial profits as reflected by the figures for 1936."

Mr. Aylesworth will become a member of the general management staff of the publications, and in so doing will associate himself with Robert P. Scripps, Roy W. Howard, William W. Hawkins, George B. Parker, William G. Chandler, John H. Sorrells and Paul Peterson.

Merlin Hall Aylesworth, better kown to his intimates as "Deacon," was born 51 years ago, on July 19th, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. His training in the higher schools was extensive, attending the University of Denver (Bachelor of Literature), Colorado Agriculture College, University of Colorado, University of Wisconsin, Columbia University and Drake University (LL. D.)

He practiced law for a brief period in Fort Collins, Colo., and in 1914 became chairman of the board of the Colorado Public Utilities Commission, a position which he held four years. In 1918 he became associated with the National Electric interests, where he attracted the attention of Owen D. Young, who is said to have been largely responsible for Mr. Aylesworth's being called to New York, in 1926, to organize and establish RCA's National Broadcasting Company, of which Mr. Aylesworth was president for ten years.

The parent RCA, in 1932, induced Mr. Aylesworth to add the presidency of its RKO interests to his NBC position, and in 1936 he was elected chairman of the RKO board. He resigned as president of National Broadcasting on January 1, 1936—Lenox Lohr succeeding him—to devote his entire time to the RKO reorganization with the new Odlum-Atlas-Lehman interests. Leo Spitz subsequently succeeded Mr. Aylesworth as RKO president with the entrance of the Odlum group.

Dickinson Making Tour

Arthur Dickinson of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., is visiting the principal exchange cities throughout the country to inspect the facilities for handling the new 2000-foot reels. Exchange operations in connection with the reels will be studied also with a view of developing maximum efficiency.

FILMS OPEN THEIR OWN STORY TALENT SOURCE

Five Fellowships and Scholarships Awarded in Competition by Bureau of New Plays

Organized efforts by large motion picture companies to discover and encourage new playwriting talent bore their first fruit this week with the award of five fellowships and scholarships totaling $8,750 and one cash prize of $500 to the winners of a playwriting competition conducted by the Bureau of New Plays, Inc., under the sponsorship of seven film producers. Entrants were limited to undergraduate college students and graduate students not more than three years out of college, in line with the Bureau's interest priamrily in promise shown by writers. Guild agreement.

Although the Bureau of New Plays is being fostered at a cost of $50,000 to the motion picture companies, it is possible that some of the scripts submitted will be produced by Broadway managers under the Dramatists' Guild's new minimum basic agreement which the screen industry opposes. The film companies, however, will have first choice of the plays, for which they will draw lots. Concerned in the agreement are Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal and Warner Bros.

A motion picture executive who has read some of the scripts received by the bureau said their quality was generally higher than that of the average play submitted to managers. No date has been set for the drawing of lots by the film companies.

A script chosen by one of the seven companies would be presented by a producing company especially set up for the purpose or "farmed out" to a manager who has not signed the Dramatists' Guild's new agreement. Only a play that has been rejected by all the film producers concerned would be offered the legitimate stage under the pact.

MANY FLOOD BENEFIT SHOWS GIVEN

performance is also being arranged with Charles Butterworth in charge. Harold Lloyd has also accepted the chairmanship of a committee to arrange another benefit and the Song Writers Association plans another.

A radio appeal for flood funds was staged by National Broadcasting Company Monday night in conjunction with the Red Cross and motion picture stars in a two-hour broadcast over its Blue network. The program was "picked-up" from Miami, Hollywood, Chicago and New York with more than 50 personalities on the air, including Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Irvin S. Cobb, Carole Lombard, Bing Crosby, Amos 'n' Andy, Marion Talley, Stan Laurel, Bob Burns, Lum 'n' Abner, Walter Winchell, Morton Downey, Wayne King, Ted Lewis, Harry Richman, Jane Froman and Jack Pearl. Mr. Hays urged that this "unparalleled disaster must be met by unparalleled generosity."

Radio station WHN, operated by Loew's in New York, received over 100 donations totaling some $3,300 in response to a call of Louis K. Sidney for all Kentucky "Colonels" to contribute to a fund to send to Governor Albert B. Chandler for Kentucky relief.

Distributors offered to make film available without charge to theatres giving the entire proceeds to flood relief agencies.

Many Benefit Shows

In line with the many benefit performances for flood relief, the Fabian theatres in Albany, N. Y., this week presented special shows with the admission price two cans of food. The Ritz in Athens, Ga., ran special performances, as did 30 Schine circuit theatres.

The Buffalo Variety Club was taking donations in every theatre there and expected to raise $50,000. The Adelphi in Chicago distributed over 10,000 tickets for a relief show, and the Cincinnati Variety Club and the WPA Federal Theatre unit there both made contributions. In Cleveland the Variety Club, Motion Picture Exhibitors Association and Associated Theatres all made large donations, and numerous other independent and circuit houses conducted benefits. In Dayton, the Victory turned over last Thursday's receipts to the Red Cross and in Denver more than $2,200 was raised.

Every theatre in the Detroit area was running a special trailer asking for contributions and it is hoped that $75,000 of Detroit's $400,000 quota will be raised in theatres. In Eldora, Ia., Leo F. Wolcott, president of Allied Theatres of Iowa and Nebraska, donated $100 of the theatres' Bank Night prize for relief, and in Elkton, Md., special matinees were being held at the Avalon. Hamilton, Ohio, theatres held midnight benefits and Hartford theatres are cooperating on a gala flood benefit at the State.

About $4,000 was raised this week in Indianapolis at the Indiana and in Kansas City Fox Midwest theatres held special performances as did the 25 houses of the Commonwealth circuit. Manager Raymond Hasselo of the March theatres in LeMars, Ia., held a special performance without admissions but accepting free will offerings. Special showings were being given in Lincoln, Neb., in all theatres.

The board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners in Los Angeles set February 11 as flood relief day. All theatres in Milwaukee will participate in citywide benefits Saturday in an effort to raise $45,000.

Spokane theatres were donating percentages of receipts to raise $20,000 and in Springfield, Ohio, more than $4,000 was turned over to the Red Cross by Chakeres Theatres, Inc., headed by Phil Chakeres. The Rex and Fountain theatres in Terre Haute announced benefits.

Howard Winner, Universal cameraman, rescues a marooned youngster at Louisville, removing her to safety in his rubber boat. The scene is one of the many similar ones filmed or participated in by newsreel cameramen in the flood area.

Australian Houses Study 20th-Fox Operating Deal

Hoyts and Union Theatres, comprising 125 theatres in Australia, will probably sign a new 20-year operating agreement when the current five-year contract between the two circuits expires January 1, 1938, it was reported this week with the return of Walter J. Hutchinson, Twentieth Century-Fox foreign head, to New York from a six-months trip around the world.

Mr. Hutchinson spent two months in Sydney conferring with Stuart Doyle, head of Union Theatres, and Charles Munroe, in charge of Hoyts for Twentieth Century-Fox. In accordance with the current agreement, Mr. Hutchinson gave formal notice for the cancellation of the present five-year pact and also submitted the new 20-year plan. Before the end of this week Mr. Hutchinson will submit the new plan to Sidney R. Kent, president of his organization, and word is expected also from Mr. Munroe on the latest development in Sydney.

"In the event Union Theatres does not accept the new arrangement," Mr. Hutchinson said, "we will break away and go on our own. Hoyts has about 100 of the 125 units involved in the pooling arrangement, which controls 80 per cent of the buying power in the six most important key centers."

While abroad, Mr. Hutchinson also closed a deal whereby Twentieth Century-Fox purchased an interest in the Amalgamated Circuit of 50 houses in New Zealand.

Nat Levine Quits His Position As Head of Republic

Nat Levine on Tuesday resigned as president of Republic Productions in Hollywood, revealing at the same time that he had disposed of his half interest in the company for a "substantial" sum. He would not reveal who had purchased his holdings, however. His resignation, it is said, comes as the result of differences of opinion with Herbert J. Yates on questions of future company policy. The move was made, Mr. Levine said, under "friendliest conditions."

Mr. Yates, when questioned as to whether he had purchased the former president's holdings in the company, denied making the purchase, although he admitted the sale was "almost completed." He did promise an official statement this week, indicating that final aspects of the negotiations have not been concluded. He said that the executive personnel at Republic will remain practically unchanged, but was silent concerning a successor to Mr. Levine.

The suit of Guarantee Liquidating Corporation against Republic, which is due for a hearing this week, is believed to have some bearing on the friction which developed between the company's executives. Mr. Levine will remain with the organization for the next two months in order to complete productions which have already been started, after which he will leave for a vacation of four months before he considers any future connections.

"GOOD EARTH" OPENS EAST AND WEST AFTER FOUR YEARS IN THE MAKING

Critics' Acclaim Is Posthumous Tribute to Thalberg; Microphones and Lights Bedeck Astor and Carthay Circle

by TERRY RAMSAYE

Premieres in New York's Broadway and in Los Angeles gave MGM's "The Good Earth" a sparkling send-off with microphones, lights and first-nighters. Above is the scene in front of the Astor theatre in New York on Tuesday. Below are shown the roped-off throngs near the Fox Carthay Circle in Los Angeles Friday night.

"The Good Earth," some four years in the making, and one of the most grandiose endeavors of the screen since the coming of sound, has come at last to the public with premieres West and East, at the Carthay Circle in Los Angeles, January 29th, and Tuesday night, four days later, at the Astor in New York's Broadway.

The acclaim of critics, aligned in approval like billiard counters on a wire, adds posthumously to the fame of the late Irving Thalberg, and to the glories of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Road Showing Indicated

The commercial history of this two-million-dollar address to the amusement market is yet to be written, with more than commonly, a responsibility for the marketeers. No general motion picture release date has been set, and may not be yet for a considerable time in view of the apparent probability of an extended road show exploitation, a course which seems to be definitely indicated by the character of the picture.

Both openings were decorated with the established ritual of microphones, search and flood lights, the parades of personalities in top hats and ermine, the mounted police, the mad-fan fringe, the cliques, clacques and clans, and as many genuine first-night customers as could come by accommodations.

Missing this time was that intense internal drama of Mr. Thalberg, pacing his Hollywood office between telephone reports from the scene of action, anxious as ever was a candidate on election night. The reports, had he been there to hear, would not have disappointed him.

In terms of the personality merchandise of the box office, it seems certain on the morning after that Paul Muni has continued his high status, and that Luise Rainer, already in the top brackets of fame, has added decidedly to her luster in a role which extended to her more opportunity for performance than for automatic glorification.

Man Against Nature

A certain special timeliness, a coincidence of fate, favors "The Good Earth's" premiere, in that it is a story very much of man against nature—just as the United States, emerging from the scourge of drought in the "dust bowl," now suffers the devastation of flood. Understanding for the theme of this romantic tragedy from the plains of China may be had from the experiences of America.

That may, perhaps, be an answer to a certain questioning in the mind of Red Kann, commenting in Wednesday's Motion Picture Daily: "The question is: Will audiences feel as deeply as they might over the hardships of two people whose pigment is yellow and whose problems seem and are continents apart from the troubles which bedevil this one? Nobody can foretell. . . ."

Over in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's review pages (see page 46) the reader will discover, on the other hand, the wholesale commitment of Gus McCarthy, head of the reviewing staff in Hollywood, who thinks that "The Good Earth" is to give to exhibitors "the most valuable piece of merchandise with which they have ever had to deal. . . ."

Out in Los Angeles, the critics, including of course the diligent Louella O. Parsons, of the Los Angeles Examiner, Eleanor Barnes of the Daily News, and the thoughtful Edwin Schallert of the august Los Angeles Times, gave the production everything they had.

In New York, the picture enjoyed a great press, with marked enthusiasm from Frank S. Nugent, of the Times, at one end of the scale, and Kate Cameron, of the mass-audience Daily News, at the other. Special interest attaches to the observation of Howard Barnes of the erudite Herald-Tribune, that

FILMING OF "BARRIER"

INFREQUENTLY in the annals of picture production has a film possessed such clear title to the term, international, as does "The Great Barrier," based on the novel by Allan Sullivan. It is a Gaumont-British picture, produced in Canada by technicians and talent recruited in London, Hollywood and, of course, in the country around Revelstoke, where exteriors were made with natives contributing to the many mass sequences a realism possibly not otherwise obtainable. Actual production finished, participants in the project have returned to their places of origin and editing of the picture for early spring release is in progress.

Stills from the picture reproduced on these pages give an impression of the scenic quality acquired as a result of the far-reaching operations undertaken in the interests of atmospheric authenticity. Above is shown a sweeping view of the Canadian Rockies. At left may be seen a historic incident vital to the story. On the right are reproduced three stills representative of as many story elements, at top the settlement that was called Moodyville, beneath it a conflict occurring in a street of the village and, at bottom, a suggestion of the forest fire which supplies one of the dramatic highlights of the story.

Mr. Sullivan's widely read novel deals with the building of the Canadian Pacific railroad and most of the material in it is historically authentic. As is well known, the construction of the road was accomplished in defiance of obstacles, both natural and man-made, which threatened again and again to compel abandonment of the project. Into the factual fabric of this record has been woven a romantic story in which Richard Arlen, Lilli Palmer, Barry Mackay, Antoinette Cellier and J. Farrell MacDonald play principal roles.

Mr. Arlen is cast as John Hickey and Mr. Mackay as Steve Carson, laborers in the hire of Major Hell's Bells Rogers, played by Mr. MacDonald, who faces the problem of finding a pass over the Canadian Rockies through which his railroad can be built. British investors and the provincial government, originally favorable to the transportation project, have declined to advance necessary funds and work crews have begun to make riotous demand for wages overdue. Hickey and Carson respond to the Major's call for volunteers to make up a party which will search for the pass. Rioting continues in Moodyville, the rough outpost set up by railroad workers, and perils beset the exploration party. How they come at last to what was to become known as Eagle's Pass and how Hickey deals with the romantic problem which has developed meanwhile is told in terms of vigorous action.

Direction of the picture was assigned to Milton Rosmer, veteran British director of such pictures as "Mr. Hobo," "The Phantom Light," "Maria Martin" and "Everything Is Thunder." The American Ralph Spence wrote the screen play in collaboration with Michael Barringer and Ian Dalrymple.

Londoners who have been privileged to view the footage obtained at the manifestly extraordinary expense involved in transporting players and staff from England and the United States to Canada are expressing the opinion that it amply justifies the outlay. The film is being cited as outstanding in its fidelity to locale and historical record. It is being heralded, too, as a welcome and overdue departure from the recently overindulged practice of making exteriors indoors, sticklers for realism arguing that it proves there is no satisfactory substitute for the genuine and that the camera still is mightier than subterfuge.

There is agreement, too, that the market is ripe for rugged, thematically substantial outdoor drama, a point seemingly underscored by current reports here of the reception being accorded major outdoor productions in America. Time will tell.

'GOOD EARTH' OPENS TO ACCLAIM

he feels that the picture has met certain hurdles "more adroitly . . . than did the Theatre Guild of some years ago. . . ."

Broadcast to China

"The Good Earth" premiere on Broadway was literally heard 'round the world, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's exploiteers "hooking-up" Tuesday evening's lobby trumpeteering from the Astor to Shanghai, by radio, through Station WHN in New York, thence by short-wave, to WXLB, in China. They said it was the first international motion picture broadcast of its kind. Henry E. Gellerman, American representative of the China Press, spoke both in English and Chinese in introducing to Shanghai the ermined and stiff-bosomed celebrities arriving for the premiere.

Jay C. Flippen, conductor of amateur nights for Loew's theatres, and Louis K. Sidney, of Loew's, with Radie Harris, New York radio commentator, corralled in the lobby those celebrities whose names are best known to the public, for a word into WHN's microphones.

Passing the arc-lights could be seen Barney Balaban, Stephen Pallos, Fanny Hurst, Colvin Brown, Christopher Morley, W. Ward Marsh, Robert Nathan, Marcia Davenport and Marc Connelly, Katharine Brush, Dr. Cyrus Peake, Joseph Calleia, Ernest Toller, Phillip Jaffe, Saul Rogers, Leon Netter, Clifton Webb and Morris Gest, Harry Hirschfield, Dave Chatkin, Al Lichtman, William F. Rodgers, William Melniker, Harry Warner, Louis S. Levy, J. Robert Rubin, Louis Sobol—and a lot of other Chinamen, who, important or otherwise, lent atmosphere to the prominently-displayed box seats and front-balcony pews.

At Carthay Circle Opening

A good audience smiled generously, too, on the Carthay Circle opening, where those of fame who paraded through the Oriental front included Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, Sidney Franklin, the director of the film; Louis B. Mayer, the producer, and His Excellency Chao-Chin Huang, Chinese Consul General; P. G. Wodehouse, Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Rupert Hughes, Jeannette MacDonald, Gene Raymond, Edward Arnold, Jim Tully and Ginger Rogers, Charles Boyer, Governor Frank Merriam of California, Anita Loos, May Robson, Edward G. Robinson, Allan Jones, Frank Lloyd, Jesse Lasky, Ernst Lubitsch and Fay Bainter, Charles Ruggles, Gail Patrick, Basil Rathbone, et al.

Threats of intermittent showers failed to dampen the curiosity of some 10,000 fans who stormed the Hollywood forecourt pageantry from grandstands. An entire Chinese village had been erected as a background out front, with fireworks, dragons and fire displays adding Oriental pyrotechnics to the scene.

"The Good Earth" was presented to the premiere audiences on both coasts with considerable emphasis on the fact that production began in 1933, when the late Irving Thalberg sent to China from Metro's studio in Culver City a whole production crew for a year's filming. Several shiploads of rural Oriental properties, representing an entire village, subsequently were brought from China to Hollywood, where a 500-acre tract at the studio was converted into a replica of the Chinese countryside. Final filming was completed only two weeks ago—"the longest production effort in the history of the screen," according to Metro, which also made the previous record-holder, from the standpoint of time, with "Ben-Hur."

Unique was the exploitation arrangement made in Hollywood by Metro in the course of which first-hand reviews were written by Jim Tully, P. G. Wodehouse, Rupert Hughes, and a half dozen other noted authors, whose comments later were flashed 'round the country on press wires.

The first premiere, in Hollywood, was broadcast over a national radio hookup, through the Mutual System, and, according to the producers, "it is believed to have attracted the largest countryside following on record for a California premiere." Some 70 stations, in addition to the Mutual System, re-broadcast the event within 48 hours.

The openings also grossed the heaviest newspaper coverage in many a year. More than 100 newspapers alone received the wired reviews of Tully, Wodehouse and Rupert Hughes. This was in addition to the usual individual service of the local correspondents, wire services and national syndicates.

"The Good Earth" was not finished until after Mr. Thalberg's death. Somewhere toward the end of the job Associate Producer Albert Lewin picked up where death had interrupted. Mr. Lewin until then had been laboring quietly on the Metro lot. "Good Earth" was his first really big opportunity.

Pearl Cydenstricker (Mrs. Richard J. Walsh) Buck, West Virginia born, 45 years ago, reached China in the early 1920's, and went to teaching at China's University of Nanking, in 1921. She continued there until 1931, also teaching at Southeastern University, Nanking, from 1925 to 1927, and at Chung Yang University from 1928 to 1930. She first wrote of her impressions of China and the Chinese in 1929, in "East Wind, West Wind," following, in 1931, with "The Young Revolutionist," and, in the same year, with "The Good Earth," which won the Pulitzer Prize as the best novel of the year, and since has sold continuously in the "best seller" class.

"The Good Earth" has been published in English, Italian, Yiddish, Swedish, French, Norwegian, German, Chinese, Spanish, Dutch, Danish, Hungarian, Czechoslovakian, etc., etc.

LOEW'S REVEALS SCHENCK'S SALARY

Loew's, Inc., in New York, filed a current report with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington this week disclosing terms of a personal service contract and stock option agreement made with Nicholas M. Schenck, president, on December 19, 1936, according to the Wall Street Journal.

Under the terms of the personal service contract, Mr. Schenck continues in the employ of Loew's for the period ending December 31, 1941, with a weekly compensation of $2,500. He also receives 2½ per cent of the combined annual net profits of the company and its subsidiaries after federal taxes and dividends equal to $2 per share on the common stock and the dividends on the preferred stock. The optional agreement covers 48,492 shares of common stock and is exercisable at $40 per share over the five-year period ending December 31, 1941.

'Ad' Film Concern Practices Changed, Charge Dropped

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Charging unfair methods of competition in the leasing and renting of advertising motion pictures, the Federal Trade Commission on Monday issued a formal complaint charging violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission act against Royal Revues, Inc., West Coast Discount Corporation, Ltd., and their officers, L. H. and W. C. Hyde, trading as Royal Film Studios, Hollywood.

Later in the week, however, the Commission cancelled its complaint with the receipt of a stipulation in which the respondents agreed to discontinue the practices complained of.

In a long list of charges, the commission alleges that the respondents, through salesmen, solicit theatre operators to exhibit the respondents' films and to solicit business men for the purpose of inducing them to purchase the right to advertise their names and the nature of their business on the screen when the film is shown.

To persuade prospective advertisers to sign contracts, to which promissory notes are attached, the respondents are alleged to falsely represent, in many instances, that the films furnished will be equal in quality to and the same length as the sample shown by the salesmen; that no other advertiser in the same line of business will be permitted to advertise in connection with the showing of such films, and that other advertisers already have contracted for use of the films.

Other representations allegedly made are that the film and advertising matter will be exhibited daily or weekly; that the prospective advertiser can cancel his contract after two months, and that the price paid to the respondents covers the entire cost of the advertiser. These assertions, the complaint charges, are false in that the films are not exhibited in accordance with the contract; that the respondents refuse to cancel the contract after a two-month period, and that the advertiser is compelled to pay to the operator of the theatre a sum additional to that paid the respondents.

The complaint charges that by reason of the allegedly fraudulent representations made to obtain signatures to the purported contracts, many of them are not binding, and signers have legal defenses which will defeat any attempts to enforce such contracts.

According to the complaint, the respondents, L. H. and W. C. Hyde, in order to deter advertisers from setting up such defenses, and to avoid the consequences of the practices of their agents, organized West Coast Discount Corporation, Ltd., and pretended they had sold the promissory notes to such corporation, which, they claim, was an innocent purchaser for value.

West Coast Discount Corporation, the complaint alleges, is not an innocent purchaser of such notes, but acts under the pretense that it is, has full knowledge of the circumstances surrounding the execution of the notes, and is party to the scheme to coerce and harass the signers and to compel them to pay according to the contract.

93 STORIES ARE BOUGHT IN JANUARY SETTING RECORD FOR EIGHT MONTHS

MGM Leads with 20 Purchases of Material; Radio Follows with 11, and Warner Bros. and Columbia Buy 10 Each

Record Price for Stage Play Reported Paid by Columbia for the Kaufman-Hart "You Can't Take It with You"

Story purchases by Hollywood producers in January broke an eight-months' record when 24 companies bought 93 vehicles from the fictional, biographical and dramatic fields for feature use on the screen.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which had been down the list of purchasers for several months, was in the vanguard for January, with 20 acquisitions, Radio followed with a total of 11, and Warners and Columbia each acquired 10.

The other studios, with their purchases, were: Universal, three originals, three books and one play; Twentieth Century-Fox, four originals, one book and one play; Monogram, one original, three plays; Grand National, one original, two books; Paramount three originals; Conn Studios, three originals; Samuel Goldwyn, two originals; Sterling Pictures, one original and one book; National and Provincial, one original; David Loew, one original; Hal Roach, one novel; Republic, one book; Selznick-International, one original; Walter Wanger, one original; Hispano Films, one original; Hirliman, one original; Gaumont British, one original, and Gordon-Goetz, one play.

$200,000 Purchase Reported

Prominent among the purchases in January was Columbia's acquisition of the current Broadway legitimate comedy, "You Can't Take It With You," written by George Kaufman and Moss Hart, for a sum reported to have been in the neighborhood of $200,000. This is a record price paid by a motion picture producing company for a stage play, Samuel Goldwyn having held the previous record by paying $165,000 for Sidney Kingsley's "Dead End," now in its second year on Broadway.

Original stories continued to prove the most fruitful source of screen material, however, when some 55 were distributed among the producers. The legitimate theatre, on the other hand, contributed 15 vehicles during January as compared to three the month before and nine in November.

Details of Purchases

A complete list, by titles, of the story purchases made by the companies in the month of January, with all available production credits, follows:

Thousand Dollar Bill, A, magazine story, published by Cosmopolitan, by Manuel Komroff, acquired by Grand National.

Contest Is Ended Over Disposal of Orpheum Circuit

After weeks of threats to contest the offer, an Orpheum Circuit creditors' meeting on Tuesday in New York voted to accept RKO's offer of $700,000 cash and subordination of its own claims for clear title to the Orpheum assets which are now in the possession of Stadium Theatres Corporation, a wholly owned RKO subsidiary, through which the parent company's bid is made.

In so doing, the meeting rejected an offer of $2,000,000 cash for the same assets, which was presented Tuesday to Federal Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn and the Orpheum creditors for the first time by a committee of preferred stockholders of Opheum. The assets in question recently were appraised at $2,772,714 and include such properties as Champaign (Ill.) Orpheum, Chicago Orpheum, Des Moines Consolidated Theatres, St. Paul Theatres Company, Junior Orpheum, Los Angeles; Junior Orpheum, San Francisco; Kansas City Junior Orpheum, Orpheum Circuit Booking Corporation, RKO Western Vaudeville and other companies.

Referee Ehrhorn took the creditors' recommendation under advisement and reserved decision, as well, on motions by the preferred stockholders' committee to direct Marcus Heiman, Orpheum trustee in bankruptcy, to file a petition for reorganization of Orpheum under Section 77-B as a subsidiary of RKO's; to have Orpheum intervene in the RKO reorganization proceedings, and to file objections to the RKO reorganization plan on the grounds that it discriminates against Orpheum while favoring other RKO subsidiaries.

RKO, through Stadium, has total claims of $3,450,695 against Orpheum, or approximately 60 per cent of the total outstanding. The company's bid for the Orpheum assets would, in effect, cancel these claims in addition to providing $700,000 cash, which would be available as a dividend to the holders of the remaining claims against Orpheum, which amount to $2,128,357. Of the latter claims, Phillip Snyder of Buffalo, trustee for the Omaha Orpheum bondholders, represents $1,110,000, or more than 50 per cent of the claims exclusive of RKO's. Snyder's claims were voted in favor of acceptance of the RKO offer and against the preferred stockholders' offer yesterday, while neither RKO nor Stadium voted on either offer.

The Orpheum preferred stockholders' bid, presented by Isidor J. Kresel, attorney for the committee, was made through Hudson County Warehouses, Inc., by John Sherman, treasurer. Kresel identified the bidder merely as "a New Jersey company with as much capital as Stadium has." The preferred stockholders' committee consists of Martin Beck, Harry Borns, Asher Levy, Julian Livingston and Alex Young, Jr., and claims to represent 16,210 shares of the 62,551 preferred shares of Orpheum. Under RKO's offer for the Orpheum assets, creditors would receive about 30 cents on the dollar for their claims and, consequently, there would be nothing available for stockholders.

COLUMBIA IS SIXTH TO ACCEPT MPTOA'S TRADE PRACTICE PLAN

Agrees to Eliminate Separate Score Charge, Favors Local Boards, 10 Per Cent Cancellation on Restricted Basis

Anti - Trust Suits Pending in Four Courts; Momand Appeal Is Heard in $4,000,000 Conspiracy Charges

Columbia, the sixth large company to respond to the program of trade practice reform sponsored by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, will eliminate the separate score charge, cooperate in establishment of local conciliation boards, grant a ten per cent cancellation privilege on a restricted basis and aid in settling other trade problems, according to a letter sent this week by Abe Montague, general sales manager, to Edward Kuykendall, president of the exhibitor organization.

In the field of the courts, suits based on allegations of violation of the anti-trust laws were pending in four courts, with little possibility of immediate decisions in any of them. Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, having set May 12th, 13th and 14th as the dates for the annual convention in Milwaukee, urged members to defer negotiation of 1937-38 contracts until that time. A bulletin asked independent exhibitors to contact their Congressmen to enlist their support for the Neely-Pettengill bill and the Allied approved copyright legislation. The bulletin also requested members to study the possibility of legislation in their states to divorce distribution and exhibition.

With the publication of Columbia's stand on the M.P.T.O.A. program, Warner Brothers, Paramount and the national independent distributors are the only companies which have not yet recognized the proposals. The Paramount answer is being prepared by Austin C. Keough and will be released soon it was understood.

Columbia Policy

The Columbia acceptance follows:

"(1) Columbia is willing to grant a cancellation of 10% of the number of pictures offered if the exhibitor contracts for all pictures offered at one time, provided this cancellation is restricted to pictures in the lowest price allocation group. The request for cancellation by the exhibitor must be given in writing to the local branch office of the distributor within ten days after mailing of notice of availability by the distributor to exhibitor. We feel that this should be a very satisfactory arrangement because exhibitors who desire to buy selective contracts at the time of the negotiations take their elimination at that time, and are not entitled to any further elimination.

"(2) We are in favor of establishing local conciliation boards, if proper machinery can be set up so that these boards will function smoothly and will not require too much of the time of the local branch executives. We feel that a great deal more time must be spent at joint meetings in order to arrange for the proper conduct of these boards. The writer will be very glad to meet your representatives to discuss this thought further.

"(3) Clearance is of its own necessity a part of the sale between the individual exhibitor and distributor, and therefore in our opinion must be left that way. We have no way of bringing about uniform clearance that would be fair to all parties and would come within the ruling of the Federal courts.

ILLINOIS TO ADD COURSE ON FILMS

Motion pictures as an aesthetic influence received new official recognition in an announcement that the University of Illinois plans to give films a place beside literature and drama on its curriculum.

In Florida the Duval County Board of Public Instruction is planning to adopt motion pictures as an aid to instruction in the larger schools in its system.

"(4) We are definitely opposed to overbuying by an exhibitor for the purpose of restraining any other exhibitor from acquiring a sufficient amount of product to operate his theatre. Only the exhibitor is in possession of the facts regarding his buy and whether or not he has over-bought is difficult for the distributor to determine. We do not consider an exhibitor's buying a sufficient number of pictures for double-bill houses an 'over-bought' condition. As distributors, we believe the policy of operation of a theatre should be left to the operator of that theatre—and if double-bills are an evil, we feel sure it will eventually correct itself.

"(5) We, too, like you and your organization, would prefer to see an end to all unfair competition between exhibitors. It is our opinion however, that all such unfair competition, wherever it exists, can only be eliminated by closer co-operative action on the part of all exhibitors concerned.

"(6) It has never been our intention to license pictures to a non-theatrical account that is in direct competition with a motion picture theatre using Columbia product.

Short Contract Approved

"(7) In view of various and different decisions, we believe it inadvisable for Columbia to approve of the use of a uniform contract. We are, however, in favor of developing a practical shorter form contract which will thoroughly cover the transaction between exhibitor and distributor. We question, however, the advisability of an exhibitor signing one form of contract which refers to another and longer form of contract. We believe the contract in itself should set forth the complete transaction without reference to any other contract or agreement.

"(8) We at this time are willing to meet your request regarding the elimination of score charges, particularly as it applies to percentage contracts. We believe that score charges are a part of film rental. Therefore, when satisfactory percentage terms are agreed upon, we feel that the score charge can be eliminated. On flat buying contracts we are agreeable to discontinue the practice of separating the terms between film rental and score charge and in the future have one space for the insertion of complete 'film rental terms.'

"(9) We are willing to treat with the individual situation as to preferred playing time on percentage pictures. It is not our intention to be unfair or unreasonable. However, inasmuch as 'preferred playing time' is a definite part of 'film rental,' we must expect to receive our fair share of an exhibitor's preferred time in order to protect our film rental for important percentage pictures.

"(10) It has never been the intention or the practice of this company to 'force' shorts with features, as the expression is commonly used by exhibitors. Because of economic operation, it is absolutely necessary to license short subjects at the same time that features are licensed. The number of short subjects licensed by an exhibitor becomes part of the individual sale, and we believe that where we do license features we should have an equal opportunity to license the account a reasonable number of short subjects proportionate to the number of features we supply as against the exhibitor's total feature requirements.

"This was my suggestion at the time of the N.R.A. discussions at Washington and I still believe it the most equitable manner of handling the matter of short subject sales."

Court Actions Pending

Four suits involving anti-trust laws are pending.

The action brought by George Fuller against large distributors in New Orleans charging conspiracy is expected to get under way next week, with distributor executives on the stand as witnesses. Since the suit was filed the attention of the Federal court has been occupied with preliminaries and verbal tilts between the opposing attorneys.

The appeal of A. B. Momand, operator of a theatre in Shawnee, Okla., in a $4,000,000 conspiracy suit against 19 motion picture producers and distributors was heard last week in the United States circuit court of appeals in Oklahoma City last week and decision was reserved. The appeal was from a Federal court ruling sustaining a motion of the defendants that Mr. Momand's petition be made more definite.

A second extension of one week of the time for filing of defendant's answers to the Government action brought against Karl Hoblitzelle, the Texas Interstate circuit and eight major distributors involving first run contracts was granted this week by the Federal district court at Dallas. The answers are now due February 8th.

A second anti-trust suit in Dallas, brought by Rubin Frels against the Jefferson Amusement Company and major distributors is scheduled to come to trial February 17th in the Dallas Federal court. The suit is for triple damages approximating $500,000.

RKO and Midwest End Pool Discussions

RKO's proposed pooling arrangement with Fox Midwest in Kansas City have been terminated and RKO has completed negotiations whereby it will combine operations with Paramount in that city. The Orpheum, therefore, will reopen as a continued run house with the Main street, the other RKO theatre, to play "A" product single feature. The Newman, Paramount unit, will book double features.

MPTOA, ALLIED SET CONVENTIONS; FIVE STATE ORGANIZATIONS ELECT

MPTOA Meets in Miami March 16th to 18th, Allied States in Milwaukee May 12th to 14th; Territorial Units Active

Leaders of the two national exhibitor organizations, Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, during the next few weeks will employ strong showmanship methods to attract the attention of exhibtors generally to their annual conventions. Edward L. Kuykendall, M. P. T. O. A. president, this week announced the 17th annual meeting for March 16th to 18th, at the Miami Biltmore hotel, in Miami, and the Abram Myers-Nathan Yamins Allied States association set May 12th to 14th and the Hotel Pfister, in Milwaukee, as the date and place for their yearly conference.

Both Allied and the MPTOA promise an abundance of heated discussion on showmanship problems and the method and manner of conducting a motion picture theatre. Both, too, will seek to induce large delegations with the usual social and festive activities—banquets, receptions and the like.

Elections, meetings and conventions this week likewise engaged the attention of organized exhibition in California, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Maryland, Missouri, New England, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Southern California

The Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, meeting in Los Angeles, elected Jack Berman president; Irving Carlin, vice-president and executive chairman; C. A. Ferry, vice-president and treasurer, and Harry Vinnicof, third vice-president. The officers and H. W. Bruen, Jay Sutton, Lou Bard and E. S. Calve comprise the new directorate.

Connecticut

Connecticut's Allied States affiliate met at New Haven to hear a report by Dr. J. B. Fishman on the parent Allied's recent annual board meeting at Baltimore, where the organization reelected Nathan Yamins president and voted to redouble its national fight on block booking.

District of Columbia

Allied Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia, meeting at Washington's Hamilton Hotel, elected C. H. Olive president; A. Lichtman, vice-president; Henry Hiser, treasurer; Bill Hoyle, secretary, and the following directors: B. Tendler, A. Lichtman and W. E. S. Wilcox.

Maryland

Maryland's Motion Picture Theatre Owners appointed a nominating committee, as follows: Charles Nolte, chairman; Eugene B. McCurdy, Samuel Back, Meyer Leventhal and Oscar Coblentz.

Kansas City

The Independent Theatre Owners of Kansas City, in Missouri, reelected all officers, including: Emanuel Rolsky, president; E. S. Young, vice-president; Mrs. Rosa Baier, second vice-president; Ed Hartman, secretary, and Charles Potter, treasurer.

CIRCUIT EXHIBITING HOME GROWN FILMS

L. J. Finske, district manager for J. H. Cooper Enterprises, Inc., in Colorado has installed 16mm. projectors in theatres in Greeley, Grand Junction, Pueblo and Colorado Springs for showing films taken by local amateur motion picture enthusiasts. The pictures for the most part are of local sport events, festivals and fairs.

New England

Nathan Yamins, now serving his second term as president of the national Allied States Association, last week was also unanimously reelected president of the Independent Exhibitors, Inc., Allied's affiliate in New England, at the annual convention in Boston. Some 50 delegates were in attendance at the Hotel Bradford.

Max Levenson was elected first vice-president, Francis Lydon, second vice-president; Adolph Bendsley, secretary, and Harold Stoneman treasurer. The executive committee will be composed of Edward Ansin, Elias M. Loew, Charles Hodgdon, Irving Isaacs, Walter Littlefield, William McLaughlin, Daniel Murphy, Francis Perry, Morris Pouzzner, George Ramsdell, Richard Rubin, Philip Smith and William Viano.

A local legislative committee includes Ansin, Levenson, Littlefield, Lydon and Business Manager Arthur K. Howard who was chosen unanimously to serve another year. Members voted to support legislation for the divorcement of producing and exhibition and to pledge a sum equal to one year's dues to be assessed one-eighth quarterly for two years. Messrs. Lydon, Ramsdell, Jack Findley and Howard were named as a local "defense" committee.

Mr. Yamins presented Al Steffes, who addressed the closed session. Mr. Steffes outlined national defense plans, after which the annual report by Mr. Howard was accepted.

Mr. Yamins left immediately after the Boston meeting for a vacation at Hollywood, Florida.

Western Pennsylvania

Western Pennsylvania's Motion Picture Theatre Owners on February 9th will hold a social gathering for members and friends at Pittsburgh's William Penn Hotel. Frank Panoplos is chairman.

Virginia

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia, headed by Morton Thalheimer, will meet in mid-winter session, at Richmond, on February 11th. Both Allied and the M.P.T.O.A. are invited, and acceptances have been received from Mr. Kuykendall, M.P.T.O.A. president, and Mr. Myers, chairman of Allied's board. Mr. Kuykendall was assigned the subject of: "The Problem of One Is the Problem of All."

Lieutenant-Governor James Hubert Price, who is thus far the only candidate for the Virginia Democratic gubernatorial nomination this year, and Colonel John Fulmer Bright, mayor of Richmond, have agreed to deliver addresses of welcome. Colonel Robert T. Barton, Jr., of Richmond, counsel for the Virginia M.P.T.O., will also speak, on "Social Security and the Theatres."

Nathan Yamins, Head of National Allied States, Is Reelected as President of New England Affiliate

The business session will conclude with the annual election of officers, and the annual banquet will follow.

Exhibits at the Virginia convention have been arranged for by Nationwide Equipment, Globe Ticket, Flowers School Equipment, American Seating, Frick Company, International Seating, National Theatre Supply, RCA Manufacturing Company, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, West Disinfecting, J. F. Dusman Company, Southern Desk, the Hoover Company, Brandt Automatic Ticket Sales, Heywood-Wakefield, O'Hare's Independent Theatre Supply, Thalheimer Brothers Theatre Equipment, General Outdoor Advertising, W. Bryan Branch Company, Theatre Art Display, Talley Neon Sign, Earnest Brothers and Binswanger & Company.

Wisconsin

Allied's state affiliate in Wisconsin will meet on May 12th to 14th at Milwaukee in connection with the annual convention of the national organization.

Pete Wood, of Columbus, is chairman of the national Allied convention committee, and Ray A. Tesch, of Milwaukee, will have charge of local arrangements.

MPTOA Plans

Preliminary plans for the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in Miami, March 16th to 18th, have been completed in cooperation with Mitchell Wolfson, of Wometco Theatres, Miami, who has been appointed general chairman of the Convention arrangements committees. Jack Frost, of the S. A. Lynch Theatres, in Miami, will act as chairman of the reception committee.

In addition to the three days of conferences and business sessions, the local theatre owners are preparing a program of receptions, luncheons, dinner dancing and beach parties culminating in the annual banquet. A feature of the banquet program will be a water carnival of exhibition diving, swimming, acrobatics and aquatic show in the Miami Biltmore outdoor pool. Immediately following the convention, on March 19th there will be a golf tournament. Also, there will be arranged a day at the Roney-Plaza Cabana Club at Miami Beach for bathing, a day at the Key-Largo Anglers Club for deep sea fishing, or a day at Tropical Park Race Track.

Arrangements have been made for the erection of display booths (80 to 120 square feet) in the convention hall for the use of manufacturers and dealers in theatre equipment, supplies and accessories.

Adolph Zukor has accepted an invitation to be a guest at the convention. This is in connection with the celebration of his 25th anniversary.

Testimonial for O'Shea

A testimonial dinner has been arranged by theatre owners in Buffalo to honor E. K. "Ted" O'Shea, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer branch manager there, who is celebrating his 20th year with the company. The dinner will be held at the Hotel Statler on February 15th.

95,379 THEATRES IN WORLD

The United States Government this week reported the existence of 95,379 motion picture theatres throughout the world, an increase of approximately 8,150 over 1935, located as follows: Europe, 66,876; United States, 16,258; Far East, 5,244; Central and Latin America, 5,292; Canada, 1,033; Africa and Near East, 676.

Compiled by Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture section of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, the report, made annually, shows the tremendous strides being made in exhibition everywhere, especially in Russia.

The 95,379 theatres throughout the world, geographically and by countries, at the end of 1936 compare with the four previous years as follows:

55,563 HOUSES ARE WIRED

Europe leads all countries in the world in advancing the position of sound motion pictures, sound theatres there increasing from 27,956 in 1934 to 29,207 at the end of 1936, when total wired theatres everywhere approximated 55,563, leaving some 39,816, both open and closed, still to be wired. Estimates of the increase in wired theatres in the United States place the total at 880. All of the 1,033 theatres in Canada were reported wired for sound as of January 1, 1937.

The 55,563 sound theatres throughout the world, geographically and by countries, at the end of 1936 compare with the four previous years as follows:

60 OWNERS, POLICE IN TRUCE ON GAMES

Philadelphia Meetings Leave Chance Devices in Theatres 4 Weeks Pending Test Case

Conferences in Philadelphia this week among Mayor S. Davis Wilson and 60 exhibitors, representing 150 theatres, resulted in a four week truce during which the managers will be allowed to conduct chance games without molestation by the police. A test case will be initiated to obtain a court ruling on the legality of the games under Pennsylvania laws.

The Philadelphia situation marks the first time the question of the legality of chance games has arisen in Pennsylvania, but court actions and rulings, pro and con, on Bank Night and other giveaways continue in reports from other sections of the country. Bills to outlaw the games are being considered by state legislatures in Iowa, Massachusetts and Oklahoma. In Kansas the supreme court refused to rehear a Bank Night case in which the game was held a lottery. The attorney general of Mississippi ruled that chance games are lotteries and the city attorney of Omaha ruled that they are not.

Claude Ezell, connected with Affiliated Enterprises, distributors of Bank Night, told the press in Miami, Fla., that approximately 99 percent of the theatres in the United States are now using giveaways in some form or other. Territories where Bank Night is being played show a business improvement of about 79 per cent, he said.

The truce agreed upon by Mayor Wilson and the Philadelphia exhibitors followed a raid by police on 75 theatres in the city which forced the abandonment of the game. The United Motion Picture Theatre Owners immediately protested to the mayor and the grace period was agreed upon. During the period the exhibitors and the district attorney will start a test case, the mayor having said that it was a matter for the courts to decide.

Circuit Attorney Hits Games

A surprise development at the meeting was the appearance of Morris Wolf, attorney for the Stanley-Warner company, who strongly objected to the games and said that they detracted from the dignity of the theatre business and were strictly gambling.

The mayor said that Bank Night, Bingo and similar premium games will be permitted in motion picture theatres, at least until the courts can decide their legal status, and providing no outside promoters or individuals profit. He warned that he will close any place that operates the games as lotteries. The customer must get full value for his admission fee, he said.

"Pending a decision of the court," he told the conference, "I don't consider this game gambling in cases where a church or fraternal organization uses it to raise money, or when it is used to award a premium over and above the full return of value to the person playing. However, I will not tolerate any cases where the game is used on a racketeering basis. Two men came into my office a week ago and offered my secretary $1,000 for a permit to set up a room in the central part of the city to use exclusively for the playing of Bingo. I thought that if any game could pay that, the profit must be tremendous and I started to make an investigation."

The Kansas supreme court denial of a rehearing was rendered in the appeal by the Fox Kansas Theatre Corporation and Affiliated Enterprises. In December the court held that Bank Night constituted a lottery under the definition of the state's anti-lottery statute. The case was brought by Attorney General Clarence V. Beck against Fox theatres in connection with the specific use of the promotion by a theatre in Fort Scott.

Mr. Beck is instructing county attorneys of the state to stop Bank Night. Approximately 100 theatres in the state will be affected it is estimated by R. W. McEwan, Bank Night distributor.

A bill to outlaw all chance games in theatres or other business places is to be introduced in the Iowa legislature by Thomas I. Kephart, Republican and William Treimer, Democrat. The measure, said to have the approval of most of the members of the House, would "render illegal the operation of all lottery plans, reception of gifts through such plans, use of buildings or erections for such plans and to provide a penalty thereto."

A similar bill for legislation to prohibit the "allotment to seat holders of money or property of value in connection with exhibition of films" has been filed in the Massachusetts legislature by Charles Hiller. It would make all giveaway plans illegal.

Oklahoma Ban Sought

The theatre chance games in Oklahoma would be outlawed under terms of a bill introduced in the House of Representatives in that state by Charles P. Jones of Carter County. The measure says, "This act shall specifically apply to theatres operating bank nights," and provides that convictions for violations shall be classed as felonies. Penalties or fines of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000 and prison terms of one to ten years are provided.

Attorney General G. L. Rice of Mississippi has issued an opinion describing Bank Night at Mississippi theatres as lotteries and in violation of the law. The opinion was rendered at the request of Representative John Holloman of Columbus. In Omaha, Neb., City Attorney Seymour Smith has handed down a ruling that Bank Night is legal as it is conducted in that city, the purchase of a ticket not being required for registration. Police and five officials have ordered that theatre aisles must be kept clear.

Plea to Halt Union Agreement Denied

Justice Lyndon in the New York supreme court Monday denied the plea of the Harris circuit of 12 houses for an injunction restraining the Independent Theatre Owners Association from concluding its agreement with Local 306, Operators' Union, and restraining the Allied Union from proceeding with the proposed merger with Local 306 by which the latter is to absorb the membership of the Allied Union.

It was indicated early this week that only a few minor details stand in the way of the conclusion of the final agreement which will clarify the union situation in New York theatres, through a 10-year contract between Local 306 and the ITOA.

December Receipts Bring Totals for 1936 to New High

With December receipts setting a new high record at 2,194,584.90, collections from the admission tax for the calendar year 1936 amounted to $18,457,482.07, an increase of more than 2,500,000 over the 1935 total of $16,406,021.90.

As announced January 30 by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the December collections represented a gain of nearly $590,000 over the November total of $1,605,673.93 and were some $439,000 above the December, 1935, figure of $1,756,059.24.

The figures indicated a general improvement throughout the country, which, however, was most marked on Broadway, collections in the third New York district being nearly double those of November, $781,640.99, against $394,756.24. Box office admissions, which more than doubled, accounted for all but a few thousand dollars of these totals, $703,180.47 in December, against $346,631.60 the preceding month.

Monthly receipts were:

January, $1,459,694.35; February, $1,404,836.49; March, $1,255,393.63; April, $1,266,425.38; May, $1,318,765.57; June, $1,532,189.11; July, $1,568,487.42; August, $1,384,107.74; September, $1,670,044.71; October, $1,797,278.84; November, $1,605,673.93; December, $2,194,584.90.

Brill Addresses Board of Review

The National Board of Review was to hold its 13th annual conference at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York from Thursday to Saturday under the general topic, "Looking Back and Forward at the Motion Picture. The 22nd annual luncheon will conclude the conference on Saturday.

On Thursday the delegates were to attend a screening at the Belmont Theatre and hear an address by Dr. A. A. Brill, psychiatrist. On Thursday afternoon addresses on "Old Days in Film Production," "The Coming of Sound," "Modern Scouting for Film Talent," "The Past and Present Film Public" and "The Growth of the Newsreel" were to be heard.

On Thursday evening Terry Ramsaye was to speak on "The Drama of Adolph Zukor" before the delegates in the School of Education auditorium of New York University.

Friday's sessions were to include discussions on representative films in art, literature, religion, science and a screening of related pictures. Discussions were also scheduled by representatives of 4-Star Clubs and Young Reviews' groups. Another screening was scheduled for Friday evening.

The luncheon on Saturday was to conclude the program.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Bill Lengel, the movie script hunter-upper, confides to Johnny Chapman the experience he had when he tried to get a big Hollywood producer to read a script in which he was particularly interested. It took persuasion, and more persuasion, and then some, but, finally, the big film mogul gave in. "All right, all right, I'll read it!" yelled the producer. "But, before I do, I can tell you right now, it's lousy!"

"In England," yawns Noel Coward, of stage and films, "we generally take the position that our private lives are our own concern."

Noel, evidently, has never heard about the Archbishop of Canterbury and Ex-King Edward.

P. S.: If Mrs. Simpson accepts Universal's offer of a movie contract, they'll be able to bill her as the Baltimore Belle who broke all records at the Palace—where she played for 11 consecutive weeks.

The French government is desperate to whet the touring appetites of blase Americans who feel that there's nothing left to interest them in Paris. The Tourist Bureau of France, in charge of Hall Kane Clements in New York, rushes breathlessly to our city desk with the startling information that the ancient sewers of Paris are a new underground "thrill for tourists." The motion picture may have had something to do with it.

"Interwoven for centuries with the history of Paris in its most desperate hours," flashes the French Tourist Bureau, "and immortalized to the world through Victor Hugo's 'Les Miserables' (including several motion picture versions), the 700 miles of sewers under Paris are its newest sightseeing novelty.

"This extraordinary underground voyage, made in boats over the black swirling waters flowing far beneath glamorous Paris, is proving of great interest to adventuresome visitors looking for something different. The trip starts at the Place de la Concorde and finishes below the Madeleine Church."

Ah, for a ride in the sewers.

One of the best man-actor-streaked stories, resurrected by Odd McIntyre, concerns the duo of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne and their first motion picture. Alfred, always scorning the cinema, declined to see the finished picture. So Miss Fontanne went alone. When she returned, Lunt withstood her silence as long as possible and then asked about the film. "Oh, Alfred, I was terrible," she modestly admitted. "I looked badly. I acted badly. I read badly."

"And how was I?" he queried, supposedly unconcerned.

"You were marvelous, Alfred. Perfect pronunciation, perfect characterization. A little too much makeup on your lips, perhaps, but you were great. I, though, was miserable; everything was wrong with me. . . ."

"Ah," interrupted Alfred, "too much make-up on my lips, eh?"

ONE WAY TO BREAK A HOUSE RECORD

Francis Gooch, manager of the Columbia, Mullin & Pinanski house at Bath, Maine, had a special show scheduled one morning. The film didn't arrive on time. He had to borrow shorts. The feature arrived and it was the wrong one. Mr. Gooch announced from the stage that those present could get refunds or passes. The city power failed during the announcement. The light came back on in ten minutes but when it came time to put on the evening show there was not enough power for projection.

Mr. Gooch asked for volunteers for an impromptu amateur show. Two stepped to the stage. An old phonograph was borrowed. The records proved older than the phonograph and, by some hasty scrambling, Mr. Gooch borrowed a radio from a merchant. There wasn't enough power to run the radio. In the meantime the theatre had filled and Mr. Gooch was busy giving refunds to those who could not find seats.

The happy ending is that the Columbia showed two emergency features that night without any advance advertising—and broke the all-time house record.

Since Bill Shakespeare went to work in Hollywood, contributing at once "Midsummer Night's Dream," to Warner Brothers, and "Romeo and Juliet," to Metro-Goldwyn, there has been some talk about doing "Hamlet" as the third in the "cycle." Before anyone out there tackles the job, it might be well for them to consult with the Museum of Modern Art, in New York, which has an old German "Hamlet" film (1920), and some records dating from 1881, which seem to draw the conclusion that Hamlet was a gal, and not a male prince at all. Among the observations made is one that concerns the birth of Hamlet just after the news is received that his father was wounded in mortal combat with Fortinbras. As no daughter could hope to inherit the Danish throne at that time, the argument is that the mother announced the birth of a male heir. After that the masquerade had to be continued and the assumed fact that Hamlet is a woman is said to account for his (her) love for Horatio, his (her) indifference toward Ophelia, and his (her) feminine characteristics such as indecision, hysteria, fear of death, reluctance to engage in physical combat except fencing, extreme sensitiveness, and predilection to fainting.

Some one on the air just described an optimist as a person who takes the lemons the world gives him and makes lemonade out of 'em.

The Roosevelt theatre in Philadelphia, which Bill Yearsley runs for Warners, has a tiled fish pond in the foyer in which lives a school of gold fish presided over by the largest and smartest old goldfish ever. Bill has named him Sam, and he and Sam spend hours communing with each other on dull days. Bill says that Sam listens in on every new show. If it's good, he sports around near the surface, but if it's a stinker, he hides in the grotto in the bottom of the tank. Some of the old patrons have learned to trust Sam's judgment, and there are a lot more refunds on the days when Sam hides.

Leonard Lyons calls it "Hollywood fame." Seems that Herman Mankiewicz, the motion picture producer, is the son of Columbia University's noted Professor Mankiewicz. When Herman arrived in New York after a Hollywood success—but a big success—he prevailed upon his father to accompany him to Broadway's night clubs—to see how a successful movie light is received. The Professor finally consented. Their first stop was Jack and Charlie's—where the doorman refused to permit Herman to enter, even after identification was presented. "Get Jack, get Charlie," Herman pleaded. Jack and Charlie were summoned, but they too, refused to reverse the ruling. Then the owners noticed Mankiewicz's father. "Professor," they greeted, "won't you do us the honor of entering?" And the old teacher invited his son to accompany him. Professor Mankiewicz had instructed both Jack and Charlie—at Columbia University.

They say that David Sarnoff, head of RCA, is mighty proud of his early singing accomplishments, particularly of the days when he sang with a choir and received 25 cents for singing at weddings—30 cents if he reached High-C in a solo. At one of these weddings, young Dave's voice reached upward and rested perilously high. There was some question as to whether he actually reached High-C. Nevertheless, Dave demanded, and received the 30 cents. "I'm giving you the extra nickel," the rabbi told him, "but Dave—you owe me half a note."

A country lad went to the Mainstreet theatre in Kansas City the other eve to see the show. In order to ease the discomfort of his farming feet, and thereby be able to devote his whole attention to the picture, he removed his shoes and settled back. The program had run its full circuit for the lad, and he arose to depart. But he couldn't find his shoes—his only shoes. Under seats he looked, up and down the aisle he went, peering. Other patrons joined him in looking. Finally the whole house was engaged in the search. But no brogans. Downhearted and down-trodden, he started home. He passed the box-office window, and glanced casually therein. There stood the shoes, both of them, farm mud and all. A kindly policeman had turned them into the lost and found department. Passersby wondered as they saw a grinning farmer putting on his shoes in front of the box office.

FCC ATTACKED AS FAILING IN DUTIES

Tax Problems Are Argued in Three States, Labor and Censorship in Four Others

Congressional attention this week so far as it was concerned with the amusement field was centered chiefly upon the Federal Communications Commission. Introduction of the independent appropriations bill, containing provisions for operation of the FCC, was made the occasion of an attack on the Commission by Representative Wigglesworth of Massachusetts who renewed his demand for an investigation.

State and city legislation affecting the motion picture industry included consideration of new or increased amusement taxes in Colorado, Maine and Oklahoma, and miscellaneous bills covering labor or censorship in Maryland, Indiana, Massachusetts and New York. Laws prohibiting Sunday shows were repealed in one community, affirmed in another and, in Delaware, agitation has begun for repeal of the state blue laws which bar film showings on the Sabbath.

In attacking the appropriation of $1,604,000 for the FCC, Representative Wigglesworth charged that the Commission had failed to exercise the regulatory functions imposed upon it and had approved transfers and purchases of stations that were difficult to justify, frequently at prices far in excess of the value of the property. The act creating the Commission, he said, was designed to eliminate possibilities of monopoly and of unrestrained trafficking in licenses.

"Under the policies pursued by the Commission," he said, "virtual monopoly is at hand."

The Congressman said that three networks control all 40 clear channels and have 90 per cent of the broadcasting power. No independent station, he said, has more than 1,000 watts at night but 163 network stations have power of 50,000 watts. He charged Commission officials with giving erroneous and incomplete information to the committee during consideration of the appropriations bill and he renewed his recommendations that fees be charged for broadcasting licenses.

$350,000 More for AT&T Inquiry

Of the total sum appropriated for the Commission, $350,000 will be for completion of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company investigation, on which more than $1,000,000 already has been expended.

Representative Dicksen, Iowa, argued on Tuesday against the Culkin bill to establish a motion picture commission, citing cost.

Officials of the National Archives requested the appropriations committee to consider the possibility of allowing sufficient sums to permit the filming of important historical events and to copy films as they begin to deteriorate. It was pointed out that the Comptroller General has refused to allow the National Archives to spend money for these projects.

Seeking to expedite action on his immigration legislation, Representative Dickstein of New York announced that hearings will be held on February 17th on his alien actor bill. An attempt to have approval given the measure by the House Immigration Committee was blocked by Representative Kramer of California who maintained that the the motion picture industry should be given another chance to discuss the bill.

LAW WOULD MAKE FIRE CREWS CAMERAMEN

All Pennsylvania firemen will have to double as motion picture cameramen if Representative John L. Powers, of Pittsburgh, has his way. Mr. Powers introduced a bill in the state legislature which will compel all firemen in the state to take motion pictures of second and third alarm blazes. The measure provides that the pictures would be used by the state fire prevention bureau in connection with the instruction of new members in the fire departments.

20 Per Cent Tax Sought

Topping proposals in state legislatures for new amusement taxes was a bill introduced in the Colorado house which would place a 20 per cent tax on all admissions.

A two per cent sales tax has been proposed by Governor Harry W. Nice of Maryland but admissions and other levies on which state taxes are in force would be excepted.

A bill to tax all theatre tickets one cent is being framed for the Maine legislature. Senator George Ashby, Aroostock, Republican, estimates that the luxury levy would yield the state $100,000 a year.

The Missouri one per cent sales tax has been attacked in a circuit court case in Kansas City. A tire shop operator, fined for not producing his books for computation of the tax, charged that the levy takes property without due process of law.

A bill introduced in the Missouri legislature proposes a three-member censor board to be paid by film inspection fees in addition to a salary.

Sales and Service Tax

A sales and service tax that would include a five per cent levy on all amusements has been submitted to the Oklahoma legislature committee by the state administration. The levy is part of a bill designed to pay old age pensions and support schools.

A threat to tax all motion picture film brought into Philadelphia for exhibition has been made by Mayor S. Davis Wilson. Involved in budget difficulties, the Mayor said that unless the state legislature gives the city a fair share of its tax revenues, new levies will be necessary before the end of the year. He mentioned the film tax as one possibility.

Authorization for the Maryland Board of Motion Picture Censors to designate "for adults only" films and to bar admission to theatres to boys and girls under 18 years of age is proposed in a bill introduced in the General Assembly.

Four Censorship Bills

State censorship is proposed in one of four bills affecting the industry introduced in the Indiana General Assembly. The bill would authorize censoring of all films except newsreels. Submitted to the Senate was a bill providing for licensing of motion picture theatres by the state fire marshal. Annual license fees of $15 for Class A and $10 for Class B houses would be collected. Another bill in the House would provide for licensing circuses, tent shows, carnivals and radio acts. Representative Harry Muller, operator of the State in Anderson, who earlier in the session called for a bill to prohibit Bank Nights, has introduced another which would ban designated play dates in exhibition contracts.

The latest motion picture bill in the Massachusetts legislature provides for appointment of a board to supervise and regulate the exhibition of motion pictures. It was introduced by Jacob A. Riis of the Youth Foundation and has been referred to the committee on state administration.

In New York Assemblymen are considering a bill permitting persons threading projectors to have projectionists' licenses and authorizing the issuance of licenses to persons having practical experience in booths instead of requiring them to serve an apprenticeship.

Sunday Show Move Fails

The Town Council of Aberdeen, Idaho, has sanctioned Sunday showings. In Cordele, Ga., the American Legion Post has refused to consider an attempt to reopen Sunday shows. Last year the Legion sponsored the shows but an injunction halted them.

The legislative committee of the Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Delaware and the Eastern Shore of Maryland is drawing up a bill to permit Sunday showings in any theatre in the state. The measure will be presented before the present session of the state legislature.

Newspaper-Radio Tie-up is Opposed

Threats of Congressional action to prohibit the operation of broadcasting stations by newspapers culminated last week in the introduction of a bill in the House of Representatives by Congressman Wearin of Iowa requiring the separation of such interests. The Congressman attacked publisher interests in radio as a means of molding public opinion and pointed out that approximately one fourth of all the stations licensed are owned, operated or controlled by newspapers.

Possibilities of a Congressional study of the subject were seen last month when Senator Wheeler of Montana requested the Federal Communications Commission to furnish him with information regarding newspaper and chain ownership of radio stations. He also asked the Commission for a legal opinion as to whether it had the authority under present law, to reject a newspaper's application for a station without other reasons and, if not, whether the legal staff believed it would be possible to provide such authority by legislation.

Relief Operators Ruled on Payroll

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has ruled that substitute or relief motion picture projectionists are employees of the exhibitor rather than of the regular employee whose place they take and that they must be included as such in compiling payroll records under the social security act. The ruling disposed of an issue raised by an exhibitor who asked for information.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Insurance Rate Up

The influenza epidemic, still raging here, has caused insurance companies to clamp down on producers who take policies on their casts and directors while pictures are in production. For the present, Lloyds, Aetna, and Quality, the three companies carrying the majority of these risks, have discontinued writing the policies.

In the future, when the policies are resumed, conditions will be stricter. Rates will be higher and the underwriters will demand the right to examine the physical condition of those to be insured. It is also said that directors and cameramen will not be covered under any circumstance.

The number of important productions that have been delayed by influenza so far is staggering. MGM has lost time on such pictures as "Parnell," "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" and "Captains Courageous." Paramount has suspended "Souls at Sea," "Swing High, Swing Low" and "Internes Can't Take Money," among others. At 20th Century-Fox, Universal, Radio, and Warners there have been like delays.

When the final summing up is made, it is estimated that the scourge will show a production loss of well over a million dollars.

'Way for Melodrama

That calculated effort which Hollywood makes to keep its finger on the public pulse, thereby attempting to ascertain what its immediate future entertainment preference will be, denotes a heavy trend toward drama. To satisfy that apparent demand Hollywood is going whole-hog for dramatic pictures. The disposition is towards good old fashioned, deep double dyed in the wool melodrama. Pictures recently previewed, "Black Legion," "You Only Live Once," "Outcast," "Maid Of Salem" and "The Good Earth," are graphic evidence of the inclination to regard drama as what the public will go for during the next few months.

Two pictures considered no great shakes at the time of production and early release, "Fury" and "The Devil Is A Sissy," provided the initial impulse towards predominance of melodramas on production schedules.

Melodrama Predominant

Melodramas are many in current production programs; they predominate heavily on future schedules. Columbia has "Racketeers In Exile" shooting; Grand National has "23½ Hours Leave" and "Two Shall Meet." MGM is busy with "Captains Courageous" and "Parnell," Paramount with "Souls At Sea," "The Love Trap," and "End Of Adventure." "Michael Strogoff" and "Wings Of Mercy" are engaging attention at Radio, while 20th Century-Fox has "Seventh Heaven," "Slave Ship," "That I May Live," "Dead Yesterday" "Wee Willie Winkee" and "Midnight Taxi" in the work. Universal joins the parade with "The Road Back" and "Night Key" and Warners have just completed "San Quentin" and "Marked Woman."

HEIGHT OF OPTIMISM MEDAL FOR WANGER

Persistent and officially undenied is the rumor in Hollywood that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will vote a special Height of Optimism medal for Walter Wanger. The story gained circulation following posting of the January 27th call sheet for "Vogues of 1938", a Wanger production, which specified, "a perfect blonde, a perfect brunette, a perfect redhead and a blonde man". Wanger publicists disown responsibility for call sheet and rumor with equal urbanity.

But what's happening is only a meager sample of what's coming. Of the pictures booked for production during the coming few months, approximately seventy, more than three fourths of the entire list, are dramas and melodramas. Paradoxically, Paramount, which announced a devotion to musicals but a few days ago, is going in strong for melodrama. Additionally to those just finished and shooting, it has "Spawn Of The North," "Beau Geste," "Buccaneer," "Angel," "I, James Lewis" and "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" slated. Earmarked on MGM's program is "Madame Walewska," "Night Must Fall" and "They Gave Him A Gun." Radio lists "Gunga Din," "She Sang For Her Supper" and "A Love Like That." "Private Enemy," "Think Fast Mr. Moto" and "Drums Along The Mohawk" denote that 20th Century-Fox has its ear to the ground.

Trend Is General

The United Artists group quite evidently is not unaware of what is going on. Walter Wanger plans "Castles In Spain" and "Weathering Heights." Samuel Goldwyn has scheduled "Stella Dallas" and "Hurricane." Selznick International promises to deliver "Gone With The Wind," "I Give You Life" and "Billy The Kid." Warners, with quite a batch of melodramas on hand, are proceeding to make "The Story Of Emile Zola" and "Kid Galahad."

Production Recedes

New production slumped off noticeably during the closing week of January. Two factors contributed to the slow-up; prevelance of influenza in the film colony and the fact that working schedules are tightly crowded with fifty-one pictures on the programs.

Of the four pictures to start, Universal's "The Road Back" stands out as the most important. The sequel to Eric Maria Remarque's "All Quiet On The Western Front," it features John King, Slim Summerville, Louise Fazenda, Andy Devine, Mary Blake, Barbara Reid, Gene Garrick, John Emery, Jean Rouverol, Noah Beery, Jr., Etienne Girardot, Maurice Murphy, Richard Cromwell, Henry Hunter, Spring Byington, Frank Reicher and Ferdinand Gottschalk. The film is being directed by James Whale.

For Paramount release, Major Pictures started "End Of Adventure," dramatic romance. Karen Morley and Robert Baldwin are featured in the leads supported by Katherine Alexander, Agnes Anderson, Lloyd Crane, Bud Sherman, Don Brodie and Arthur Rowlands. Robert Vignola is directing.

With William Nigh directing, Republic began work on "Steel," also a drama. The cast includes Grant Withers, Judith Allen, Ranny Weeks, Pierre Watkins, Eddie Anderson and William Newell.

Completing the list of dramatic films to start is "Midnight Taxi," 20th Century-Fox. Being directed by Eugene Forde, it features Brian Donleavy, Frances Drake and Allan Dinehart with Regis Toomey, Gilbert Roland, Harold Huber and Norman Willis included in the current supporting roster.

Seven Are Completed

As four productions started during the period, seven were completed. MGM accounted for two. In "Personal Property," formerly titled "Man In Possession," Robert Taylor and Jean Harlow are starred. Support lists Una O'Connor, Reginald Owen, E. E. Clive, Henrietta Crossman, Marla Shelton, Cora Witherspoon and Melville Cooper. W. S. Van Dyke directed. The second picture, "Espionage," will present Madge Evans and Edmund Lowe.

Warners also finished two films. "Marry The Girl," comedy romance, includes Frank McHugh, Hugh Herbert, Mary Boland, Carol Hughes, Alan Mowbray, Hugh O'Connell, Allen Jenkins and Teddy Hart. William McGann directed. The companion picture, also a comedy, "Dance Charlie, Dance," will present Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir, Glenda Farrell and Allen Jenkins.

Two pictures likewise were completed by Columbia. In "Racketeers In Exile," drama, George Bancroft, Evelyn Venable, Wynne Gibson, John Gallaudet, George McKay, Marc Lawrence, Helen Lowell and William Burress will be seen. Erle Kenton directed. "Speed Mad," action drama, features Rosalind Keith, Joseph Allen, Jr., George Ernest, Joseph Sawyer, J. M. Kerrigan, Arthur Loft, Al Hill, Richard Terry, Ray Bennett and Johnny Tyrrell. D. Ross Lederman directed.

Final number in the list of completed pictures is Paramount's "Swing High, Swing Low," dramatic romance. Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray are starred.

Conferences with Field Forces Called by Several Companies; Executives Meet with Studio Staffs on New Films

Special Drives for Bookings Underway, with Halfway Mark Coming March 1st, With Quotas Set

Unprecedented mid-seasonal sales activities are engaging the attention of large and small distributors bent on rounding up all remaining sales possibilties as they near the halfway mark, on March 1st, of the 1936-37 season.

With several of the large companies already having held important sales conferences, virtually all the distributors gave indications of new activity pointing to a renewed concentration of contract negotiations with unsold exhibitors in the next few weeks.

"Columbia's Montague Sweepstakes," a mid-season's sales campaign named for Abe Montague, Columbia sales manager, was said by the company to have established 165 per cent of the weekly quota set in the first week of the drive, which continues until May 1st. Both billings and collections are involved, in addition to actual new sales.

Columbia's six home office sales representatives—Jules Rieff, Douglas Pratt, Frank Barry, Harold Sachs, Nat Shiren and Les Savage—have been relieved of their normal duties for the period of the campaign. This week the seven started on tours of the 32 exchanges, to devote two and one-half weeks to each office. Louis Astor, circuit sales supervisor at the home office, has also been sent into the field. Mr. Montague and Nate Spingold arrived in Hollywood this week for production conferences.

Weeks Calls In Field Staff

George W. Weeks, general sales manager of GB Pictures, held a sales meeting in New York last Saturday, bringing in from the field the following sales officials: J. Reginald Wilson, central district manager; John Scully, northeast district manager; Arthur Greenblatt, eastern district manager; Clinton White, assistant to Mr. Weeks; and the following branch managers; Carl Goe, Albany; Ben Rogers, New Haven; Herbert Given, Philadelphia; Joseph Kaliski, Washington; Irving Gumberg, New York.

Mr. Weeks then left New York for conferences with branch and division managers at Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Kansas City and St. Louis. He will meet with the GB sales forces in other parts thereafter.

Edward L. Alperson, president of Grand National Pictures, and Edward Peskay, general sales manager, arrived in Hollywood to talk with producers about remaining 1936-37 commitments, with a view to preparing for extra sales effort on product for the balance of the season.

Republic Pictures is in the midst of a special mid-season's sales campaign, with the San Francisco exchange continuing to maintain its lead over the other offices. Added sales were reported by the branches in virtually every territory.

Lining Up New Product

Ned Depinet, RKO Radio vice president in charge of distribution, and Jules Levy, general sales manager, conferred with production executives in Hollywood lining up new product, and then, on Sunday, traveled to San Francisco to discuss sales and distribution plans with Harry Cohen, western district manager, and the following branch managers: N. P. Jacobs, Los Angeles; G. William Wolf, San Francisco; J. H. Ashby, Denver; Ed Lamb, Seattle; M. Cory, portland, and H. C. Fuller, Salt Lake City.

LOEW'S TAKING POLL OF NEW YORK THEATRES

Loew's, through a questionnaire to be published in the February issue of Loew's Moviegoer for distribution in 50 New York theatres, will take a poll of the patrons to determine the three favorite male and female stars; the three whom they dislike the most; those featured players whom they would like to see in star roles; to name their selections of the 10 best pictures of 1936 and to express opinions of double features. The results of the poll will be published in the March issue of the magazine.

Twenty-one home office executives of Twentieth Century-Fox left New York for Kansas City on Tuesday to attend a two-day mid-season district managers' meeting, starting Thursday morning, at the Hotel Muehlback. John D. Clark, general sales manager, traveled to the meeting from Hollywood where he had been conferring with Darryl Zanuck, production chief, and other Fox studio executives on product for the remainder of the season.

Mr. Clark will preside over the meeting at Kansas City, and introduce to the delegates J. P. O'Loughlin, Canadian district manager, whom he recently appointed to head the "Sidney R. Kent Sales Drive." The sessions will be attended by eight district managers, six branch managers, and the following from New York's home office executive staff: William J. Kupper, William Sussman, William Gehring, Charles E. McCarthy, Felix Jenkins, Lee Balsly, Walter J. Hutchinson, Irving Maas, Leslie Whalen, William Clark, Martin Moskowitz, Harry Buxbaum, Joseph Lee, Thomas Bailey, Clarence A. Hill, Edward Collins, Theodore Shaw, Nat Finkler, Jack Bloom, Harvey Day, Sr., and Roger Ferri.

Exhibitor Committee Named

Following a mid-season's sales meeting of five district managers in New York, United Artists sent word that, veering from the usual sales drive formula, the company has formed a special "honorary committee" of exhibitor leaders throughout the country to sponsor the 14-week sales drive in honor of George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager. The drive also will commemorate Mr. Schaefer's first year with the company.

Among the circuit and exhibitor leaders on the committee are: Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Brothers Circuit Management, Inc.; N. L. Nathanson, head of Famous Players Canadian; Mike Kincey, head of the Kincey circuit in North Carolina; Frank C. Walker, vice-president of the Comerford circuit; Edward Beatty, general manager of the Butterfield circuit; George W. Trendle, president of United Detroit Theatres; John Balaban, vice president of B. and K.; and Vincent McFaul, general manager of Buffalo Theatres.

In addition, the company subsequently announced that "pledges of wholehearted support and cooperation," with a "willingness to provide preferred playing time and definite advance booking schedules," have been received from Harry David, of Publix, Salt Lake City; B. F. Shearer, Seattle; L. C. Griffith, Oklahoma City; Alex Halperin, Warners, Chicago; Harry Huffman, Denver; Bernie Berger, of the Berger Amusement Company, Minneapolis; John J. Friedel, of the Minneapolis Amusement Company in the same city; Edward C. Beatty, Butterfield Circuit, Detroit; John Harwick, Cascade Theatres, Seattle, and Leroy V. Johnson, of Jensen and Von Herberg, Seattle.

With the drive in its first week, eastern branch managers last week conferred with Andrew Smith and Charles Stern, district manager, at the home office. Attending were Charles Kranz, Washington; Lou Wechsler, New Haven, Sidney Lehman, Buffalo; John Dervin, Boston; Harry Bodkin, Philadelphia; Charles Rosenzweig, New York. Salesmen from the local exchange and other home office representatives at the session included Moe Streimer, Nat Beier, Sam Rifkin, Eddie Mullins, Larry Brown, Sam Stern, Arthur Weinberger, Monroe Greenthal, David Burkan, Seymour Poe, Phil Dow, and John Wrege.

April Is Grainger Month

Universal Pictures entered the mid-season sales rush on Tuesday with the announcement that April will be designated "James R. Grainger Month," in recognition of Mr. Grainger's fourth year as general sales manager, thereby, "affording every exhibitor in the United States to register his appreciation of the friendly dealings which have characterized Mr. Grainger's business life."

"Grainger Month" will be signalized on March 28th with the release of "Top of the Town."

Universal is the first major distributor to announce plans for a sales convention for the new season, setting May and Los Angeles as the time and place for the first annual convention under the Cowdin-Cochrane regime.

S. Charles Einfeld, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity, accompanied Harry Warner, president of Warner Brothers, this week on the return trip to New York from conferences on production at Burbank.

Educational Meeting Postponed One Week

Special Master Philip Cohen adjourned until next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock the special stockholders' meeting of Educational Pictures, Inc., called in his office at Wilmington, Del., Tuesday for the purpose of voting on a recapitalization plan for the company and program of corporate simplification. The meeting was adjourned to await proxies from England. No action was taken.

Mr. Cohen was appointed special master recently by Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott in Chancery Court and ordered to report back to the chancellor results of the meeting. Meeting with Mr. Cohen on Tuesday were E. W. Hammonds, president of Educational, Norman C. Nicholson, secretary, and Aaron Finger, Wilmington counsel.

Continuous Performance Barred In Budapest; Not Liked Anyway

It's One of Many Odd Twists to Hungary as a Motion Picture Market

by ALFRED HARDING

in Budapest

Alfred T. Harding, long a writer on various phases of the business of entertainment, both in America and abroad, is now on a tour of European countries observing the status of both stage and screen in the light of events peculiar to the economic and political shakeups that have come in many centers on the Continent.

Herewith is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Harding, who is observing changes of conditions in the foreign stage for Actors' Equity Association, but is directing his articles for Motion Picture Herald particularly toward problems of the motion picture overseas.

The final disolve whirred from the screen and the lights in the theatre went up. Although it was still early in the evening and another program was to begin in a few minutes, all except three or four members of that Budapest audience climbed to their feet and began to edge toward the exits.

It was not that they had all seen all of the picture. During the performance individuals had been dribbling in and many of those very ones now moving toward the door had not seen the beginning of the picture. But they were not willing to wait. They knew how the picture had ended and that, apparently, was the thing in which they were most interested.

This was the last chance they might have to stay for a new performance, for the next day a new policy was going into effect. There were to be no more continuous runs in Hungary. The government had decided that such performances were unfair competition to those theatres which during the day played only three or four performances, and a decree had been issued banning them, along with double bills. So this was the time they might have been expected to stay to get their money's worth, if ever. They went right on out of the theatre, anyway.

Even if the government had not issued the decree, the motion picture exhibitors had just about come to the conclusion among themselves that continuous runs were not to the Hungarian taste, and they probably would have adopted the program of three or four performances at definite hours, anyway. They had learned one more lesson about Hungarian audience preferences.

There are other lessons they have learned in the fifteen or twenty years since the war, during which American motion pictures have become the backbone of Hungarian programs. They have come to know that, generally speaking, the fate of a picture can be forecast from the attendance of the first day, that attendance usually runs downhill from the first day. And if there isn't a big turnout for the first couple of days the exhibitor knows there isn't a hill for it to go down and that he has a loser on his hands. That is the reason why the Hungarian exhibitors, especially the representatives of the large American film companies, put everything they have into preliminary campaigns. The advertising displays and posters splashed around Budapest before some of the premieres would be considered creditable efforts anywhere in America.

There are occasional exceptions. "A Small Town Girl" opened to very small business in spite of the advance efforts. The exhibitor discovered to his surprise that the picture began to build after the first two days.

The audience at this performance was young, most of them, I should say, between fifteen and forty years old. And that, I understand, is typical of Hungarian film audiences. They are, roughly, the generation which has grown up since the war, or since foreign films in quantity were available in Hungary. For their elders, it must be some special type of picture in which they are particularly interested, most likely of a religious trend. I was told that "The King of Kings" and "The White Sister" had made a great appeal to these older folk.

Hungarian film audiences are motion picture audiences. They do not have the big supplementary programs to which American audiences are accustomed. Even in Budapest the average program consists of the feature film, newsreel, and perhaps one added short feature, the whole lasting somewhat less than two hours.

20% Must Be Hungarian

It is somewhere in this brief supplementary program that the exhibitor usually places his 20 per cent of Hungarian films which he is required by law to show. This regulation means that a good part of the newsreel or the short feature will be of local manufacture.

Before the war Hungary had a population of about 23,000,000. The Treaty of Versailles left it approximately 8,817,000 and a feeling of suspicion on the part of her neighbors who had taken over from her two-thirds of the territory and the people formerly called Hungarian. These nations do not welcome and, in some instances, will not allow, Hungarian motion pictures to be shown in their country, fearful that the Hungarians will use them as propaganda.

So Hungarian pictures are largely confined to their own borders. Even that does not mean that all Hungarians are able to go to the films at all times. Of the 3,200 towns and villages of Hungary, with four to five million population, only some 400 are equipped to show motion pictures.

These circumstances impose definite limitations upon the amount of money which can be put into making a Hungarian picture. With an admission price ranging from ten filler to four pengoes, or roughly from two to eighty cents, and only five million persons to get it back from, Hungarian producers cannot afford to pour money into a production. The lowest estimate for producing a picture given by any reliable source was 80,000 pengoes (about $16,000), the highest estimate for a profitable production was only twice that amount. The average is less rather than more than $25,000.

Such a budget is possible only because the producer is relieved of paying studio rent. The studios, both Magyar Film Iroda and the Hunnia Studio, are instruments of the state, just as are the National Theatre and Radio Budapest. The only difference is that the state owns the Hunnia Studio outright and the Magyar Film Iroda is owned by a corporation in which the state holds part of the shares. In both, Hungarian producers get the studio and its apparatus free, paying only for the materials used and the salaries of their own individuals during the making of a picture.

In spite of these efforts, and for a nation which has no more ready money than Hungary they are considerable, the real backbone of the Hungarian film exchanges is still the foreign film, and is likely to be for some time. Of the 974 pictures licensed for showing in Hungary during 1935, there were 437 American (including two silent pictures); 228 Hungarian, 159 German, 77 French, 33 British, 23 Austrian, 12 from Sweden and Holland, lumped together in the official figures for some reason, and 5 from Italy.

That does not mean that that many features were imported or shown. But there were of feature films (including short subjects which were reckoned as features) 521 sound and 2 silent; educational films, 92 sound and 32 silent; newsreels, 203 sound and 23 silent; and advertising films, 94 sound and 7 silent. And there were several propaganda films made for the express purpose of interesting visitors or potential visitors in the beauties of Budapest or the rural countryside, and supplied to all the Consular offices and probably to anyone else who would be willing to show them.

Likes and Dislikes

Since American pictures represent 48 per cent of all pictures shown on Hungarian screens during 1935, the likes and dislikes of Hungarian audiences are of importance to Hollywood and New York.

Hungarian audiences, like those in America and elsewhere, have their preferences in players. Charles Guttman, Hungarian representative of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, put it this way:

"First Garbo, then nothing, then nothing and nothing; then Chaplin and a couple more nothings; then all the rest of the stars. There are certain stars whose names on posters will draw them any time, regardless of the picture, unless they hear bad things about it. They just can't understand Mae West and have no use for her. The late Marie Dressler was another they could not understand. The one that is hardest to explain is Helen Hayes. I think they don't understand her pictures."

American motion pictures are teaching Budapest more American, perhaps, than any other European capital. Because of the great dissimilarity between the two languages no attempt is made to dub the films in Hungarian.

Hungary has no crime problem at the moment and is not anxious to invite one. No gangster pictures may be exhibited. It will not tolerate any picture impugning religion.

Nevertheless, exceptions and all, there is still a great deal of opportunity for American producers and distributors in Hungary. With care and diligence they may improve upon even their excellent present position in this pleasant but harassed land.

THE VOICE OF THE PRESS THUNDERS ITS PRAISE!

THE NEW YORK CRITICS:

"A stirring, eloquent and profoundly humorous screen transcription of Sean O'Casey's 'The Plough and the Stars' has come to the Music Hall. The work has been fashioned by the brilliant craftsmen who made 'The Informer.' Once more they have created a notable and beautiful photoplay." —N. Y. Herald Tribune

"High above the average motion picture and should be marked 'Must.' . . . The drama is exciting in its dramatic movement, grim in its intention and relieved by lusty, virile comedy . . . The acting is superb."

The Good Earth

(MGM - Albert Lewin)

Drama

From out the pages of Pearl Buck's best selling novel, "The Good Earth," a story of poignant human drama, comes distinguished living motion picture entertainment. As it has been made by MGM, Luise Rainer and Paul Muni give performances of excellence that rarely have been approached in screen annals and the support brilliantly rises to the standards established by them.

For showmen, no matter what type of house they operate or to what classes of clientele they play, "The Good Earth" is a commercial feature of unsurpassed merit. For audiences, "The Good Earth" is simple, powerful, human interest drama, pages torn from the life story of living men and women, that probes their deepest emotions and leaves with them indelible memories, a combination of fundamentals that appeal to all elements of patronage.

Impressive yet simple and easily understood this picture has been made with sincerity, dignity and intelligence. Close to the heart in the beginning, it edges closer with every passing foot, at times inclining audiences to applaud but holding them in profound silence as they witness its characters being made the victims of worldly and spiritual persecution.

For swift narration the story has been consolidated into several vivid chapters, and yet none of the stirring spirit of the original has been lost. Rather, that spirit has been intensively accentuated. The marriage of slave girl O-lan to farmer Wang is a sequence of joyous beauty. Wang's hopes for men children, the detailing of the couple's poverty stricken but happy home life, his dreams to own a bit more of the good earth, O-lan's delivery of male children, are sequences of idyllic domestic life, fidelity and love. The picturization of famine's visitation upon the country is awesome.

A high note of terror colors the family's flight southward. Wang is forced to bestial toil, O-lan and the children to begging to eke out a squalid existence. The pitch rises to a crescendo of fury as revolution crashes. Trampled O-lan finds a bag of jewels during a palace looting, and is saved from execution by a whim of fate. Happiness contrasts with stark drama as news comes of rains in the north, and the little family returns to its homelands. Sale of the secretly stolen jewels enables Wang to buy more of the lands he loves. Soon he is a lord, moving his family to the mansion from which long ago he took the slave girl, O-lan, to wife.

But a new and more appalling disaster befalls the House of Wang. Into it he has brought exotic sing-song Lotus as second wife, chilling the soul of O-lan. A tragedy, the reward of inconstancy and unfaithfulness, strikes sharply. Wang finds Lotus lustfully compromising Younger Son. Enraged and ferocious, he drives his child from the household, denounces O-lan. Then another and more terrifying scourge smashes at the House of Wang. Clouds of ravaging locusts blacken the sky. Panic-stricken by this added curse in his life, Wang hearkens to the advice of university trained Elder Son. By fire, flood, crop destruction and muscle cracking labor, aided by a sudden wind shift, Wang, his family and neighbors, stay this menace. A repentant husband and father, celebrating his deliverance from the wrath of God with a thanksgiving festival, he seeks forgiveness for all his rashness, avarice and passion, and O-lan, with her lips forming the words of absolution, dies.

"The Good Earth" places in the hands of exhibitors what is undoubtedly one of the most valuable pieces of screen merchandise with which they ever have had to deal.

Outcast

(Paramount)

Drama

The dramatic power of this photoplay is gripping from the start. It starts with an emotion-stirring appeal and concludes with a pulse-tingling wallop. In between, carried by a vein of tense suspense, it tells a powerfully dramatic human interest story of men and women and mob hysteria. In value of sound motivating story, quality of action, direction and production support, it is screen material worthy of exhibitor attention.

Dr. Jones, accused of administering an overdose of sedatives that caused a patient's death, is acquitted of a murder charge. Ostracized by fellow physicians through the vengeful inhibitions of the dead woman's husband, deprived of the right to practise, Jones leaves the locale of his professional disaster. In a small town, befriended by kindly lawyer Abbott, Jones sets up as a country doctor and quickly becomes the community's idol. To his new found opportunity to live and serve humanity, Jones is tracked by Margaret Stevens, sister-in-law of the woman of whose death he was exonerated. Margaret Stevens has taken up her brother's mania to wreck Jones' career.

The influence of Abbott, plus association with Jones when he performs a doctor's greatest duty, bringing new life into the world, cause Margaret's enmity to change to respect and affection. In the town, Hattie Simmerson, fanatic devotee of quack nostrums, is Jones' sole foe. She evicts Margaret from her boarding house, accusing her of being a scarlet woman, and finds newspaper clippings of Jones' trial. She broadcasts the news and follows it up with vituperative scandal mongering. Her son, Freddie, falls mortally ill and the boy's father pleads with Jones to treat the boy. After a life-saving operation, the doctor's work is destroyed by Hattie, and the boy dies. The enraged, tragedy-stricken woman brands Jones as a murderer and whips the towns people into seething mob fury. As they are about to lynch Jones and Margaret, the town's bestial ferocity is stayed by Abbott, who in pleading for decency, justice and tolerance brings home to Hattie the realization that where Dr. Jones had given her boy a chance for life, she had destroyed it, and that she, not the doctor, is an innocent murderer. The mob, its fury abated, has only compassion for Hattie and appreciation for Dr. Jones.

Keen, sharp and strong, the dramatic story related in this picture is also human. Its power to play upon personal sympathies was graphically evident in the reactions of the preview audiences. During the unreeling of the story, the attendance sat in silence. They reacted in the right way to comedy contrast and tension-easing situations, which had been inserted in the proper spots in the most effective way. At the conclusion the applause was wholehearted.

A serious story, told in a dignified and forceful manner, "Outcast" demands a similarly grounded exploitation campaign. As respectable and legitimate contacts with members of the medical profession are in order, it would not be unwise to call upon this profession for support and endorsements. It can be expected that the film will benefit considerably by word of mouth advertising.

Dangerous Number

(MGM)

Comedy

Giddy, gay comedy, this is nonsensical farce from start to finish. That it has definite amusement value is not to be denied, inasmuch as the houseful of Pasadenans laughed wildly at its first preview in the Tournament of Roses town at the United Artists theatre. A tough spot to crack for any kind of picure, as even the most highbrow films occasionally are icily received, the fact that a lot of ridiculous tomfoolery got by over there is fairly convincing evidence that "Dangerous Number" should do all right by itself as a sustaining feature in almost any kind of community.

There's not much plan to the picture; there seldom is in comedies, where it's necessary to have the gags in action, dialogue and situations coming along continually. In the beginning a young business man, bent on serious pursuits in life, forgets himself just long enough to marry a red headed show girl he has sworn to forget. Headed by the girl's mother, former muscle dancer, her old show days companions—acrobats, contortionists, snake charmers, song and dance teams, chatter acts—swoop down upon the newlyweds. Along with them, eventually, comes the bride's first husband, also a performer. Their antics drive the serious minded young man and his willy nilly uncle frantic, and they flee. To teach his young bride a lesson, the groom tries to make a date with another girl, but his wife is in on the stunt, and there's a series of hilarious mix-ups with gangsters and cops before the whole melange lands in jail. Then it's discovered that the marriage to the first husband didn't take, and as the girl has had some semblance of sense knocked into her red head, husband and wife settle down to what is hoped will be a more or less unexciting existence.

The show is geared to family theatres in which a neighborly spirit prevails.—G. M.

Ready, Willing and Able

(Warner - Hal Wallis)

Musical Comedy - Drama

Emulating that backstage story pattern so well established by this company in previous pictures of the same character, "Ready, Willing And Able" freshens the standby features with quite a quota of novelties. A musical comedy-drama, backed up with plenty of spectacle, with glamorous girls and production effects, the comedy element is accented to give the show a pitch for mass audiences.

A pair of wouldbe New York producers get motion picture financing for their show on the condition a celebrated English actress is signed for the lead. A rattle-brained and chiseling agent gets wind of the deal and rushes to the pier to meet the actress. By a mistake, in which he is aided by the girl's chum and her Shakespearean inclined chaperon, he signs an American girl to a contract. Things go along rosily for the prospective show temporarily, as one of the producers falls in love with the tyro actress who can dance but can't sing a note. Eventually the real English actress learns what's going on, and, feeling herself the victim of an imposture, complicates matters by instituting all kinds of law suits. Yet, mad as she is upon her arrival in New York, things happen to reveal her as not such an ideal attraction. When romantic, dramatic, financial and contingent complications are straightened out the show goes on in a surprising manner.

To that theme are attached numerous occasions for Winifred Shaw, Lee Dixon, Ross Alexander, Lee Dixon and Ruby Keeler to sing and dance in solo and with chorus. Allen Jenkins, Louise Fazenda, Hugh O'Connell, Teddy Hart, Shaw and Lee and E. E. Clive are characteristically comic, and the remainder of the cast fits in nicely to support the principals. With the exception of a few unnecessary gag lines which take a rather risque trend, the moral tone of the show is of acceptable caliber. Its exploitation requires only a readaptation of the methods used to market previous similarly atmosphered attractions released by this company.

Two Wise Maids

(Republic)

Comedy-Drama-Romance

Taking a subject that has been tried before, though never with any great success, Republic has made in this a film glorifying the American school marm, a picture full of entertainment values. Dealing entirely in elements pointedly familiar to all who ever went to school—folk who when they were young looked upon the "skinny" as public enemy number one, only to have that psychological enmity become transmuted into love, respect and appreciation in mature years—the film concentrates on a sympathetic treatment of the school teacher character in a manner that gives it quick and lasting appeal.

Uniquely blending tenement district and homespun atmosphere, the plot is simple but moving. Teacher Agatha Stanton, "Old Ironsides" to generations of pupils, is philosophically resigned when young modern-minded Bruce is appointed principal, a position to which she aspired. A specialist in making tough kids good and good kids better, she has the respect of all parents. Circumstances contrive to have Agatha brought before the school board to face charges of having beaten Wet Mouth Elliott, a pupil. Though the parents rally to her support, things are going pretty bad for Agatha at the hearing until a parade of onetime pupils—banker, prizefighter, actor, truck driver—arrive to attest her character and to tell of the good influence she has exerted on their lives. To cap the climax and rout the foes of "Old Ironsides," Jerry, a girl student who was just as much a trial and tribulation to Agatha as was Wet Mouth, causes him to confess that he received his injuries while trying to steal answers to examination papers and that he lied when he accused Agatha of beating him. Restored to her position, Agatha continues to train the sprouts of today to become the trees of tomorrow.

With a definite note of humanness threading through the theme, comedy, drama, romance and suspense have been included in a manner to make the show continuously interesting and revealing. In all ways it includes those entertainment elements that have drawn above average popularity. As a commercial feature, it provides any exhibitor, whether he is in big city or small town, unusual opportunity for attention-getting exploitation.

Join the Marines

Comedy-Romance

Light comedy is the keynote of this production which has as a part of its plot an incident similar to the well publicized story that resulted in an Olympic team member being barred from participating in the last Olympiad because of drinking while aboard the vessel carying the team to the games. However, that portion of the story only sets the stage for a romance—a romance, incidentally, that is a series of falling-in and falling-out, with the United States Marine Corps as the cause of it all.

The treatment is light and airy and makes for an enjoyable picture. The action is swiftly paced for the most part and covers a great deal of territory. The demands of the script pay little respect to Marine Corps discipline but it is obvious that technical assistance has been resorted to the marching sequences. In the cast are Paul Kelly, June Travis, Purnell Pratt, Reginald Denny, Warren Hymer, Irving Pichel and Sterling Holloway.

Kelly, an athletically inclined policeman, sails with the Olympic team to compete in the javelin throw. While on board he inadvertently interrupts an elopement of Miss Travis and Denny, and gets into a fight with Miss Travis' inebriated friends. Banned from the team because of the row, Kelly returns on the same boat. Miss Travis also takes the boat back, and the two fall in love.

Miss Travis obtains permisison of her Marine Colonel father to marry Kelly on condition the erstwhile policeman, dropped from the force because of the boat scandal, can find employment before the Colonel sails on foreign service. At the last moment Kelly enlists in the Marine Corps. This displeases Miss Travis, and she sails with her father to a south seas island post. Kelly determines to work his way up to a lieutenancy and resign.

When as a first sergeant Kelly gets an opportunity to go to the island, he accepts. A bubonic plague strikes the island and Kelly covers himself with glory in his handling of the natives. He gets his commission and resigns. Miss Travis has had a change of heart,

WHY IS "YOU ONLY LIVE ONCE" CAUSING SO MUCH DISCUSSION?

Why is it attracting such record-breaking crowds?

Is it because: "It shocks and moves you with its breath-taking excitement!" as Howard Barnes points out in the N. Y. HERALD-TRIBUNE?

Is it because: "It is paced at such brisk speed that its impact is breath-taking . . . so profoundly stirring, furiously exciting, unqualifiedly fine!" as Bland Johaneson says in the N. Y. DAILY MIRROR, who adds: "YOU SHOULDN'T MISS IT!"?

Is it because: "One stirring sequence tumbles upon another . . . sinewy, well-knit, undeniably exciting!" as Robert Garland maintains in the N.Y. AMERICAN, who says, "a gilt-edged cast, if there ever was one"?

Is it because: "It is intense, absorbing, poigantly real ...a brilliant compound of suspense and swift action!" as Frank S. Nugent exclaims in the N. Y. TIMES?

Is it because: "At the Rivoli it is holding audiences tense!" according to Eileen Creelman, N.Y. SUN, who adds, "PICTURES AREN'T OFTEN AS GOOD AS THIS"?

"I RECOMMEND 'YOU ONLY LIVE ONCE' TO YOU BECAUSE IT IS KEEN AND ADULT MELODRAMA, BECAUSE OF THE SUPERB PERFORMANCE THAT SYLVIA SIDNEY CONTRIBUTES, BECAUSE OF THE WORK OFFERED BY HENRY FONDA, BECAUSE OF LANG'S VIGOROUS AND VITAL DIRECTION!"

Mama Steps Out

Comedy-Drama

Plot formula number 7-A in the American innocents abroad idea is given another airing here. Although the film is marked by some exceptionally clever dialogue and provides amusement in actions and situations, it nevertheless offers nothing that has not been seen before, nor is what is offered amplified by anything that is particularly new. It's simply a domestic comedy, complicated by some serio-drama, including a harum scarum romance, intended for the family trade. If it is remembered at all in the future it will be recalled as the vehicle introducing Stanley Morner, a performer who demonstrates ability to handle more worthy material.

Socially ambitious prairie state mother Ada Cuppy herds staid husband Leonard and modern minded daughter Leila to Europe, hoping that all will be bitten by the culture bug. Ensues everything experienced by everyone in domestic comedies of such Americans in Europe. En route Leila falls for crooner Chuck, who has a tough guy complex. A horrible situation for Ada but delightful to Leila, Leonard just grins and bears it. In France the melange is imposed upon by a lot of down-at-the-heels and psuedo nobles to whom the servants are wise. As Leila has a good time in her own way, Ada gets all hot and bothered about the deception, and Leonard does as another harassed husband and father might do, gets drunk and lets all shift for themselves.

The production lacks originality and name power and is practically void of any novel angles that would make legitimate an aggressive campaign.

Nobody's Baby

(MGM - Hal Roach)

Comedy

Usually when a two reel story is stretched out to feature length things are apt to drag a bit. The dragging is not so noticeable when the material adapted is gag and situation farce comedy. It's hardly evident at all in this picture, where Patsy Kelly and Lyda Roberti are the central figures in all the foolish if sometimes lightly dramatic excitement. The two are on the screen a lot and when they are there is always something doing that creates plenty of laughter. At least the audience in the Alexander theatre, Glendale, seemed to find much enjoyment in it.

The picture burlesques a radio broadcast amateur tryout, imitates the nurse recruiting sequence in "White Parade," adapts a bit of the "It Happened One Night" ride-thumbing technique, and adventures into a swank night club with a pair of love smitten swains, Robert Armstrong and Lynne Overman, padding material in which many original gags are included. The Misses Kelly and Roberti become nurses. Rosina Lawrence, who ran out on her husband and dancing partner, Don Alvarado, because he didn't want the world to know they were married, comes to the hospital to have a baby. Then the fun begins. Circumstances hilarious to the audience contrive to make it appear to Armstrong and Overman that either of the girls who are trying to protect Miss Lawrence's secret is the child's mother. But all ends well in the night club when Alvarado finds out that he is the father, and Patsy and Lyda wonder what new adventure will befall them.

Moving fairly speedily, the motivating farce counterbalanced by some good instrumental and vocal music, a few dabs of dancing and a little bit of light drama, the film appears to be of the quality for the masses.—G. M.

Revolutionists

(Amkino)

Russian Documentation

In this installment of their documentation of the case for their order of things the Russians, lately devoted cinematically to the more recent stages of its development, go back to what may be regarded as the beginning, to 1896, in point of calendar, and the result is in many ways superior, as entertainment, to productions of chronologically subsequent date.

The revolutionists of the title are those who were referred to in the newspapers of the period of Nihilists and depicted by contemporary cartoonists as lean fellows with pointed beards and sputtering bombs. The beards and the bombs are present, incidentally, in this presentation of their deeds, their objectives, ambitions, accomplishments, punishments and attainments. The film reproduces the period impressively and without anachronism, affording an informative insight into the customs, costumes and perhaps the civic status of the times. Much if not all of the incident pictured is of historical record.

Considered simply as a document, the picture is carefully made and soundly organized. Since the material it contains is inherently dramatic, so is the sum of it. The English titles with which the film is equipped for American consumption are less than commonly laden with propaganda and there is no palpable effort to link it up with those productions which have been turned out to attest the alleged glories of life under the new regime.

Sandflow

Western

Good western action material, capably handled, makes this an agreeably entertaining production. The plot structure is more intricate than commonly associated with pictures of its category, and while the story tends towards vagueness in the early phases, subsequent developments take care of that. Incidentally it is just this uncertainty that creates more than the ordinary interest.

With Buck Jones in the saddle, and with its complement of western thrills and action, ready-made exploitation values are present. The title derives its name from the Sandflow region of the Rio Grande. Direction by Lesley Selander has adhered to western tradition, the picture being swiftly paced. Supporting Buck are Lita Chevret, Bob Kortman, Arthur Aylsworth and Robert Terry among others.

Buck and Terry, brothers, have been making retribution to the various ranches from which their late father rustled cattle. Terry, accused of killing a sheriff, is wounded in a chase. He reaches a ranch outpost hut where three cowboys, Joaquin, Tex and Quayle, are gathered. Quayle is for turning Terry over to the posse for the reward but Buck arrives in time to outwit the posse and Quayle.

Believing Terry is innocent of the murder though he refuses to deny it and that he is protecting a girl, Buck sets out to find the girl, whom he knows only by the name of Rose of Lost Canada. Setting Terry's horse free, Buck follows the steed. He finds the girl and discovers her father, who is insane, is the actual murderer.

Pagliacci

(Trafalgar-United Artists)

Drama, Color, Opera

This is a considerable artistic achievement on the part of Karl Grune, the director, and the Max Schach "Trafalgar" production unit, working at Denham. Seeming to solve the problem of making opera acceptable to the big public, without offending those to whom the music is the big thing, it also looks first class box-office. To sell is the title of Leoncavallo's opera, Richard Tauber in the great tenor part of Canio, the promise of colour throughout the famous last act of the opera, which is served straight, and the American value of Steffi Duna.

Tauber is the big asset. He is worth all that can be put behind him in the way of publicity; his rendering of "On with the Motley," presented as sung by the heart-broken clown while making up before his dressing room mirror, is of course the high-spot, but this magnificent tenor shines in each and all of his numbers, and acts worthily. That he is given the Prologue to sing may offend the purists but it is the only departure from opera traditions which leaps to the eye, though the whole of the first part of the story has been treated according to film methods.

There is an enormous gain, dramatically and pictorially, in this transposition. The life of the troupe of Players in their primitive traveling theatre and in their caravan living quarters is presented without operatic conventions. They use ordinary speech instead of recitative. The tragedy of Canio's love for Nedda, her infatuation for the cadet Silvio, the mischief-making activities of the malevolent Tonio, develop in an atmosphere of realism. The backgrounds are picturesque and permit an outstanding effect to be obtained as the troupe, successfully surviving Alpine blizzards, swing singing in their caravan to the market place of Cremona, and to the last act on the stage of the tiny theatre.

Up to this point it has been photoplay, varied only by the fact that when music or song is called for by the action it has been forthcoming. From now on, it is a presentation, in colour, of the last act of the opera. The tragicomedy of Clown, Harlequin and Dancer is enacted until the crazed Canio turns the sham killing into grim reality. The film therefore ends as opera and very strikingly.

Admirably recorded, "Pagliacci," with all the musical appeal of its original, is also a very striking spectacle; plot values, strong human interest and music have been efficiently combined with colour, by the new British Chemicolour process, comparing favourably with American work.

Viewed at a night trade show, London Hippodrome. The reception was deservedly enthusiastic.—Bruce Allan, London.

Newsy

News shots for this edition of the series include some picturesque glimpses of several Hollywood famous eating places which are noted not only for the excellence of their food and their celebrated patronage but also for the clever and weird architectural forms they possess; a demonstration by Warren William of his latest invention, which turns out to be a portable barbecue wagon; a baby party given by Arline Judge, at which affair such famous screen ladies as Evelyn Venable, Karen Morley, Sally Eilers and Louise Fazenda display with evident pride and satisfaction their adorable offspring; a cricket match between David Niven and Nigel Bruce and photographed by Merle Oberon, and in conclusion a parade of the greatly publicized Victor McLaglen Light Horse Troop, all done up in the real style of fancy uniforms, a full size band, and prancing horses. The entire collection is done with entertaining effect. Running time, 10 minutes.

A well assorted collection of entertainers entertain. The subject is novel and timely and suitable for any program.—Running time, 11 minutes.

The Story of Norton I

(Columbia)

Of Interest

Of interest is this latest oddity from the Strange As It Seems series which records the strange behaviour of a citizen of San Francisco who imagined himself "Norton I, Emperor of the United States." In 1857 when the market collapsed he lost a fortune but managed to pay all his debts. The experience weakened his mind and thereafter he chose to be an emperor. His was an exemplary character and San Franciscans, in sympathy, humored his idiosyncrasies. Ten thousand attended his funeral and an inscription on his tombstone records his imaginary title. Running time. 9 minutes.

A Vitaphone Pictorial Revue

(Warner)

Very Good

An entertaining "Pictorial Revue" number, this subject is chiefly concerned with marine and animal life. However, room has been made for Arthur Treacher to deliver a little talk on the "art" of preparing a fish sauce, and there is a sequence devoted to life aboard a cruise ship, which is in color. Animal friendships, a cat and a rabbit, a dog and a raccoon, a dog and leopard cubs, and a cat and chickens, make for an odd assortment. Fishing for tuna completes the lineup. Narrated by Paul Douglas. Running time, 11 minutes.

Tin Can Tourist

Timely

At a time when automobile trailers engage, one way or another, the interest of the mobile population, this Terry-Toon cartoon depicting the most fantastically complete and begadgeted of them all is of considerable interest. It does everything for its passengers except protect them from bumble bees, a circumstance giving rise to the expectable conclusion.—Running time, 6½ minutes.

It's All Over

(Vitaphone)

Tiresome

It is the night before his wedding and the gay blade Dan Healy goes ruminating via the cup that cheers. Growing mellow with memories of his former heart conquests, Healy gazes longingly at their photographs and then with a fond sigh consigns them to the limbo of the flames. But before they are discarded, the pictures dissolve into the animated likenesses of a bonnie Highland lass who sings a modern Scotch swing song, a dark Russian lady who chants an exotic ballad and flings pretzels at her audience, and finally a cool, young blonde from Bermuda who neither sings nor dances but just looks decorative. The songs and dances, though they cover a lot of ground, never seem to get anywhere in particular. The comedy lines sound strained. The whole thing is somewhat on the side of tiresome entertainment. Running time, 20 minutes.

Fun's Fun

Pleasant Pastime

Artist Jefferson Machamer distributes his insanely humorous talents and notoriously gorgeous gals liberally and with telling effect throughout this highly personal and amusing story about himself by himself. He's genuinely funny, in a new way, and he gives Eleanore Bunker and others their share of lens attention, the others including various dance acts and models. The appeal is mainly above the 12-year line, and it is refreshing. Running time, 19 minutes.

Going Places, No. 32

(Universal)

Interesting

The itinerary for the latest number of this collection takes the spectator to two widely different locales as Bryce Canyon in Utah and a bird aviary at Vancouver, B. C. The first part of the subject is devoted to some splendidly photographed shots of the natural wonder spot of the West which has been fashioned into weird but beautiful sculpture shapes by the mysterious process of erosion. The second section is given over to visiting the bird sanctuary of Charlie Jones who as the result of years of training has reduced a variety of feathered creatures to a state of remarkable tameness. The intelligent and brisk commentary by Lowell Thomas, together with the general excellence of the entire composition, makes this number far above the average rate for entertainment. Running time, 8½ minutes.

(20th Century-Fox)

Stimulating Travelogue

Mongolia, the land of Ghengis Khan and currently a vital factor in the Far Eastern political equation, is visited informatively and discussed intelligently (by Lowell Thomas) in this Magic Carpet Movietone release. The scenes combine the allure of the ancient and the appeal of the timely in a subject that has the traditionally golden virtue of leaving its beholders wishing for more. It's appropriate for any screen any time.—Running time, 10 minutes.

School for Swing

(Universal)

Musical Short

Mr. Russ Brown and Miss Sylvia Froos conduct a School for Swing. One Vashya Backoff, supposedly a leading swing magnate, is led to view the institution's talent. Wally and Ver'dyn Stapleton do their collective stuff of tap dancing. Miss Froos offers two songs and some evidence of the song ability that has made her a radio headliner. The visitor is obviously impressed but his presence is far from welcome when it is discovered, yes you guessed it, that he is but a dealer in swings and hammocks. The whole affair is lively enough and the result is much better than was to be expected from the story at hand. Running time, 10 minutes.

FRENCH HOPE POLITICAL SITUATION WILL PERMIT A GOOD CINEMA YEAR

110 Features Made by French Studios in Past Year, 30 of Them Were Considered on Par With Foreign Subjects

by PIERRE AUTRE

in Paris

French studios turned out 110 features in 1936, five fewer than in the preceding year, but the quality in general was high, at least 30 of them were strong enough to vie with the large foreign features on the international market.

One of the principal characteristics of French product is that it is made by independent producers who never produce more than three or four films in the year, more often only one or two.

This system of independent production has had very sucecssful results. With the exception of the big foreign films, it is the French feature with French dialogue and acted by French film stars which is the most highly appreciated on the French market.

The outstanding French pictures were these:

Sous Les Yeux De L'Occident ("Seen by Western Eyes"), directed by Marc Allegret, with Pierre Blanchar;

Seven Men . . . and One Woman, with Fernand Gravey;

Menilmontant, a film giving a curious insight into life in a famous popular district in Paris;

Le Grand Refrain, musical comedy with Fernand Gravey;

L'Appel du Silence (Call of the Wilderness), directed by Léon Poirer, a film depicting the life of the French monk, Père de Foucault, in the Sahara;

Mayerling, directed by Anatol Litvak, with Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux;

Le Roi ("The King"), an outstanding French stage play which has been filmed with an all-star cast;

Les Bas-Fonds ("Underworld"), from Maxime Gorki's novel, directed by Jean Renoir, with Jean Gabin, Louis Jouvet, and Junie Astor;

Mister Flow, detective story, with Fernand Gravey, Louis Jouvet and Edwige Feuillère, directed by Robert Siodmak;

Nitchevo, a sub-marine drama directed by Jacques de Baroncelli, starring Harry Baur, and Marcelle Chantal;

Un Grand Amour De Beethoven ("Beethoven's Great Love"), directed by Abel Gance, with Harry Baur in the title role;

Jenny, the first film of a promising young French director, Marcel Carné, with Françoise Rosay (Mrs. Jacques Feyder), Albert Préjean, Lisette Lanvin, Jean-Louis Barrault and Robert Le Vigan;

Le Mioche ("The Kid"), with Lucien Baroux;

Samson (from Henry Bernstein's famous play, with Harry Baur;

Les Hommes Nouveaux ("The New Men"), depicting the life of the first French settlers in Morocco, with Harry Baur, directed by Marcel Lherbier;

Cesar, written and directed by Marcel Pagnol, the author of "Marius" and "Topaze";

DENMARK PLANNING LEGION OF DECENCY

Plans to found a "Legion of Decency" in Denmark have been formulated with a view to limiting the importation of indecent pictures. A board of examination has been appointed by the Department of Justice and methods of governmental control are being discussed. In conjunction with the plan, action will be started to increase the popularity of the domestic industry, once well-known through features starring Asta Nielsen and Psylander. At present the level of domestic production is low.

Le Mort En Fuite ("The Fugitive Dead-Man") with Michel Simon and Marie Glory;

Avec Le Sourire ("Keep smiling"), directed by Maurice Tourneur and starring Maurice Chevalier;

L'Homme Du Jour, with Chevalier directed by Julien Duvivier;

Helene, from Vicky Baum's novel, "Helene Vilfur," with Madeleine Renaud, Jean-Louis Barrault, Constant Rémy, and Robert Le Vigan, directed by Jean Benoit-Lévy;

Les Amants Terribles ("Private Lives"), French version of Noel Coward's play, with Gaby Morlay and André Luguet;

Tarass Boulba, a Russian story directed by Alexis Granowski with Harry Baur;

La Porte Du Large ("Door to the Open Sea"), depicting the life of the French Cadets in the new Naval College at Brest, with Roland Toutain, Victor Francen, Marcelle Chantal, and Jean-Pierre Aumont, directed by Marcel Lherbier;

Club De Femmes ("Girls' Club"), written and directed by Jacques Deval, with Valentine Tessier, Danielle Darrieux, Betty Stockfeld, and Junie Astor;

La Belle Equipe ("The Fine Team"), directed by Julien Duvivier, with Jean Gabin, Charles Vanel, Aymos and Viviane Romance;

La Tendre Ennemie directed by Max Ophuls, with Simone Berriau;

Le Roman D'Un Tricheur, ("The Life of a Cheater"), written, directed and played by Sacha Guitry;

Le Crime De Monsieur Lange, directed by Jean Renoir.

Twenty-five French talking pictures were made in foreign studios, mainly in Germany, where UFA produced 13 and Tobis 2.

Three French speaking versions of English films were made in British studios; The Beloved Vagabond, with Maurice Chevalier; The Guilty Melody ("Le Disque 413"), with Gitta Alpar, and more recently The Widow's Island, with Marcelle Chantal.

Five French speaking films were made in Prague, of which the most important is Port Arthur (Tobis), directed by Nikolas Farkas, with Danielle Darrieux.

The quality and quantity of French films produced certainly would have been higher but for the economic changes brought about by the new Governmet last May

The new social laws, the new working conditions, higher wages, abolition of extra hour work in studios and laboratories, the 40-hour week, have increased the cost of films and made the recovery of cost more difficult.

25 French Films Made in Foreign Studios, Most of Them by UFA; Production Costs Are Increased by Laws

Suppression of "extra working hours", while in many ways inconvenient, has at least obliged producers to prepare their work more seriously than before, and to eliminate loss of time wherever possible.

Original Character

French films, made by independent producers have acquired an original character. We have two general classes of French films: (1) Local pictures destined only for the French speaking markets, adaptations of musical comedies, vaudeville shows, or popular plays. These films are made especially for the masses. They do not cost a great deal and they are successful financially.

(2) French films destined for the international markets with important production scope and first class stars. Still to be balanced, however, is the matter of film subjects. Too many of the subjects are still copies of plays, successful on the stage but not always chosen with enough discernment for the screen.

Moral Tone of Films

In the year, and after publication of the Encyclical of Pope Pius XI, "Vigilanti Cura," on the cinema, a movement arose to improve the moral standards of motion pictures. The pronounced commercial success of such a picture as L'Appel du Silence ("Call of the Wilderness"), awarded the "Grand Prix" for films in France for 1935, was evident that wholesome films are a good investment.

The French cinematographic press has an important role to play in this matter, as in France there is no censorship of fitness of films for general audiences as in England or in Belgium.

Apart from the Catholic press such as the weekly "Choisir," the main French cinema trade publication "La Cinematographie Francaise" and the weekly fan magazine "Pour Vous" have recently started giving classifications of all new films, in two categories: "A" for adults only, and "G" or "B" for universal view.

Prospects for This Year

It is still somewhat difficult to foresee what French production will be like this year. Political conditions will certainly be one important factor.

While it has been announced that films will be made, at the present moment no more than a dozen are in production and about 20 are in the cutting rooms or ready for release, as follows:

Courrier-Sud ("Southern Mail"), from St. Exupéry's novel, "Night Flight," a film showing the life of the pilots in the first days of the air line Paris-Toulouse-Casablanca-Dakar.

Les Nuits Blanches ("White Nights"), directed by Julien Duvivier, with Jean Gabin and Mireille Ballin, the background of the film being the Arab quarter of Algiers;

Le Chemin de Rio ("The Road to Rio"), directed by Robert Siodmak;

Paris, from René Benjamin's stage play with Harry Baur

Plea for Lawyer Fees Is Denied in Paramount Case

In effect serving notice that multiplication of security holders' protective committees in bankruptcy reorganizations under the amended bankruptcy legislation will not be countenanced, the supreme court in Washington on Monday, without opinion, refused to review the action of the New York federal court in rejecting applications for allowances exceeding $100,000 filed by Archibold Palmer; Louis Boehm, his attorney and Samuel Zirn, as representatives of security owners in the Paramount reorganization.

Mr. Palmer had sought an allowance of $15,000 for services as representative of 3,220 shares of common stock, $50,000 of bonds of Allied Owners' Corporation, a creditor, and a committee of first mortage bondholders of Allied Owners' Corporation, claiming he had secured a reduction in the rate of interest charged Paramount which saved the company $117,184 and had also secured an amendment to the reorganization plan providing for a more representative board of directors. Mr. Boehm, as Mr. Palmer's attorney, sought $10,000. Mr. Zirn asked for $75,000 for legal services and $1,207 for expenses incurred while attorney for certain bondholders.

The three claims were rejected in toto by the New York court on the ground that stockholders' committees were already in existence. In the case of Mr. Palmer, the court also pointed out that Allied Owners Corporation had represented its own interests as a creditor, and rejected as of little value the changes in the reorganization plan which he relied upon.

Meanwhile, the dinner to Adolph Zucker by theatre owners in the New York territory in celebration of his Silver Jubilee will take place on March 27 at the Waldorf-Astoria, it was announced this week as Mr. Zukor left for Hollywood. William Brandt, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, said that many national figures, as well as prominent stars in all branches of show business, would attend. The following have been invited to serve on the committee under Mr. Brandt: W. J. Van Schmus, Howard S. Cullman, Charles C. Moskowitz, George Skouras, Nate Blumberg, A. H. Schwartz, Samuel Rinzler, Lawrence Bolognino, Si Fabian, Walter Reade, Leo Brecher, Harry Schiffman, Joseph Bernhard and Louis F. Blumenthal.

Wallace Smith, Writer, Is Dead in Hollywood

Wallace Smith, novelist, magazine writer and illustrator and author of numerous screen plays, died in Hollywood Sunday night following a heart attack. He was 48 years old.

He was a veteran of four Mexican campaigns, two of which he served with Pancho Villa. One of his first novels, "The Little Tigress," had a Mexican setting. Prior to coming to California eight years ago he was employed on a Chicago newspaper.

His screen plays included "Two Arabian Knights," "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and the recent "The Gay Desperado."

FRANK BUCK BRINGS JUNGLE FOR SERIAL

The initial boatload of wild animals for "The Jungle Menace", Columbia serial which will star Frank Buck, left Singapore this week for New York. The cargo includes tigers, black leopards, orang-outangs, four pythons each more than 25 feet long and 500 monkeys. The strange company is in charge of "Ollie", Malay boy who has been with the explorer for 22 years and who also will have a role in the picture.

January and February are calm months in the French studios, and it is rarely before March that the plans of the French producers take shape, or at least are definitely confirmed.

Technical Deficiencies

The technique of French films is generally good and the studios are well equipped. However, there is much to be said on the quality of the sound recording, which, although with excellent systems, does not equal the recording of American films.

This is due mainly to carelessness in technical treatment, in the developing and printing.

In 1936 there was no production of short subjects except a few sketches, or documentaries, such as Terre D'Amour ("La Provence"), Fontainebleau, Le Rouergue. These films have unfortunately, a very restricted run and booking because of the double features programs which have been adopted by the majority of the Theatres.

A group of young cinema journalists met on the same day as the Grand Prix was awarded, and gave to Jean Revoir's "Les Bas Fonds" the honor of Grand Prix Louis Delluc, in memory of the French director who died twelve years ago.

March of Time Ends Second Year

With the February issue ready for release, March of Time has completed its second year of operation. The first issue, in February, 1935, was shown in 400 theatres in the United States and the present issue will be exhibited in 9,982 houses, according to RKO officials who handle its distribution.

The more than 75 individual stories included in the reel since its first issue have been sequences built around Prince Kimmochi Sainji, Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, Huey P. Long, the Rev. Charles E. Goughlin, Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, Father Divine, President Roosevelt, Francois de la Rocque, Adolph Hitler and Leon Degrelle.

1936 Film Review In Reich Largely Triumphs of Nazis

With the reviews of the year in order, Dr. Paul Josephs Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment of the Nazi party in Berlin, and his aides, have been occupied in recent weeks in deciding just which among the happenings of 1936 should be recalled to the attention of the German public. Their censorial activity extends over the field of motion pictures and the results are seen in the newsreel summaries of the year which are now in the Berlin theatres, says Ralph W. Barnes, special correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune in Berlin, in a copyrighted dispatch this week.

Berlin theatres are featuring newsreels that have no chronological order, Mr. Barnes reports. Only three events, during the 10 minutes of the reel, concern happenings outside of Germany: the death of King George V of England, Premier Benito Mussolini's proclamation on May 9 of the annexation of Ethiopia and the outbreak of the Spanish civil war.

The reel opens with the death of the king and shifts quickly to the opening of the Olympic Games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, to be followed in quick succession by the ceremonies in the stadium in Berlin. Next is the pictorial record of the re-establishment "of full German sovereignty over the Rhineland." Adolph Hitler's election follows and the film moves on to May Day and the speech of the Reischsfuehrer. Then comes the Italian proclamation and the maiden flight of the Zeppelin Hindenburg, the Nazi party congress at Nuremberg, a review of the increased army and the juggling of chronology continues as the signing at Berlin in November of the German-Japanese alliance against the Cominters is portrayed immediately before the visit to Hitler by Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister.

On the anniversary on November 9 of the abortive Nazi putsch in 1923, Hitler leads his old guard in tribute at Munich to the victims of that event and then the film passes on to show Herman Goering and his actress wife entertaining poor children. The review closes with a Christmas Eve message via radio which Rudolf Hess, deputy leader of the Nazi party, delivered to Germans in foreign lands, urging them to be loyal to the new Germany, its ideology and its Fuehrer.

Thomas Spry Honored At Boston Dinner

Thomas B. Spry, new district manager in New England for United Artists, was honored at a dinner at the Statler hotel, Boston, last week. Exhibitors and distributor officials attended the banquet. Mr. Spry has been connected with the industry in the New England territory for over 20 years.

CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS RESUME WARFARE ON DOUBLE FEATURING

Many Groups Start Surveys in Schools, Churches, Offices and Homes To Determine How Many Want Dual Bills

Protest Effect on Family Type Programs, Urge Greater Attention to Short Subjects and Newsreels of High Calibre

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

"Down with double features" is the emphatic word from many Chicago women's clubs. "We want well-balanced single feature programs, not two misfit pictures that lose their entertainment value when shown on a double bill."

Chicago clubwomen are uniting against double features, which were revived in this city last fall by the Balaban & Katz circuit after having been abolished three years ago. The women are conducting surveys in schools and churches, offices and homes, to determine just what percentage of the people wants double features and why. At the last meeting of the Better Films Council of Chicagoland and a poll showed unanimous preference for single bills.

"Thinking people are opposed to double features," said Mrs. Richard M. McClure, president of the Better Films Council. "Two pictures on one program are an overdose—an emotional disturbance. Our main objection is that in the majority of cases pictures which are suitable for the family trade are often double billed with pictures for adult and mature minds only. Exhibitors say they have to book pictures this way to appeal to both audiences. That may be so, but it often results in keeping both types of audience away from the theatre."

In the last six months the Better Films Council previewed 185 films; 78 were listed as family pictures, 67 as adult and young adult classification and 40 as in the adult division. As a result the council points out that though difficult it is possible to play two family pictures on the same bill.

Members of the organization report that often when one picture has an "adults only" permit and the other a "general permit," the "adults only" sign is not displayed. Such violations of the city ordinance hereafter are to be reported to police headquarters.

One leader in the women's group said the adoption of double features had resulted in a steady rise in the number of youngsters frequenting taverns and night clubs, as usually one of the group had seen one of the doubled pictures.

Another clubwoman said double features tended to keep young folk in the theatre for too long a time, in the dimly lighted balcony.

One of the issues brought forth by the clubwomen is the failure of theatres to show short subjects and newsreels when double features are the policy. The balanced program, they pointed out, lessens the emotional and entertainment value which pictures have.

Pictures of a historical or literary nature, it was brought out, are often on a double bill with inferior films. And one club leader added that the program became too long.

Various women's groups reported they had written to Balaban & Katz asking that double features be dropped but had had no results and that sterner methods will be used. Some of the groups have gone so far as to ask every club-member to protest each time she attends a theatre showing double features.

CIRCUIT IN DENVER MONOPOLIZES BLOCK

What is probably the country's most compact circuit of three houses has been formed through the sale of the Center theatre to the J. B. Melton interests in Denver.

With two of their houses, the Center and the Colorado, next door to each other and just across the street from the Victory, the original house in the group, the houses are less than 200 feet apart.

Not only are Chicago clubwomen and citizens objecting, but also many exhibitors. Outside of circuit managers, the protest from theatremen has been loud and lusty. They say the reason they play the duals is to protect their own interests. The grosses which many expected have failed to materialize. B. & K. executives are said to be personally opposed to the double feature plan, but they claim they do better business with the duals. The real reason for duals here is generally conceded to be the desire by B. & K. to play all of the product it buys.

Twenty-one individuals and 114 theatre corporations will be represented in the hearing in Judge Sostenby's court on February 10th, when the cases of the city police department against theatres who violated the chance game ordinance will be heard.

Complaints against the 114 corporations and 21 individuals have been filed by William V. Daley, assistant city corporation counsel. Theatres which operated Bank Night, Screeno and other games in violation of the city ordinance are the ones facing a maximum fine of $100. It is the desire of the city, according to reports, to have the full penalty given. Theatremen, it is understood, will put up a strong battle before turning over $14,000 in fines to the city.

At the Chicago this week the appearance of Veloz and Yolanda on the stage and also in "The Champagne Waltz" on the screen, is doing record-breaking business.

The ban on music records put into effect this week by James C. Petrillo, head of the musicians' union, may boom European recording companies, it was indicated here.

Radio stations which use recordings in early morning and late night musical programs will face the alternative of hiring more musicians and dramatic talent and supplanting their recorded shows with "live" talent, which is the union's hope, or using foreign recordings.

The music czar grew irate when records of the proposed importation reached his ears. Petrillo said:

"They want to get tough, hey? If they dare to go that far, we'll take the matter to the president, himself. Such talk is nonsense. The European bands cannot compete with American organizations in quality of music."

At WJJD and WIND it was pointed out that they were not hit directly by the ban.

New Vatican Publication Seeks Film Refinement

"Piani Primi" (First Steps) is the title of a semi-monthly periodical, opulently illustrated and attractive and tasteful in typographical set-up, which is to be regularly published by the Vatican at Rome, as the supplement to "L'Illustrazione Vaticana." The new periodical aims at elevation and refinement of film, drama and radio conception and production.

Foremost Italian critics and writers, including Ernesto Ugo Gramazio, Virgilio Scattolini, Manlio Miserocchi, and Francesco Muti, contribute to the film section, which occupies fourth-fifths of the issue. Outstanding personalities and productions of the American screen are featured, as examples of moral and intellectual tone in filming in this country and distribution abroad. The screen version of Ouida's "Under Two Flags," the Grace Moore-Franchot Tone picture, "The King Steps Out," and Charlie Chaplin and his most famous characterizations are the subjects of special articles, while Joe Brown and Lionel Barrymore figure among the photos. Shirley Temple comes in for several portrait studies. Photo credits are given in each instance to producing studios. Two pages are devoted to the new "film city" of Quadraro, on the outskirts of the Eternal City.

Kinotrade, headed by Roman Rebush in New York, is distributing "Arshin Mal Alan" ("The Vagabond Lover"), reported to be the first Armenian sound picture produced in this country.

NEED U.S. FILMS TO EXIST, SAY BRITONS

Answer Ostrer's Suggestion That Americans Be Required to Spend Fourth of Intake

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

Motion picture exhibition in Great Britain would be physically and commercially impossible without American product, practical business men in London commented after reading the London newspapers' extensive reports of Isidore Ostrer's suggestion that the Government require American producers to buy British productions in the proportion of 25 per cent of the money taken out of England by American pictures.

The president of Gaumont-British maintained silence regarding the objects and success, or ill-success, of his American trip—a silence in which his brother and fellow-voyager, Maurice Ostrer, shared while making a series of pronouncements to reporters.

Saying that Gaumont-British was considering abandonment of production and that a final decision would be reached by March, Mr. Ostrer followed the prevailing fashion by laying the blame on the American market. "Unless we can obtain larger revenues from the United States, we shall close down on production and rely on our prosperous theatre business," he said, qualifying the statement later by saying that "big picture" production was impossible without better American receipts.

Possibly anticipating the retort that a decision in these matters might finally rest with John Maxwell rather than with the Ostrer brothers, he added that there had been no change in the control of the Gaumont-British Corporation. This was his only comment on the situation which arose during his American trip, when he made numerous statements regarding the Maxwell-GB deal which clashed with the official statements earlier issued in London.

On the following day, Mr. Ostrer, pursued by press inquiries, issued a statement which more or less reiterated the words put in his mouth by the reporters at Southampton. The statement follows:

"I am not gloomy, I am realistic. At present we are a third-class film power and we shall soon slip even from that position. The Government intended by the Quota Act to nourish the film industry, not merely as a source of employment but because a first class power must have first class cultural propaganda and means of expression.

A Proposal to Government

"One effect of the Act has been to induce inexperienced people to try to pick up easy money by making quota quickies. This hasn't been good for their financial backers or for the country.

"The other effect has been to induce American producers to make pictures here—and that also denies the prime purpose of the Act.

"I have a concrete proposal to make to the Government.

"They must realize by now that pictures made for the English speaking world cannot pay either cultural or cash dividends unless they do in fact achieve a world market. They can secure that market in this way:

"Let them say to American producers: 'By all means continue to take from seven to ten million pounds yearly from this country for your pictures—but you must buy from us genuine British pictures to a value of, let us say, twenty-five per cent of that amount.'

ENGLISH CIRCUIT USES RADIO TIEUP

The use of radio as an additional outlet for motion picture publicity is increasing in England. "Film Time" with news from the studios and details of the latest films by the "Man on the Set" (Phillip Slessor) is broadcast from Radio Lyons on 215 metres from 4:30 to 5 P. M. The programs are sponsored by the Campbell Soup Company with the cooperation of Odeon Theatres. All Odeon houses give the broadcast widespread publicity.

Suggests Producer Licenses

"The machinery could be evolved easily. It might need to include licenses for genuine British producers from the Board of Trade.

"I am quite definite in saying that Gaumont-British will not continue in production unless by this or some similar means—and this is by far the simplest and most effective—a way is found to overcome the resistance, not of the American public (we have proved that it has a great welcome for good British pictures), but of powerful interests in the American industry."

As an important postcript to this suggestion, Mr. Ostrer added that if the Government "was in fact determined to achieve the intentions, which had so woefully miscarried, by which the Quota Act had been inspired," he believed that "American producing companies would in fact forestall any legislation by voluntarily entering into an arrangement of the kind proposed."

Finally: "I don't believe that legislation would be necessary if the Government showed their determination to set a period to a situation which permitted from seven to ten million pounds worth of British pictures to be sold into England annually while no more than two or three hundred thousand pounds' worth were bought here."

In various individual press reports quoting Mr. Ostrer, other statements are to be found which carry his arguments somewhat further. In the Evening News he is quoted as saying:

"We have had good films and have done good business" (in America). "We shall get in about £4,000,000 in about six months. We should be making a fortune if we were on equality there, but the progress is not economically quick enough. It is not fair to our shareholders to ask them to wait while we are getting back our costs.

"One method of securing equality with the Americans would be by combining our cinema interests with others in this country. Then we could refuse to take American films unless they tooks ours. But the better way is for the Government to make the Americans spend part of their British profits on British pictures."

What the Trade Thinks

The first comments on Mr. Ostrer's views, informally expressed in trade circles, were to the effect that they are not particularly new and that, in some respects, they disregarded trade facts. There was particularly pungent comment on the suggestion that British interests might combine to refuse American films. It was pointed out that, if a state of affairs had arisen in which the British box-office were independent of American pictures there would scarcely be a British production problem. The contrary is the fact, they said; exhibition would be impossible without American product.

There was some comment on the fact that Mr. Ostrer's contempt for the £20,000-£30,000 pictures contrasted directly with the views of Mr. Maxwell, who has been understood to contemplate revising GB production policy in that direction if and when his control of the company became effective.

Personnel Changes

Also noted was the absence of comment on the fact that GB recently had lost its director of production, and three other executives, and in fact had very seriously curtailed production since the recent financial crisis in the company.

That Mr. Ostrer's pronouncement, blandly disregarding the question of film quality, might serve a useful purpose in diverting interest in GB's internal problems to more general matters was a suggestion not infrequently heard in Wardour Street.

Moyne Report Attacked

The recommendations of the Moyne committee "by the very nature of the complexity of the film industry cannot but fail to achieve the main purpose for which the Films Act was devised, that British films should be produced and shown in Great Britain," it was said this week in a letter from the Kinematograph Renters' Society to the Board of Trade. The letter embodied the organization's views on the recent report of the Lord Moyne committee suggesting changes in the Film Act, which expires in 1938.

British National Unit Dropped

British National of America, Ltd., originally formed late in November as an American producing company chiefly financed by British banking and film interests, has been abandoned, following the decision of Lord Ragnor of England, chairman of the board of British Colonial Trust, London, and listed as president of the new company, to withdraw his financial support from the American venture.

Four British Pictures Sold by Edward Klein

Edward L. Klein, who sailed for London this week, disposed of four British productions for the American market during his stay here. Included are "When Knights Were Bold," "Marriage of Corbal," "Southern Roses" and "Public Nuisance No. 1." All four films were produced by Capitol Film Productions of London and were acquired by Imperial Distributing Corporation.

While in New York, Mr. Klein concluded an agreement with Louis A. Solomon for the marketing of independent features and short subjects. Mr. Klein will manage sales in the United Kingdom and the British colonies and will supervise the work of the Paris office. Mr. Solomon, who has established headquarters in the RKO Building, Radio City, New York, will handle the sales for the American continents and the Far East.

Metro-British Plans

Announcement that three old associates of Michael Balcon at Gaumont-British had joined him at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios, was followed by definite news of MGM's first plans on the floor. The three new executives, to work under Mr. Balcon as producer, are Harold Boxall, production manager, Angus McPhail, scenario editor, and S. C. Balcon, a brother of "Mickey," associate producer. All three of them are starting work right away preparing for production of "The Wind and the Rain" and "Rage in Heaven," with "A Yank at Oxford" as the probable third of MGM's big pictures here.

That work would begin on the floor, on one of these pictures at least, by March was also stated by MGM, but just what floor was still officially undecided. Unofficially, it is understood that negotiations with the Soskin interests for a long-term rental of a floor at the new Amalgamated Studios are far advanced, but that preliminary use of the at present unoccupied Twickenham plant was at least discussed. A possibility that the GB plant at Shepherd's Bush might be available for hire also may have been in mind. The statement of Mr. Isidore Ostrer, on his return from America, that GB might go out of production, and would make a decision in March, emphasized, probably accidentally, that MGM and other American producers, will find British studio space easy enough to come by.

March, at any rate, is likely to be an interesting month in British production. Whatever MGM does, the Amalgamated studio will be active at that date, probably at the instance of Paul Soskin, who will be getting busy with his eight "big pictures" contract for Columbia. The Amalgamated plant, by all accounts, promises to prove as remarkable as that at Pinewood.

Royal Home as Set

Widgey Newman, one of the most enterprising of British producers of novelty features, has just filmed Marlborough House, home of Queen Mary, for "Our Royal Heritage," a Coronation release, the rentals to go to the George V Memorial Fund. Authenticity of background seldom has been obtained in quite the same degree as in this picture, for which Mr. Newman was permitted to carry his cameras and lights through the whole of the living rooms. Dining room, drawing rooms and other apartments will be seen exactly as they are in daily use, and there will be closeups of such interesting features as Queen Mary's writing desk, presentation jewelry, and several famous pictures. In all Mr. Newman got 3,000 feet towards a feature likely to prove of considerable documentary interest.

Dora Nirva, England's only woman film producer, is shown conferring on the set with Arthur Riscoe during the shooting of British National's "Interval for Romance" at the Pinewood studios.

Denham "B" Films

The first of the Denham Film Productions, made by the joint Alexander Korda-S. W. Smith unit for release by British Lion, has gone on the floor under the direction of William Cameron Menzies. It is "Four Dark Hours," an original by Graham Greene, who wrote the best seller, "Gun for Sale." Arthur Wimperis wrote the dialogue. John Mills and Rene Ray are leads.

Importance attaches to this subject as the first instance of a "B" picture policy on the part of Alexander Korda. Denham Film Productions is, of course, a separate unit from London Film Productions, but the personnel of the production unit has a pronounced "London" flavor. Menzies directed "Things to Come;" the cameraman, Osmond Borrodaile, has just finished shooting on "Elephant Boy," and the publicity announcement comes from the "London" press department.

'Red Robe' Rough-Cut

New World's "Under the Red Robe" is so near completion that James Clark, film editor, practically has finished his rough-cut, but the few final scenes are employing practically all of the leads. Conrad Veidt, Annabella, Sophie Stewart and Romney Brent have all been on the floor this week under Victor Seastrom's direction. A great deal of the recent shooting has been in a set of the hall of Cardinal Richelieu's castle, a huge flagged expanse, stone-pillared, and with a massive "Gothic" oak door. Brent's comedy role of Marius has been built up since the picture started.

Premier-Stafford

Premier-Stafford, which has the unusual distinction among British independent producers of having made films profitably for close upon seven years, has four features scheduled for early production. They are "The Man with Two Faces," from the Hungarian play by Rudolph Lothar; "Tradition," a military-historical item for which the cooperation of the Brigade of Guards has been obtained; "Backs to the Wall," with Haig's message to the British Army as its text; and "Lady Precious Stream," from a stage play with a two years' London run to its credit. The last named will be in color. All of these films will be on the biggish scale of P-S's earlier "Crouching Beast."

Itemized

National Provincial, which handled the ambitious "Mill on the Floss," also will distribute.

"Mr. Stringfellow Says No" is in production at Sound City by Incorporated Talking Films. Neil Hamilton is starred.

Alex Bryce is directing "With the Tide" for Fox-British at Wembley.

Ralph C. Wells, managing director of Rembrandt Film Productions, has joined the board of Hope-Bell Productions, which is to make "Rose of Tralee" at the Stoll studio, Cricklewood.

Ralph Ince is directing "It's Not Cricket," and Arthur Woods "The Windmill" for Warner-British at Teddington.

Alexander Film Productions has signed the Diamond Brothers for "Three Mad Men," at the Rock studios.

Monopoly Suit Brought By Philippine Circuit

An action charging monopoly and restraint of trade has been brought by the Arco Amusement Company, Inc., in the Manila, P. I., court of first instance against Warner Brothers First National Pictures (Philippines), Inc., United Artists Corporation, Fox Film Export Company and several Philippine exchanges and distributors. The three American companies have filed a demurrer denying the changes.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 54

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Question No. 54 was: (A) What is the temperature of the crater floor of an electric arc? (B) Explain why current will not flow until the carbons are in actual contact, but will flow after they have been contacted and separated by considerable distance. (C) Is special treatment necessary for each of the several arc light sources available for projection?

The following made acceptable replies: C. Rau and S. Evans; D. H. Danielson; A. L. Cooper; G. E. Doe; L. F. Hayes; O. H. Schmidt; S. O. Sears; C. Champney; W. Edmonds; . B. Smith; W. C. Brown; W. (A) H. B. Smith says: "The temperature of crater floor varies somewhat. The straight arc temperature is approximately 3,500 degrees Centigrade, or 6,500 degrees Fahrenheit. The newer types of arc, high intensity and Suprex for example, have a somewhat higher temperature, though just what it is I have been unable to ascertain."

Many, in fact in excess of 200, said essentially the same thing. Not being myself entirely certain in this matter I have consulted the Arc Department of the National Carbon Company, which high authority says:

"The average temperature of the positive crater of a low intensity carbon arc with cored carbons is about 3500° C. If the positive carbon were a solid one and loaded to its full capacity, the true temperature of this positive crater would be between 3650° and 3700° C. The presence of the core in the carbons used in most projection work results in a slight lowering of the temperature in the area occupied by the core.

"It is undoubtedly true that, in so far as a plain carbon arc is concerned, it is impossible to obtain a higher temperature than the 3650° to 3700° quoted above at atmospheric pressure, but in the high intensity and Suprex arcs there are other factors involved than the mere heating of a solid carbon to its volatilization temperature. High intensity and Suprex carbons are cored with a rather high concentration of compounds of the cerium group of rare earth metals. The high current density used in the high intensity and Suprex arcs produces the cup-shaped craters typical of these arcs and the high current density excites ions or gases of these metals so that their apparent temperature is much higher than the temperature of the crater floor of an ordinary carbon arc. This apparent temperature is in the neighborhood of 5300° to 5700° C. For practical purposes, therefore, one might say that the effective apparent temperature of the light source in the high intensity arc is about 5500° C."

Pertaining to question 54 (C), the same authority says:

"The correct distance for the position of the light source from the optical light collector is dependent upon the optical system and the size of the light source. The larger the light source the greater may be its displacement from the optical focus. In other words, the design of the optical system and the size of the light source are the two important factors.

"In the third paragraph of Mr. Prater's answers is the statement, 'The old style straight A.C. arc employs light from both craters.' So far as we are aware, no optical system has ever been devised which would practically collect the light from two craters in a carbon arc.

"Also there is the statement, 'All high intensity light sources, as well as Suprex, are extremely sensitive to correct crater-to-collector distance because there are three light colors emitted.' The remainder of the paragraph goes on to explain the sources of these different light colors, with which there can be perhaps practically no great disagreement. It is true that close adjustment is required if only the pure white light is to be used for projection, but again as in the comments with respect to the position of the light source and the reflector, this depends upon the optical system and the size of the light source."

(B) Dale Danielson replies thus: "Current will not flow between separated carbon tips charged at commercial voltage because of high resistance offered by the air gap. However, when the carbon tips are brought into physical contact this resistance no longer exists and current flows, heating the carbon at the point of contact sufficiently to volatize the carbon, the gas thus formed being itself a conductor of sorts. When, then, the carbons are again separated, the current, accepting the gas path thus provided, continues to flow, maintaining the volatization temperature at the carbon tips, and thus the gas path, until finally if the separation become too great, and therefore the resistance offered by the gas too high, so that the voltage can no longer overcome it, the current flow ceases, the path is broken and the arc is dead."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 58

(A) Name the chief points for and against glass bead screens. (B) Under what general conditions may various types of reflection surfaces be expected to give best results. Proceed carefully. This is an important question.

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

(C) J. R. Prater says: "Special treatment is necessary. The horizontal trim low intensity reflector arc requires that the negative be located slightly below the center of the positive, in order that the crater be kept squarely facing the collector.

"All high intensity light sources, as well as Suprex, are extremely sensitive to correct crater-to-collector distance because there are three light colors emitted. The carbon shell, the gas ball directly in front of crater and the gas stream send forward, respectively, yellowish, pure white and a less intense white light of blueish tone. Very close adjustment is required if only the pure white goes forward to the collector.

"Both the straight high intensity and the hi-lo reflector types must be so adjusted that the negative arc stream tends to confine the arc gases to the crater, since if they are permited to escape too rapidly, heavy light loss and an unstable arc will result.

"The new low-amperage, high-intensity Suprex light sources, with horizontal trim and non-rotating positive, require a special magnetic field above and below the arc to keep the arc stream moving steadily upward, thus stabilizing the arc. The new reflector type a.c. high intensity light sources burn with an arc gap as long as 0.35 of an inch; in fact, much the same as the low-intensity reflector arcs.

U.S. LISTS 217 MORE SALARIES

Additional salaries reported to Congress in supplemental lists by the Treasury Department included, principally, the Loew-MGM list, headed by Greta Garbo with $332,500 for 1935; Clark Gable, $211,553; Wallace Beery, $278,740; William Powell, $238,750; Joan Crawford, $241,403; Franchot Tone, $73,124; Lionel Barrymore, Constance Bennett, Jack Benny, Clarence Brown, Ronald Colman, Ann Harding, Jean Harlow, the Marx brothers, Jeannette MacDonald, Robert Montgomery, $100,000 or more.

382 PICTURES ELIGIBLE FOR ACADEMY AWARD

Committee of 50 Members Soon Will Nominate Films and Individuals by Secret Ballot

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood has begun selecting production and talent nominees for its annual awards, the winners of which will be announced at its annual banquet, on March 4th.

A total of 382 feature pictures will be considered this year, and from this number will finally be picked the one film that will be called the "finest motion picture for 1936." Also from this group of productions will be chosen the awards for the best performances by an actor and an actress, the best example of direction, writing, photography, and the like.

At present a special nominating committee of 50 Academy members, ten from each major production branch, is studying the 382 pictures to select the ten features and five production achievements in each of the other awards classifications which will constitute the official nominations. Within the next few days, this committee will nominate by a secret ballot the films and artists for the various awards.

Nominations Announced

Already announced are the following nominations:

1. Black-and-white short subjects not exceeding 1,000 feet in length: "Wanted, A Master," MGM; "Bored of Education," Roach-MGM; "Moscow Moods," Paramount.
2. Short subject cartoons, black-and-white and colored: "The Country Cousin," Walt Disney-United Artists; "Sinbad the Sailor," Paramount; "The Old Mill Pond," Harmony-MGM.
3. Short subjects in color not more than 3,000 feet in length: "La Fiesta de Santa Barbara," MGM; "Popular Science J-62," Paramount; "Give Me Liberty," Warners.
4. Short subjects in black-and-white between 1,000 and 3,000 feet: "Dummy Ache," RKO; "The Public Pays," MGM; "Double or Nothing," Warners.
5. Original songs written for motion pictures: "Did I Remember," from "Suzy"; "I've Got You Under My Skin," from "Born to Dance"; "A Melody from the Sky," from "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"; "Pennies from Heaven," from the film of the same name; "The Way You Look Tonight," from "Swing Time"; and "When Did You Leave Heaven?", from "Sing, Baby, Sing." (Because of a tie vote for fifth place, six songs were nominated.)
6. Musical scores from motion pictures: "Anthony Adverse," "The Garden of Allah," "The General Died At Dawn," "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "Winterset."
7. Sound recordings from motion pictures: "Banjo On My Knee," "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Dodsworth," "General Spanky," "A Girl from Paris," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "San Francisco," "The Texas Rangers" and "Three Smart Girls."
8. Film editing: "Anthony Adverse," "Come and Get It," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Lloyds of London," "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Theodora Goes Wild."

Other Classes of Awards

Other classifications yet to be nominated, and from which single awards will be made, include: (1) Best production; (2) Acting, including best actor, best actress, and, representing a new classification, the best acting by an actor and an actress in supporting roles; (3) Directing; (4) Writing, including best written screen play and best original scenario; (5) Art direction; (6) Cinematography in black and white only; (7) Sound recording; (8) Assistant direction; (9) Dance direction, and the following special awards: (A) Scientific or technical achievement; for a device, method, formula, discovery or invention of special and outstanding value to the art, science or industry of motion picture production, and actually employed within the awards period; (B) Special Awards; for outstanding achievement not strictly within the previously-mentioned categories, which achievement may be in connection with foreign as well as domestic production. Special awards shall be in the form of gold statuettes or certificates of honorable mention.

The Committee Divisions

The five divisions comprising the major committee of 50, which now are working on the nominations, constitute the following:

Actors' Branch: Lionel Barrymore, Ronald Colman, Clark Gable, Edward Everett Horton, George Irving, DeWitt C. Jennings, Harold Lloyd, Carole Lombard, J. Farrell MacDonald and May Robson; Directors' Branch: Irving Cummings, Cecil B. DeMille, Alfred E. Green, Henry King, Frank Lloyd, Robert Z. Leonard, Mervyn LeRoy, Leo McCarey, Mark Rex Sandrich and W. S. VanDyke; Producers' Branch, Benjamin B. Kahane, Jesse L. Lasky, William LeBaron, Nat Levine, Robert Lord, Charles R. Rogers, David O. Selznick, Hunt Stromberg, Walter Wanger and Darryl Zanuck; Technicians' Branch: John Arnold, Cedric Gibbons, Ralph Hammeras, Franklin Hansen, Nathan Levinson, Thomas Moulton, Max Parker, Maurice Pivar, Van Nest Polglase and Joseph Walker; Writers' Branch: Sidney R. Buchman, Howard Estabrook, Howard J. Green, Grover Jones, Josephine Lovett, Sarah Y. Mason, Jane Murfin, Robert Riskin, Ernest Vajda and Waldemar Young.

The Committee on Rules includes: David O. Selznick, chairman, DeWitt C. Jennings, Frank Lloyd, Van Nest Polglase and Waldemar Young.

Other Committees

Membership of the cinematographic awards nomination committee consists of: Ray June, chairman of the Photographic Section of the branch, John Arnold, Joseph August, Norbert Brodine, George Crane, Edward Cronjager, Arthur Edeson, George J. Folsey, Jr., Fred Gage, Merritt B. Gerstad, Byron Haskins, Thomas Ingman, Charles B. Lang, Jr., Virgil Miller, Victor Milner, Ira Morgan, J. M. Nickolaus, L. William O'Connell, George Robinson, Karl Struss, John Swain, Joseph Valentine, Joseph Walker, Vernon Walker, and Ray Wilkinson.

Membership of the film editing award nomination committee, appointed by Harold J. McCord, chairman of the Film Editors' Section of the Branch, consists of: Martin G. Cohn, Ralph Dietrich, William Holmes, Harvey Johnston, Harold J. McCord, Gene Milford, Conrad Nervig, Murray Seldeen and I. James Wilkinson.

Membership of the art direction award nomination committee, appointed by Bernard Herzbrun, chairman of the Art Directors' Section of the Branch, consists of: Roland Anderson, Duncan Cramer, Perry Ferguson, Stephen Goosson, John Harkrider, Bernard Herzbrun, Fred Hope, John Hughes, Willy Pogany and A. Toluboff.

Companies Protest On Austrian Quota

Paris representatives of American distributors have suggested in cables to their home offices that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America make efforts to have the Austrian Government abolish the "kontingent" and abandon plans for increasing quota restrictions. The cables charge discrimination in favor of German and French producers and cite privileges allowed films from those countries.

A heavy import assessment has been levied on all American pictures besides the "kontingent" while German pictures are imported without restrictions, according to a law passed some time ago, it was reported. The cables, which were strongly worded, implied that moves for further increases in the "kontingent" are due to pressure brought by the German Government and it was reported that the Reich is trying to drive out American companies in as many countries as possible.

"The Kontingent should be done away with or the American Government should put Kontingents or some kind of restrictions on Austrian imports," the foreign sales representative said.

Provisions of a commercial treaty between the United States and Austria are now being worked out in Washington, it is believed, and unless the "kontingents" are removed American companies, which distribute about 150 pictures annually in that country, may be forced to withdraw.

Code Seal Placed On 1,759 Features

The Hollywood branch of the Production Code Administration reviewed and placed qualifying seals on 101 features and 64 short subjects in the two months from November 21, 1936, to January 23, 1937. A total of 1,759 features and 1,008 shorts from the large companies and independent producers have been given seals since the department was inaugurated on July 15, 1934. Only six features and one short of the total number approved in the last two months were reissues.

The record by companies follows:

Chadwick; two features.
Chesterfield; one feature.
Columbia; eight features, 12 short subjects.
Crescent; one feature.
Grand National; four features.
Mercader; one feature.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; eight features, 17 shorts.
Paramount; 13 features, three shorts.
Puritan; one feature.
RKO-Radio; seven features, two shorts.
Republic; 11 features.
States Rights; seven features, 1 short.
Television; three features.
Twentieth Century-Fox; 13 features, three shorts.
United Artists; one feature, two shorts.
Universal; nine features.
Warner Brothers; 12 features, six shorts.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea—It's interesting. Good entertainment.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN: Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea—Not so hot in general. Screwy plot gets no place and takes up plenty of film getting there. The supposedly dead-baby-in-a-coffin scene is in definite bad taste and should never have been left in as it was not essential to story. Played January 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

COME CLOSER, FOLKS: James Dunn, Marian Marsh—Just the kind of picture that pleases us up here in the sticks. It's full of laughs. Played January 21-22.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL: Jack Holt—Good entertainment. Holt is still popular here. They like his robust outdoor personality. Played January 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LADY FROM NOWHERE: Mary Astor, Charles Quigley—Satisfactory programmer, and at last Mary Astor comes out of her shell. She's quite human here as she drops that icy aloofness. She's an appealing heroine here. Played January 5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage. ..

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—On a par with, maybe even better, than the famous "It Happened One Night." Don't suppose it will attain the same degree of popularity, but it's worthy of it, nevertheless. Irene Dunne goes "wild" in grand fashion. Melvyn Douglas is perfect as her co-partner. Played January 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THEY MET IN A TAXI: Chester Morris, Fay Wray—A very entertaining picture. Everyone enjoyed it. Fair draw. Played January 19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

BRIDES ARE LIKE THAT: Ross Alexander, Anita Louise—A pleasing comedy. Running time, 67 minutes. Played December 18-19.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—A good action picture that pleased and paid its way. Running time, 89 minutes. Played January 11-13.—Beatty & Johnson, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—I have only one complaint to make about the "Gold Diggers" series; not since 1933 has there been a worthwhile story. It seems to me that a series of this magnitude would have stories that appeal to every one, stories that, although they may be comical, are also human, down-to-earth, deeply interesting. There is nothing sincere or appealing about the story in this picture; the audience forgets it two minutes after the show is over. The ensembles are well done, and credit is due Busby Berkeley, but why expect musical numbers to hold up a weak, shallow, artificial story? Inject real human plots into these "Gold Diggers" series, make the stories worthy of the box office value of the title, and something to be remembered. Make them as big as the title and dance numbers. Running time, 100 minutes. Played January 3-6.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

HERE COMES CARTER: Ross Alexander, Anne Nagel—Ross Alexander, as a wise-cracking radio commentator in "Here Comes Carter," dug one more notch toward becoming one of the most popular male stars at our box office. Too bad he's gone. Pleased 100 per cent and played to a nice business. Played December 30-31.—Ted Stump, Elted Theatre, Absarokee, Mont. Rural patronage.

SNOWED UNDER: George Brant, Genevieve Tobin—A comedy picture well liked by all of our patrons. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 4-5.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—Good for extra playing time.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

GB Pictures

LOVE IN EXILE: Clive Brook, Helen Vinson—Most of our audience abdicated their seats before this was over. I sat down to watch it, but I, too, eventually went in exile. My wife, brave and faithful soul, stayed until the end. Running time, 64 minutes. Played January 7.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Inc. General patronage.

TRANSATLANTIC TUNNEL: Richard Dix, Madge Evans—Because of Richard Dix we chose this one in preference to Jessie Matthews' recent picture, and the boys were a little disappointed. He is hardly the dynamic, rough and tumble star we knew in the "Cimarron" days. The plot itself is quite fantastic, involving "Buck Rogers" inventions. Shots of George Arliss and Walter Huston as Prime Minister of England and President of the United States, respectively, well done, but the best acting is performed by Helen Vinson. Popularity of the picture was a toss-up. Running time, 94 minutes. Played January 23.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Grand National

DEVIL ON HORSEBACK, THE: Lili Damita, Fred Keating—Here is one sweet little picture and my patrons liked it very much. Color is entrancing and music is very, very thrilling. It is an extraordinary all-color picture.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

IN HIS STEPS: Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker—A wonderful picture. Why can't we get more like it? Every exhibitor should buy this picture and give his patrons one evening of real entertainment. This picture gives us something to think about for days. Boys, buy this one. Played November 29-30.—Mary Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Col. General patronage.

SINS OF THE CHILDREN: Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker—One of those pictures hard to explain just why it is so good, but it is chuck full of top notch situations that get under the patron's skin. Just another one of those very good pictures.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—With proper advertising and exploitation, this is a gold mine. It should do a tremendous business everywhere, and it will please. Running time, 110 minutes. Played January 10-13.—Ralph Cokain, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

ALL-AMERICAN CHUMP: Stuart Erwin, Betty Furness—Wishy-washy plot that makes fair entertainment. Nothing to get enthused over. Played January 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart—Definitely more popular entertainment than "The Great Ziegfeld." But the fact they bill it as a successor to "Ziegfeld" led many to think it possibly would be as dull. Those who came were agreeably surprised. Plenty of musical numbers this time. Played January 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—This was an outstanding picture for us. It did business and pleased, which is a combination hard to beat. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 14-16.—Beatty & Johnson, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—Very good picture that pleased all who came to see it. Great for the kids and men, but the women don't care so much for it, due, no doubt, to the absence of any love interest. Played to average business. Played January 2.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—Any type audience should go for this finely directed picture. Cooper seems to have added lots to his appeal now that the man is cropping out. His co-pals in this are tops, too. Played January 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GENERAL SPANKY: Spanky McFarland—Nice program picture that drew better than average program picture. The kids especially ate it up.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Luise Rainer, Myrna Loy—A lot of money was evidently spent on this one, but somehow it just doesn't have what it takes. Personally I think it is too long. After sitting in one position for three hours even the best of pictures get tiresome. Most of the cash customers said it's okay but didn't seem very enthusiastic about it. Did just fair business.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—A truly great production that was never meant for small towns.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HIS BROTHER'S WIFE: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—Some liked it and some did not. More or less one of these mushy love stories. Business terrible, due mostly to the bad weather.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly—Excellent comedy. Pleased 100 per cent. Patsy Kelly is sure to go places if given stories like this one. Many compliments from patrons. Played December 27-28.—H. H. Daniels, Nu-Era Theatre, Oswego, Kan. General patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton—A knockout of a comedy. Had a full house on this one. Played January 5.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton——A nice comedy feature of the slapstick variety. Patsy pleased her fans as usual. Played December 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—An excellent piece of entertainment. High rentals make it less excellent financially. Played December 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LIBELED LADY: William Powell, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—A real picture and every foot entertainment. Running time, 98 minutes. Played January 10-13.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

LONGEST NIGHT, THE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—About on an average with the usual run of murder mystery pictures. Enough comedy relief in this to make it pretty good entertainment.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LONGEST NIGHT, THE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Average mystery comedy drama. Very short running time made double featuring absolutely essential. Hardly worthy of Leo's lowest rental. Really ought to have been in the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series at similar rental. Running time, 51 minutes. Played

January 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone—One of the greatest pictures we have shown at our theatre so far. It held our audience spellbound and pleased 100 per cent. We consider this picture one of the headliners for 1936. Running time, 133 minutes. Played November 6-7.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery—Very good, to better than average business.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery—Not so weak a story for Beery as we had expected from the reports we've read. Many were pleased to see Eric Linden again and expressed the desire to have him cast more frequently. Played January 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery—Good for extra playing time.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PICCADILLY JIM: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—A real treat. Personally I thought it as good as we had played in some time, but for some reason did not do business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RENDEZVOUS: William Powell, Rosalind Russell—Good story well acted. Pleased all of our patrons. Played October 16-17.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

SWORN ENEMY: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Gangster picture that gets by as a program offering. Average business.—B. Hollenberg, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

TARZAN ESCAPES: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Seemed to please young and old and fairly good at the box office. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 17-19.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples and the New Lee Theatres, Pleasant Hill and Lee's Summit, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

WE WENT TO COLLEGE: Charles Butterworth, Walter Abel, Una Merkel—A humorous version of that annual American pastime, reunion. Played December 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHIPSAW: Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—A swell program picture. Pleased our patrons. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 13-14.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns & Allen—The cast was all right for this kind of a picture. Gracie of course is a little tangled and so is Martha Raye, but without them you would not have much picture. Played to Christmas night and what a snowstorm we had that night.—Mary Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Col. General patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West—Terrible.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West—Mae's first appearance on my screen and I was doubtful about her reception because of so many adverse reports on the picture, but they came to see and stayed to enjoy themselves. It wasn't so much Mae as it was the rural comedy. It did business and that is what we want, n'est-ce pas? Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 15-16.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

I'D GIVE MY LIFE: Sir Guy Standing—Good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MURDER WITH PICTURES: Lew Ayres, Gail Patrick.—Good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern—While this was not listed among the 10 best, I believe that this was enjoyed by most that saw it as well as some of the 10 best. This was doubled with "The Texas Rangers" for the New Year's Eve and New Year's Day show. We did a nice business with this program and I will add that they don't make any better westerns than "The Texas Rangers."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Neb. Neighborhood patronage.

SON COMES HOME, A: Mary Boland, Donald Woods—Good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER: Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke—Good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jean Parker, Jack Oakie—A crackerjack action play; while western in locale, it is certainly above that classification in general. Strong cast helps immeasurably. Played January 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SIX MORE SHOWMEN REPORT THIS WEEK

Of six additional reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me" in this issue, three of them, from Maine to Montana, are sending in comment on product for the first time. They are:

John Griffin, Orpheum Theatre, Chinook, Montana.

Mary Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Colorado.

Strand and New Central Theatres, Old Town, Maine.

Resuming reportorial activities after a year or more of absence are these:

C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Oklahoma.

M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Oregon.

R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Nebraska.

Read the reports of these showmen in the department this week.

THREE MARRIED MEN: Lynne Overman, William Frawley—A good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WEDDING PRESENT: Joan Bennett, Cary Grant—Very poor draw. People thought it silly. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 3-4.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples and New Lee theatres, Pleasant Hill and Lee's Summit, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

COMIN' ROUND THE MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford—Autry is a comer with us and this was one okay show. Also it seems that the photography is 100 per cent over a year ago. This picture is good enough to put by a poor co-feature. Running time, 56 minutes. Played January 22-23.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

HEARTS IN BONDAGE: James Dunn, Mae Clarke—A fine little picture okay for a single bill, but with an "Autry" it put my weekend in the top bracket. It may be on account of a week of the "flu" which has me more or less sightless, soundless and tasteless, but I imagined that the film was too cloudy and the sound a bit off. Wish Republic would be more careful of their change-over cues. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 22-23.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

SINGING COWBOY AND OH, SUSANNA! Gene Autry—From my observation after showing "Singing Cowboy" and "Oh, Susanna," Autry is the best bet an exhibitor can make, for in my estimation Autry will be greater than Tom Mix was in his palmiest days in silent pictures. Autry's combination of singing and riding makes a happy medium for clicking at the box office. This is the first comment on any product in 26 years of business here, but I feel credit is due, even though Republic is a newcomer in the business.—Johnnie Griffin, Orpheum Theatre, Chinook, Mont. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—Pleased 100 per cent. Heard many favorable comments on this picture. Running time, 90½ minutes. Played September 4-5.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

BIG GAME, THE: June Travis, Philip Huston—This proved to be one of the best liked pictures of any we've run lately. One of those things that click unexpectedly. Played December 29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DON'T TURN 'EM LOOSE: Bruce Cabot—Good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FARMER IN THE DELL, THE: Fred Stone, Jean Parker—This picture was well liked by our rural patrons, even our town people liked it, as it was a departure from the regular movie stories. Nice acting and well filmed. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 9-10.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Pleased 100 per cent. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers at their best. These stars are popular with our patrons and drew good business at the box office. Running time, 110 minutes. Played September 18-19.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. B. Small town patronage.

LADY CONSENTS, THE: Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall—An ordinary program picture. However, it drew good business for us and we came out even at the box office. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 2-3.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

MUMMY'S BOYS: Wheeler and Woolsey—The boys are getting worse. Given a real story they would be good. Running time, 64 minutes. Played January 15-16.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN, THE: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Better than "Walking on Air," which was plenty good. Played continuous Christmas. People still wanting to see it. Should have preferred time. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 25.—H. H. Daniels, Nu-Era Theatre, Oswego, Kan. General patronage.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN, THE: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern—This is a real box office attraction. Good acting, comedy and action. Good enough for any theatre, anywhere. A smart, up-to-date picture. Played January 23.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—A really big picture.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WITHOUT ORDERS: Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong—Pleased 100 per cent. A great show for Friday and Saturday. RKO is surely turning out some genuine money pictures, good pictures that draw, and an exhibitor has a chance to pay the rent without giving it all for film rental. Played December 26.—H. H. Daniels, Nu-Era Theatre, Oswego, Kan. General patronage.

WITHOUT ORDERS: Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong—A good aviation picture. Suspense is strong at the finale. Played January 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WOMAN REBELS, A: Katharine Hepburn, Herbert Marshall—Hepburn has never meant too much to our patrons, but this one did a fair business and, generally speaking, pleased. Primarily a woman's picture, the few knocks received were from the patrons of the sterner sex. Running time, 88 minutes. Played January 13-14.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—One of Fox's happier moments this season. A good picture. Played January 14-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DIMPLES: Shirley Temple—Shirley is slipping.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Simone Simon—Excellent production, acting good, plenty of action. Held the interest of our patrons from beginning to end. Good for any theatre, anywhere. Drew well. Played January 2.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: Robert Kent, Rosalind Keith—Poor. Weak plot. Robert Kent not very convincing. Continuity of the story very jumpy. Failed to please an action-loving crowd. Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 22-23.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples and the New Lee Theatres, Pleasant Hill and Lee's Summit, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: Robert Kent, Rosalind Keith—Good western.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon—Terrible.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Loretta Young, Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon—Here is a prize package that I don't want to miss making a report on. One of the poorest excuses for a picture that I have seen for a long time. The highly advertised Simone Simon was terrible. When she opened her mouth all that could be heard was an indistinct mumble. One more picture like this and I think she'll be all ready to be shipped back to France. On top of it all Fox put this in the top allocation. Add to that the poor business and the razzing I got from the few customers that did come, and it sure was a headache to me. Played December 29.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Loretta Young, Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon—Gets by one day only.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY: Jane Withers—Here is a natural in anyone's theatre; if she is not, there is something the matter. The best little actress on the screen.—Mary Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Col. General patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie—Pleasing picture, but no drawing power. You will have to think up some ideas to get them in.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—Good entertainment.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—Marvelous color and a story that held and satisfied even if the ending was sad. Played January 10-11.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—Excellent. Good for two days in small town, more in key spots.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—Poor entertainment.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

REUNION: Jean Hersholt, Dionne Quintuplets—Not another "Country Doctor" by any means, but nevertheless it proved good entertainment and pulled fairly well. The last reel provided the real kick of the picture, with the Quints doing their stuff for the amusement of the patrons. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 10-12.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—A decided flop with us and no reason apparent. Just any picture would have done as well, and Christmas Day at that. Yes, only a one-day booking to boot. It seemed an okay picture from an entertainment standpoint. Played December 25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROAD TO GLORY, THE: Fredric March, Warner Baxter—Good entertainment.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

ROAD TO GLORY, THE: Fredric March, Warner Baxter—Just one a day play. Gets by okay.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STAR FOR A NIGHT: Jane Darwell, Claire Trevor—Good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STATE FAIR: Will Rogers—While we did not do as well on this as on the other reissue, "A Connecticut Yankee," it still drew above average business. The quality of this picture is too well known for any further comment from me. I am merely reporting on this picture to tell the folks that Will Rogers' pictures still draw above average at this theatre.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple—Shirley's best in some time. Only fair business due to cold wave.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

TO MARY—WITH LOVE: Myrna Love, Warner Baxter—Poor entertainment.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

TO MARY—WITH LOVE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—This one has everything, action, comedy, tragedy, love quarrels, and about as much in in as two ordinary pictures. Pleased everybody. Played January 16.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

WHITE HUNTER: Warner Baxter, June Lang—Skip it if you can. At best it can only be used as the weak half of a double bill. Poorest picture with this fine star we have ever shown and patrons' reactions were decidedly unfavorable. No business, but bad weather no doubt accounted for a part of the poor box office showing. Running time, 64 minutes. Played January 20-21.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

BARBARY COAST: Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson, Joel McCrea—A very interesting story of the early 1850's, in California. Due to cold weather and snow blocked roads our box office receipts did not fare so well. However, this was no fault of the picture. Those that saw it were pleased with it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 8-9.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—Very glad that U. A. took this one out on Friday and Saturday, January 22-23, and gave it to me this date. It's all right for a certain class of which we have few. The color is beautiful, but the story doesn't appeal to country folk who come out for entertainment. It is okay for Bank Night and by chance I got it on Bank Night. Running time, 91 minutes. Played January 12.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—Color and acting good, but the story is out of date and people do not care for it. Pleased about 35 per cent. Running time, 78 minutes. Played January 17-19.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Leo Carrillo, Ida Lupino—As far as our patrons are concerned, Leo Carillo was the star of this picture. Good entertainment that pleased, but failed to pull the payees. It is only fair to mention that weather conditions were bad and no doubt held the gross to a minimum. Running time, 86 minutes. Played January 17-19.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes—This was a very good picture and something different, but the Indians were not very convincing. Something like a lot of kids get up. Business fair. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 1-2.—Beatty & Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Dear, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes—Good in its day, but now a programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ONE RAINY AFTERNOON: Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino—Good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STRIKE ME PINK: Eddie Cantor, Ethel Merman—Our audiences simply roared at this comedy. Pleased 100 per cent. Eddie Cantor at his best. Running time, 100 minutes. Played January 1-2.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

THESE THREE: Merle Oberon, Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—A fine picture that pleased all who saw it. Sold too high, not giving the exhibitor a chance. Business fair. Running time, 93 minutes. Played January 7-9.—Beatty & Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

Universal

GIRL ON THE FRONT PAGE, THE: Gloria Stuart, Edmund Lowe—A snappy interesting newspaper yarn that makes for popular appeal, but I will be a little super-critical for the moment. Edmund Lowe was an up-to-the-minute newspaper editor and he should have known that a confession extracted by torture would not hold before the law. This did a fair average doubled with "36 Hours to Kill."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

LUCKIEST GIRL IN THE WORLD: Jane Wyatt, Louis Hayward—A very good program picture and well liked. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 14.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MY MAN GODFREY: William Powell, Carole Lombard—A dandy comedy cleverly played by a popular cast. Carole never better. Played December 31-January 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NOBODY'S FOOL: Edward Everett Horton, Glenda Farrell—Played on a double bill. The best Edward Everett Horton ever made as a top star. Pleased 100 per cent. Many compliments. Good for any day in the week. Good program pictures are pleasing my patrons more than the Big Specials, which are mostly big in price. Played December 23.—H. H. Daniels, Nu-Era Theatre, Oswego, Kan. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March—Costume picture. Good of its kind. You won't break any records with this one.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BIG NOISE, THE: Guy Kibbee, Warren Hull—Good programmer.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CAIN AND MABEL: Marion Davies, Clark Gable—Excellent. Extra playing time.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Packed them in the first night with CCC boys. The town people, however, were most enthusiastic about it. Played January 23-24.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

GIVE ME YOUR HEART: Kay Francis, George Brent—A very fine heart interest drama. Try to arrange your program that as many of your patrons as possible see this from the start. I have a minor fault to find. In the trailer they show Kay Francis and George Brent in bed together as if they had retired for the night, which to me was carrying sex appeal a little too far, even though the couple were portrayed as being married in the picture itself. You see that Brent is in his dressing gown when he lies down beside Kay Francis, but at that I believe that as portrayed it is still a little too sexy to satisfy the Legion of Decency. The picture did not need this extra pepping up; it is a very fine drama without this scene. Business on this was above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GIVE ME YOUR HEART: Kay Francis, George Brent—Good picture.—Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

I MARRIED A DOCTOR: Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson—A story based on "Main Street." Heard a lot of favorable comments on this picture. The popularity of the author and the cast of stars pulled them in for us. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 25-26.—J. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown—Pleased about 80 per cent. Not his best picture by any means, but right down the alley for a small town. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 10-12.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples and the New Lee Theatres, Pleasant Hill and Lee's Summit, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

STOP, LOOK AND GUESS: New World of Sport Series—An unusual game of guessing sport champions; the audience is let in on the fun. From audience reaction many guessed right, at any rate they had a good ten minutes trying.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOURING THE SPORT WORLD: New World of Sport Series—Columbia knows what it's all about when it comes to short subjects. Best shorts on the market.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Educational

ANY OLD PORT: Buster West, Tom Patricola—This team is a real favorite here and this comedy is as good as any of their past offerings, all of which have been above the average. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BLUE BLAZES: Buster Keaton—A genuinely funny Keaton comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BOY, OH BOY: Two-Reel Comedies—A fair amount of laughs in this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KIKO AND THE HONEY BEARS: Paul Terry-Toons—Average cartoon. Kiko is a poor effort to capitalize on the Popeye antics.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARKED IN PAREE: Buster West, Tom Patricola—This team needs better material. They woud be a knockout with better stuff to work with.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAY! GIRLS: Song and Comedy Hits—An excellent number in this series. Features an all girl orchestra and some clever gals entertain.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WACKY FAMILY, THE: Tim and Irene—It's hard to see how anyone can consider this troupe funny; they're just plain silly, or is it crazy? A few laughs along the way but darn few.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ARBOR DAY: Our Gang—A good Gang comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

AT SEA ASHORE: Patsy Kelly Comedy—A good comedy, lacking only that unforgettable Thelma Todd. Lucky they aren't continuing this series, as Thelma sure left an awful gap.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES: Pete Smith Speciality—An interesting and instructive short showing how transoceanic photo service works.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BORED OF EDUCATION: Our Gang effort; a good start for the new series of single reel Our Gangs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CREW RACING: M-G-M Sports Parade—A good sporting subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DARE DEVILTRY: M-G-M Sports Parade—Excellent subject. Features several stunt performers at their work.— L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FOOL PROOF: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Okay action short from this popular series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HARNESSED RHYTHM: M-G-M Sports Parade—A good horse training subject. Interesting for anyone.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOW TO BE A DETECTIVE: M-G-M Miniatures—Another okay Robert Benchley short.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOW TO BEHAVE: M-G-M Miniatures—Robert Benchley is great in this funny novelty short.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOW TO TRAIN A DOG: M-G-M Miniatures—A comical and entertaining short with Robert Benchley.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IMPORTANT NEWS: M-G-M Miniatures—About the best short the late 'Chic' Sale gave us. Interesting and possibly worthy of exploitation mention is the fact James Stewart appears with Chic in this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JAPAN IN CHERRY BLOSSOM TIME: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A good color travelogue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JONKER DIAMOND: M-G-M Miniatures—So similar to a scene in Fox's "15 Maiden Lane" that the edge was all worn off it. Good enough, otherwise.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEW SHOES: Tabloid Musicals—An agreeable novelty that was well liked. Arthur Lake and Jean Chatburn featured.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ORIENTAL PARADISE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A very fine colored travel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PUBLIC PAYS, THE: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Average for the series; not the best.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RURAL MEXICO: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Usual good FitzPatrick color travelogue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TABLE TENNIS: M-G-M Sports Parade—A good short that is unusual in its selection of one of the lesser known games as its subjects.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

VIOLETS IN SPRING: Musical Comedies—This musical comedy was mostly studio effects; more musical numbers would improve the series in the future. One dance team routine okay. Color would also help.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WANTED—A MASTER: Pete Smith Specialties—An excellent Pete Smith reel about a very lovable dog looking for a master. Original, clever and entertaining.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

HAWAIIAN BIRDS: Color Classics—A dandy color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE STRANGER: Color Classics—The finest thing I've ever seen in color and never have I heard heavier applause (I ask my people to bear down a bit when they see something they especially like). Running time, 10 minutes.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE SWEE' PEA: Popeye the Sailor—The best Popeye yet and that's something. Running time, 7 minutes.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 4—Excellent as these pictures usually are.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SPORTING PALS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—An unusual short, featuring of all things a group of pet otters. Deserves a billing and will please in any situation. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WE DID IT: Betty Boop—Just a cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

DEADLY FEMALES: Struggle to Live Series—An excellent and interesting nature reel. Educational and entertaining.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FELIX THE CAT AND THE GOOSE THAT LAID THE GOLDEN EGG: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Another pleasing color worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario Canada. General patronage.

LALAPALOOSA: Headliner Series—This boy, Buddy Doyle, gave the customers a real treat with his clever impersonations. Plenty of comment and when can we see more of him? Running time, 16 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 4—Nothing to rave about in this issue. Most of our patrons find this series dull. Definitely not worth the increased rental.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 5—The best of the bunch so far.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: This glorified newsreel goes over very mildly in this situation, but believe as more issues are shown, will build up interest. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE LIVE GHOST: Leon Errol—Our patrons chuckled plenty over this one. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SINGING WHEELS: Sports With Bill Corum—Average sport reel. Racing cars again are the treatise.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TROLLEY AHOY: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—One of the best of the colored cartoons. The Molly Moo Cows were also excellent.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VOCALIZING: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—We must say this is a distinctly novel and quite funny comedy, but where is Edgar's family, Florence Lake and all the others? Our folks liked them lots.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HONG KONG HIGHLIGHTS: Magic Carpet Series—Average travelogue lacking the advantage of color.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S FIRE BRIGADE: Mickey Mouse—This and Popeye (Little Swee' Pea) saved the show from a flop when run with "Garden of Allah." It's a wow. Running time, 7 minutes.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

TOBY TORTOISE RETURNS: Silly Symphonies—Got the laughs so we'll call it a success. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

BACKYARD BROADCAST, THE: Broadway Brevities—These are really wonderful kid dancers, singers, etc., in this and it's swell entertainment for any program. Running time, 21 minutes.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

CLYDE LUCAS AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good music, dancing and singing. Book it.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

DON'T LOOK NOW: Merrie Melodies—An excellent colored cartoon about Valentine's Day.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OILY BIRD, THE: Ken Murray—A very good slapstick comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OUNCE OF INVENTION, AN: Vitaphone Novelties—Very poor. Not an ounce of entertainment in it. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PICTORIAL REVIEW: Not so good. The last part in color is all that saves this from being very dull. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PIGS IS PIGS: Merrie Melodies—A good colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PORKY OF THE NORTHWOODS: Tooney Tunes—An excellent black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronge.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

MILK OF HUMAN KINDNESS

From down in Dallas have come, recently, newspaper tearsheets carrying photos and story of the annual New Year's party put on by Louie Charninsky for the entire personnel of the Capitol and Rialto Theatres. They're a happy looking lot of folks, to judge from the picture, and beaming with the best of them is Louie himself at the head of the table in his capacity of master of ceremonies. The party was held on the mezzanine of the Rialto and "a good time was had by all".

It's a grand idea.

Theatremen and the front-of-the-house personnel spend most of their waking hours at the theatre, and though there are many things a manager would like to do and can't, he sure can put in some powerful licks in building up a real friendly, homelike atmosphere for his employees. In the first place, a real he-guy will do it to make people happy on the job and the smart guy will do it if for none other than business reasons. Usually the second reason follows the first, even if the reverse isn't always true.

All of which is no sudden discovery. There are plenty of ace showmen who make it their business to see that the house staff is given every possible break, who make things so pleasant that the personnel reflects this good feeling in its contact with the paying public. And don't think for a moment that patrons don't notice these things, which of course means bucks in the boxoffice.

No manager, no matter how talented a showman he may be, can ever be entirely successful unless he has his staff pulling for him. Many theatre organizations seemingly lacking in morale and efficiency may be built up to surprising strength by generous doses of the milk of human kindness tendered cheerfully and often by the man in charge.

THE USES OF SHOWMANSHIP

Way back in the late 'teens and early '20's when motion picture exploitation was just about busting loose upon a startled populace, the boys would sit around and discuss the potentialities of theatre promotion in other businesses. Opinion was quite unanimous that merchandise could be plugged in the same manner, that even community drives, civic elections and sichlike could be put over with similar tactics. The past decade has seen these opinions translated into actualities. The outside world has seized upon exploitation as a proven means of sales stimulation, and city governments have also discovered that showmanship in the hands of showmen provides a mighty weapon in leveling obstacles in the way of progress for community benefits and the proper functioning of civic activities.

Our pages have recounted instances of such successful cooperation between civic bodies and theatremen, and to these may be added the job done by Kroger Babb on behalf of Phil Chakeres for the city of Springfield, Ohio. On another page of this section will be found the story forwarded by Bill Nasses. Called upon to put over a special tax levy to keep the local schools open, and in the face of citywide opinion that it couldn't be done, Babb directed a campaign that reversed the returns in a previous election and made possible the continued education of 13,000 students who otherwise would be denied this right.

It was no easy job and that he came through so gloriously not only raises his own prestige in the eyes of a grateful community, but also that of the Chakeres Theatre he so ably represents.

THE ADMEN MAKE IT POSSIBLE

Without going into any dissertation on the value of newspaper advertising, it may be said, in short, that the theatreman with more talent and experience in creating his ads, with everything else equal, will bring in better week-to-week returns. True enough, it takes something in addition to newspaper displays to get everything there is to get on a date. But only a hardy soul will deny the 100 per cent value of this advertising and especially for first runs in big cities where potential patrons spread over a wide area must be sold in a hurry and must be sold "for keeps".

For further proof one need look no further than the current campaign at the New York Roxy where the difficult job of selling a new screen personality, Deanna Durbin, in her first feature-length picture, Universal's "Three Smart Girls," to New York picture patrons was accomplished mainly through the skill of adman Morris Kinzler. An example of his work is carried on a following page.

Kinzler's ability well rates him an extra bow along with other top key-city admen whose excellence in this direction makes possible the high value placed upon newspapers in the advertising of first-run dates.

Above are pictured the theatremen from Sweden responsible for the entry on RKO Radio's "Follow the Fleet" voted top Quigley Award honors for December, 1936. To Olof Andersson, general manager, Spegeln Theatre, Stockholm, goes the Silver Plaque, and to Wilhelm Sorensen, publicist, a Silver Citation. Their campaign was detailed in the issue of January 23rd.

See Yourselves As Others See You

Borrowing a convex mirror from local amusement park, Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo, invited patrons to step up to mirror in lobby and see themselves as "The Thin Man" (see photo). Copy atop setpiece read "You'll laugh at your reflection and you'll howl at," etc., etc.

Another display was doghouse in lobby with pedigreed wirehair on duty, purp at end of three-week contest was awarded to person giving him a name as original as "Asta" in the picture. Dog giveaway was very effective as it has been in other spots on the date.

Scott's "Ziegfeld" Drive Obtains Wide Coverage

Some 20 different slants were listed by Manager Boyd F. Scott, Texas, Iraan, Tex., on "Great Ziegfeld," house being 2,400-seater in a town of 2,000, including the drawing area. Top publicity was obtained with a newspaper promotion that included advertising and publicity mention on most every page of one issue. This included co-op page, cartoons, special columns, stories, etc.

Best located windows were secured for displays and fronts painted on four vacant stores. Stickers were used on market bags, standees placed in department store, imprinted match pads distributed at drug and smoke shops, delivery trucks bannered and elaborate front constructed.

Gag Heralds Plug "Wives Never Know"

For "Wives Never Know," Murray Lafayette, Warner Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y., distributed orange colored gag heralds in envelopes marked "for ladies only," copy reading, "is hubby a heel or a halo-wearer" followed with list of questions, scores for perfect husbands to be added up to 100 per cent, total secured by Charlie Ruggles in picture.

For "Tarzan Escapes," jungle lobby display was arranged with stuffed animals and tropical greens promoted from local florist. Bally truck with cutout figures of animals and Tarzan toured the streets ahead and during run and Capt. Phifer's visit to newspaper offices netted plenty of publicity.

'Earth' Campaigns Hit In New York And Los Angeles

Highlighted by a radio and newspaper campaign tying in with the wide interest in Pearl Buck's best-seller from which the picture was made, "The Good Earth" opened four days apart on the West and East coasts, its Los Angeles premiere on Jan. 29 at the Carthay Circle, and the Broadway opening at the Astor, Tuesday, Feb. 2nd.

The world premiere in Los Angeles was broadcast over a national hook-up, including stations WOR in New York, WGN in Chicago, CKLW in Detroit, WAAB in Boston, WGAR in Cleveland and WOL in Washington. The broadcast, said to have attracted the largest countryside following on record for a California premiere, took place from the forecourt of the Carthay Circle. The KHJ orchestra was featured. Seventy stations, in addition to the big list tuning in that night re-broadcast the affair within the next forty-eight hours.

The Astor opening featured similar entertainment, and was handled in New York over station WHN.

Both in New York and on the West coast the extensive advertising campaign was tied up effectively with the national interest in the book. The two stars, Paul Muni and Luise Rainer were played up in the ads in striking costume photographs and drawings. At the Astor Theatre a massive sign with the letters "Good Earth" against a red background, and a Chinese dragon interwoven in electrical lights between, attracted consistent attention. The lobby display, featuring native Oriental backgrounds, was rated most unusual.

In Los Angeles the same vast floor space that had been utilized at Bullock's department store for "Romeo and Juliet" was given over to a striking "Good Earth" display. A huge replica of the novel titled "The World's Greatest Book" was constructed for a street bally, Chinese money was passed out with change at the theatre, Chinese cherry tree displayed, and a tearoom installed with Chinese girls serving. Also used on the coast was an exhibit of water buffaloes on a float and in both situations, bookstores, school and library tieups were made. Striking window displays were arranged with all New York and Los Angeles stores handling Chinese wares.

Harvey Promotes Pennies

Lee Harvey, Century Theatre, Audubon, N. J., promoted local bank for 4,000 new pennies in connection with "Pennies from Heaven" and the printing of envelopes with copy reading "pennies from heaven are the pennies you save and grow into dollars when you open an account at the," etc., card also carried cut of Crosby with playdates.

New York police department safety campaign has been tied in to "You Only Live Once," the title carried in special window cards as a tag to other safety copy. Cards carry Mayor La Guardia's name with United Artists credited immediately below.

Theatremen Give "3 Smart Girls" Smash Openings

From New York to Miami Beach, from Lowell, Mass., to Baltimore, showmen getting behind their dates on "Three Smart Girls" put over a number of excellent campaigns and here are some of the highlights they utilized in bringing in the customers:

At the New York Roxy, Morris Kinzler stressed a newspaper campaign that opened with a series of teasers on Deanna Durbin, the new star, and the title building up to five and six column smashes for the advance ads (see ad page). Congratulatory wire from Eddie Cantor to his radio protegee was blown up and shown in lobby as was giant wreath of flowers. Cutout heads of the star were spotted around the outer and inner lobbies and a highly decorative front aided in adding further interest. Imprinted heralds were distributed at all Texaco filling stations.

Contest Planted in Baltimore

In Baltimore, for the date at Keith's, J. L. Schanberger planted a six-day newspaper contest to find the city's "three smart girls," through photos of contestants mailed to the paper. Cash and tickets were given. The press book heart stunt was also used and reported were thousands of signatures on the face of the giant heart placed in the lobby in return for which signers were offered star photos. Music stores plugged the sheet music and records, leading orchestras also cooperated and banners were suspended across the main street.

In Miami Beach, Sonny Shepherd tied in the Daily News Juniors' Editor on a long distance call to the Universal studios, where Deanna Durbin in person accepted enrollment in the paper's Junior Club. Four-column front page smash with wirephoto picture of the star was landed by Sonny on this unique telephone interview by the paper's club editor.

Governor Huxman of Kansas Presents Quigley December Bronze to Hunter

Puzzle and Slogan Contests Aid Perth "Milky Way" Date

Arranged for "Milky Way" at the Grand, Perth, Western Australia, by J. L. Stiles, managing director, and publicity head Arnold Wheatly, were two effective contests. First was a jig-saw idea put on with distributors of a well-advertised bicycle wherein heralds were distributed informing those interested that pieces for the jig-saw puzzle were to be had with every drink at cooperating milk bars. Ten separate pieces made up the puzzle and when put together made up picture of Harold Lloyd with theatre copy. Contestants were asked to bring answers to the theatre and prizes included one of the bicycles, cash and theatre tickets. The idea proved popular with many entries reported.

The slogan contest was held with the aid of the Metropolitan Milk Board. Cash prizes weer awarded for the best selected with coupons to be had only at the cooperating milk bars and given to those making purchases. One-sheet posters plugging both contests were displayed at all the bars and in other prominent spots.

Strong newspaper drive was topped with two full-page co-op ads planted by the theatremen in which were represented dairy establishments, prominent milk bars, glass companies, restaurants and other allied businesses.

Hutcheon Holds Benefit For Ohio Flood Victims

Lester Hutcheon, manager Union Theatre, New Philadelphia, and the Bexley in Dover, Ohio, forwards accompanying photo showing part of food and clothing received at recent matinee. Each person bringing something for the flood victims of Ohio was admitted free and the contributions were later turned over to the local Red Cross for distribution. Les says more than two tons of food were received. Hutcheon incidentally is the first theatreman to hold a benefit for the flood sufferers for which of course he rates an extra bow.

Attractive Front Arranged For Date On "Great Guy"

Campaign at the New York Criterion to build up the new Cagney picture "Great Guy" was started two weeks ahead with hanging signs suspended from a beam in the center of the first lobby. Striking set piece was installed inside the foyer. To draw as much attention as possible from passers-by to the date, much effort was put into the front which consisted of an overhead arch with three returns showing black and white enlargements. Title was in silvered letters with five-foot enlargement of the star bordered in blue neon. Star cutout enlargements were planted atop the marquee and illuminated by floodlights.

Decorate Movie Ball With "Desire" Displays

For Paramount Week, at the Plaza, in Launceston, Tasmania, Horrie Peverill, general manager, and adman, John J. Taylor put together an effective campaign on "Desire," the featured showing. Outstanding was the wide decorations placing of picture advertising at the annual Plaza Movie Ball, held at a nearby riverside resort in advance of the showing. Same idea was followed at a local charity ball.

Windows in the best parts of the city were secured, letters posted to prominent citizens, Paramount Week tabs overprinted and distributed. Fashion stills and stories were planted in the local press, delivery trucks bannered and at the theatre, giant banner (see photo) was placed over the shops in the theatre building.

Hosts Star's Grandmother

When D. E. L. Fisher, Garrick Theatre, Winnipeg, played "Three Smart Girls," the Winnipeg Free Press came through with practically a full-page story together with cuts of Deanna Durbin and her grandmother, both of whom are local residents, the latter attending opening as guest of theatre. Paper printed interview with Deanna's grandma, theatre ad was run in colors, and Fisher reports excellent business resulting from the publicity.

Aerial Bombs Usher In "Charge of Light Brigade"

Lew Chatham, Sooner Theatre, Norman, Okla., contacted his Mayor for permission to shoot off aerial bombs from marquee to usher in opening of "Charge of the Light Brigade." This was done under the supervision of the fire department at intervals during entire engagement with the exception of Sunday.

Accompanying photo shows front with military observatory tower, English and American flags and ushers in brigade hats and trench coats, men in uniform of English soldier blew "the charge" from atop marquee every 15 minutes, at night spotlight was focused on him and tower. Lew also used the p. a. system from his office, horns placed on marquee, and repeated few lines of poems at intervals.

For lobby display, large globe was used with arrow pointing to spot where the charge took place. Cash prizes and ducats were awarded those correctly solving crossword puzzle run in papers, center of which carried cut of the charge; personal letter of endorsement was sent to all teachers; miniature stills with picture copy on reverse side were distributed and parade of boy scouts, bannered horsemen, preceded by high school band was also held.

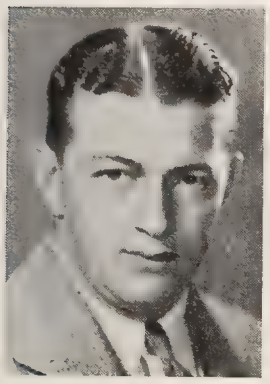
"It Couldn't Be Done", So Kroger Babb Did It

Chakeres Theatres Ad Head Conducts Successful Campaign for Special School Tax Levy

by JACK APPEL

in Springfield

When a city of 75,000 people makes up its mind it's no small job to change it. The fact an entire city was made to change its mind in the short span of two weeks, reversing a decision it had rendered by a 3-to-1 vote to an exactly opposite one by a 2-to-1 vote, was national news. And the news should be of especial interest to those in show business because of the fact it was a showman who cocked the gun and a showman who fired the bullets.



KROGER BABB

Springfield, Ohio—a thriving industrial city of 75,000 people located in the western section of the Buckeye state—turned down a special school tax levy at the November 3rd election by a 3-to-1 vote. The city's 26 public schools closed for lack of operating funds, dumping 13,000 boys and girls into the streets.

A civic committee of 50 representative business, industrial and professional men was quickly formed to do something about the situation and arrangements for a special election were drafted. This, however, was far from a solution to the problem. The school board had made a frantic plea before the November 3rd balloting and had warned the citizens of the plight the schools faced if the extra taxes were refused.

Real estate interests opposed the levy because of the additional tax burden it would impose. Springfield's big industrial working groups opposed it in fear of higher rents. Small property owners wanted to escape further taxes and the general public bitterly fought its passage because of a prevailing opinion the school board was inefficient, should be ousted, and that the additional funds were not needed.

Committee Turns to Chakeres

With this dark picture confronting them, the Civic Committee, after much discussion, could not arrive at a solution. Some one chanced to make the suggestion the committee visit Phil Chakeres, Springfield's theatre magnate, and ask for advice and assistance. Chakeres heads the Chakeres-Warner theatre company in Springfield and also his own company, Chakeres Theatres, Inc., operating in several Ohio cities.

Displaying the same interest and enthusiasm in civic matters he has for the past 30 years, Chakeres counseled with the Civic Committee and then turned over to them his ace publicity and advertising man, Kroger Babb, a young publicist who bids to make a high mark in show business before many more years pass by.

Babb thoroughly investigated the situation and its many problems and then set out in showman-like fashion "to sell a picture." He gave the project a title, "Keep Our Schools Open" and then launched a carefully planned campaign which struck at each group and source of opposition one-by-one, gradually converting them to the cause. The side issues, petty jealousies and fears were pushed into the background and as the campaign closed the main theme was pounded home.

The psychology the theatre ad man used merits more than passing reference. Babb did not ridicule, threaten or beg the voters. Indirectly he acknowledged the opposition by proving their claims incorrect, their fears unwarranted or by suggestion the present was not the time to argue about side issues or pesronalities.

A campaign fund of $2,400 had been spent previous to the November 3rd election and the issue lost 3-to-1. The Civic Committee reasoned possibly $7,500 would be necessary to win the fight, but could raise only $5,000. Babb won the battle, however, spending less than $2,200. His budget was distributed 50 per cent for newspaper advertising, 20 per cent for campaign literature, 15 per cent for theatre trailers and 15 per cent for outdoor advertising.

No Politics in Babb's Drive

The campaign was a revelation, being minus political promises, threats and warnings. It was expertly planned and timed. Copy was startling in its brevity and was beautifully and forcifully illustrated. The largest ad of the campaign required less than 90 seconds to read and the largest piece of campaign literature was less than three minutes in length.

The brevity of the copy and the elimination of promises and threats caused veteran political observers in Springfield to predict utter failure on the eve of election. But when the public passed the levy 2-to-1 at a special election these same wise men of the "old school" opened their eyes to a new plan and force in advertising.

Babb employed common theatre advertising ideas all the way through. He used action art and "blurbs" to deal with the opposition. For example, an ad with predominating art, showing a high school boy and girl walking into the camera a la Bill Powell-Myrna Loy style. The girl was saying, "Mother says the man next door has bought a new car and can't afford to vote for our school levy." The boy was replying, "My Dad says every intelligent motorist will vote for the levy to keep 13,000 kids off the street—traffic's bad enough!" Cartoons were contributed to the campaign by several leader midwest newspaper artists upon Babb's telegraphic appeal for help. There were spotted on the newspapers' editorial pages in timely fashion.

The Springfield showman switched the entire style and theme of the campaign during the closing days to one of confidence and success. He swung over to catch-lines and forceful illustrations. Such smash-lines, well illustrated, as "The Schools Don't Cost—They Pay!" . . . "Did voters ever slam the school doors in your face?" . . . "Tomorrow—13,000 boys and girls will go 'with you' to the polls—don't tramp on them!" . . . "Their job is going to school—keep them at work!" . . . "A city without schools is like a nation without government—ruined!"

These and other equally as powerful lines, plus a well illustrated sample ballot carried in every ad, turned the trick.

The success of the campaign justified the confidence Springfield's Civic Committee had placed in its theatre men. Members of our profession can likewise be proud. The results establish further that show business today has the men capable of solving the knottiest selling problems—be they business or civic ones.

The future will undoubtedly see many cities recognizing their showmen and valuing their ability and opinions in civic matters of grave importance and drafting them into service more frequently than in the past.

Pictures Bring Passes On Bendheim Date

Instead of hunting for their names in classified ads, adman David Kamsky, at Sam Bendheim's State Theatre, Richmond, Va., tied in with one of the papers to run photos of local students, six sets of guest tickets given daily for those identifying their photos published in the paper. Readers were asked to bring in their pictures for inclusion in the contest and for "Banjo On My Knee" paper ran four-column layouts with photos and picture copy.

Flash! Little Bobby's Prayer is Answered! Santa Crashes Through With the Goods!

(Second Installment of the Great Super-Colossal Christmas Classic)

Dear Bobby Braumart:

I get a lot of screwy requests in my Christmas mail, but yours is just about tops. You want a movie for your Christmas show that will lay 'em in the aisles, do you? Well, little man, you've got it! Talk about four-star pictures! This one rates four stars with a couple of comets thrown in! In two words—ter-rific!

But did I have a time getting it! I wore out three sets of false whiskers and four reindeer; and when the home office gets a look at the long-distance bill I charged to you, you'd better take it on the lam.

I covered every square inch of Hollywood from Mary Pickford's mansion to Mae West's hacienda. I interviewed everybody from Robert Taylor to Donald Duck. And every last one of them told me the same thing: "Santa, if you really want THE picture of the year, there's just one place to get it. Drive around to Culver City and have a talk with Leo, the M-G-M lion. He's got something that's COLOSSAL!"

I'll tell you the rest tomorrow. Another request just came in that's even screwier than yours. A republican wants a postmaster's job. Is it any any wonder my hair is white?

Yours,

Final Ad in Hickey's Santa Stunt

Further Holiday Reports Forwarded by Round Tablers

Given top position in MGM's campaign service bulletin was Manager E. J. Hickey's smart promotion at the Braumart, Iron Mountain, Mich., on "After the Thin Man" which booked on short notice for the holiday week-end, caused the theatreman to hustle up some angle that would command attention. Hickey struck on it in a series of two-column type ads addressed to Santa Claus, running one a day for three days.

First ad to the old gentleman signed by Bobby Braumart, Jr., was a request for a present out of the ordinary to be given the regular patrons; a picture that would make the holiday perfect, etc. Second ad, reproduced above, was the answer from Santa and above is the third and last shot. Idea may be filed or adapted.

Further reports on the holiday activities continue to arrive. For instance, John Newkirk, at Loew's Granada, Cleveland, put on his annual "bury the tree" tiein with the local paper and fire department for page one notice. And in Presque Isle, Me., at the State, Manager J. E. Palmer showed his appreciation to his patrons by distributing gift cards good for any one show during the year.

Round Tabler Joe Stribling, Kiowa, Hobart, Okla., to which new spot he has recently been promoted, found the old-time Country Store idea successful in combating tent show opposition.

FROM READERS

ASKS INFORMATION ABOUT SALESMAN

Dear Mike:

A few weeks ago the managers in our towns had one of those salesmen come in to sell frames, and were taken in on the venture.

The idea was as usual that the theatre was to sign a letter agreeing to furnish two passes a week for a year for the privilege of displaying advertising in the frames. The salesman would then sell the merchant the frame, claiming he would get the $15 cost out in less than a year in passes.

When he talked to us he had the frames to show us—a small mirror affair—and naturally we felt they would be delivered. However, he went out and took the merchant's money, saying the frames would be delivered by mail, and saying the Roxy would back it up—showing the letters.

It was not until nearly 10 days later when one called up asking what had become of his frame that we realized what had happened in the five spots he sold in town. Although our letter said nothing about guaranteeing the delivery of frames, to save our good name on future ventures we were forced to make up the merchant's loss.

This stunt was worked in three of our towns, and thought I would pass it along to you so that some one else won't get stuck on it. If any of the managers have this fellow come in—a fairly good looking fellow, wearing glasses, and well dressed, I would say about 50 years of age and distinguished looking—we would appreciate your wiring us collect as to his whereabouts.—Jack Braunagel, District Manager, Intermountain Theatres, Inc.

"Libeled Lady" Co-op Page

Working with the theatremen at the Odeon, Beaver Dam, Wis., MGM exploiteer, Ernie Orlove, broke out a page co-op on "Libeled Lady." To attract reader interest, guest tickets were offered for the best letters in 100 words or less, on the best ad on the page and why. Face cuts of the four stars topped the page with center spread for theatre ad.

Dear Bobby Braumart:

I can't hold out on you any longer. I promised to tell you the name of the picture I got for your Christmas show, and here goes:

Your picture for next Thursday, Friday and Saturday is "AFTER THE THIN MAN", and believe you me, it's a SHOW! They gave me a look at it in the Metro-Goldwyn projection room, and I was so darned tickled that I clean forgot my dignity and kissed that old M-G-M lion right on the nose!

You'll want to do the same thing when you see it. Bill Powell, Myrna Loy and Director Woody Van-Dyke have turned out the most entertaining show in years; and if "AFTER THE THIN MAN" isn't the best possible Christmas gift for your customers, then I'll go back to filling kid's stockings with stale peppermints.

Now that I've done you a bit of a favor I'd like to ask one in return. When I've finished my last delivery on Christmas Day I'll be powerful tired, and I can't think of a better tonic than another big dose of "AFTER THE THIN MAN". So I'd like you to save me a seat for Christmas night. That's not asking too much, is it? Just one single seat for a tired old man—and maybe a little drink?

Faithfully,
Santa (Ask-Me-Another) Claus.

Double Flash! Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer wires that the Capitol Theatre in New York City agrees with the Braumart in Iron Mountain and chooses "After the Thin Man" for its Christmas Show!

Columbus Glamor-Girl Wins Trip on "Allah"

Announcing it as a "Garden of Allah" contest to find the Columbus, Ohio, girl with the most glamor, personality and pulchritude, Russ Bovim, at Loew's Ohio, tied in the Citizen for a drive that ran well ahead of his date on that picture. Prize was a round-trip by air and a week of sightseeing conducted by the Selznick unit at United Artists. Coupons were run daily and contestants requested to send in their photos. After the preliminary choosing, eight finalists were selected for the judging on the stage of the Ohio and wore original Dietrich costumes used in the picture and borrowed by Bovim for the contest.

The opportunity to visit Hollywood in this manner was said to have attracted several hundred of the debutante-college co-ed type not usually available for such slants. Judges were the Mayor, State Treasurer and women from the top-society strata. Transportation was promoted in exchange for publicity and theatre credits and expenses of the winner defrayed by the studio which also promised a screen test. Newspapers gave the tiein plenty of space with large daily breaks including photos of entrants and banners on delivery trucks.

Church tiein found helpful was the theatreman's invitation to famed Presbyterian church choir to broadcast program from stage over the entire Columbia network. Station cooperated by announcing this daily and that those who came for the broadcast could stay for the picture without extra charge.

Top Tieins Stress 'Romeo and Juliet' Road Engagements

Much high-power exploitation on various road show engagements of "Romeo and Juliet" has come in to Billy Ferguson from the MGM exploiteers and from these campaigns some of the highlights in various spots are briefly outlined. Covering key city and other dates, outstanding tieins are noted.

In Chicago, for the Erlanger Theatre date, tieup was made with Mandel Brothers, leading department store, in which 3000 square feet of space was set aside for exhibits of costumes, books, Shakespeare mementos, etc. Display included four large booths, three lighted display cases, wall and column exhibits of picture material, mentions in store ads, signs on all floors and in elevators, window display, booth for reservations, etc. Marionette shows were given daily and a series of club women's teas held by the store.

Leading clubs and organizations cooperated in every way possible and a preview held for these organizations, clergy, critics and a representative cross-section of citizens. Letters on the store exhibit and the picture were mailed to members of the Better Films Council, PTA and church associations and arrangements made for speakers from leading clubs to appear without pay before groups interested in the showing.

Newspapers cooperated strongly and contest that aroused interest was offer of cash prizes to mothers who would name their new-born babies, Juliet. Paper followed through with photos of the children and a number of the acceptances to the offer were reported. Also interesting was a giant size letter on the picture mailed to many leading Chicago citizens.

Quotation Contest Staged

For the date at the National, in Washington, D. C., newspaper contest was put on wherein familiar quotations from Shakespeare plays were published daily, one of the quotations being from "Romeo and Juliet." Contestants were required to identify the quotations from the play of its origin with cash and guest tickets for prizes. Another newspaper slant was a "local Juliet" contest which invited girls who had played Juliet in school, college, amateur theatricals to be guests at the picture.

Dinner served at the Colonial Theatre, in Boston, was the unusual precede to the special press screening. The idea was unusual and got away from the formality of a club or hotel gathering. At the opening, lobby was decorated with palms and fresh flowers with "Norma Shearer" roses given to all women. Boston newspapers ran editorials, and gave breaks in the roto sections.

At the Cass, in Detroit, many fashion tieins were made with the tieup line: "Inspired by Romeo and Juliet." Bus lines ran announcements advertising special rates to the Detroit performances and in Cleveland, at the Hanna, the garden scene in the picture produced another floral tiein wherein a "Shearer Rose Bush" was planted with ceremony in a prominent city garden under the sponsorship of local flower club.

Guy Snow's 40-Piece Bazooka Band Invited to Play at State Capitol

Down in Newport, Ark., (surrounded by 21 lakes filled with bass and crappie) the folks are pointing to the Malco circuit's Strand Theatre as the place where the world's first bazooka band was formed. Worked as a tiein on "Big Broadcast", Manager Guy Snow (top row, left) ordered a lot of bazookas and invited boys and girls to take part. After one week's rehearsals, a 40-piece band was organized and played on the stage in connection with the picture. Newspapers picked it up, schools in surrounding towns asked for the band, and, to top all this, the committee for the gubernatorial inauguration invited Snow to bring the band to the state capitol to take part in the ceremonies.

Commissioner of Weights Extols "Great Guy"

Special stress was placed by Joseph Verbalow, Savar Theatre, Camden, N. J., on fact that Cagney is now on the side of law and order in "Great Guy" cashing in on the theme by enlisting cooperation of local weights and measures division. Members of the department spoke over radio, extolling merits of the picture. Commissioner in charge wrote letter of commendation, which was blown up for window streamers, retailers displayed these, inference being that their measuring devices had been inspected and passed.

Sound truck covered with six sheets toured streets, special heralds were distributed in homes and slips pasted to copies of Saturday Evening Post reminded readers that the picture was based on stories which had appeared in that magazine.

Paramount's 'Plainsman' Judges Appointed on Contest

Admiral Richard E. Byrd, F. Trubee Davidson, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and James E. West, Chief Scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America, have been named as judges in the Paramount nationwide Boy Scout contest sponsored in connection with the showing of "The Plainsman." Prizes in the contest include a free trip to the World Boy Scout Jamboree in Holland and a trip to Washington. Awards will be made for the best 100-word review of the picture.

Deering's Arabian Display Attracts on "Garden of Allah"

First eye-opener in Francis Deering's campaign on "The Garden of Allah" at Loew's State, Houston, Texas, was the promotion of a lobby display of expensive oriental rugs and antiques, inlaid mother-of-pearl chairs, smoking incense, etc. For bally, local dancer dressed as Tilly Losch in the picture, paraded the main streets and on opening day, footman was garbed in elaborate oriental costume, planted in front of boxoffice under baby spot.

Envelopes containing "desert sand" and carrying fortune-telling copy were distributed by Western Union boys in office buildings. Foremost among the windows was three-unit display in prominent department store which exhibited some of the costumes from the picture.

Top, left, two-column layout on "Three Smart Girls" at the Capitol and the six-column spread on "Wings of the Morning" at His Majesty's are both from Montreal. The six-column flat on "Rembrandt" was created by Jim Nairn's ad department for the Uptown, Toronto, and the two-column dog idea is credited to Russ Bovim for "After the Thin Man" at Loew's Ohio, Columbus. The one-column institutional for the Regent, Albany, is the work of Eddie Selette and the three-column tiein on "Pennies from Heaven" from John McManus, Loew's Midland, Kansas City. The three-column on "Three Smart Girls" at the New York Roxy is a Morris Kinzler creation, and the layout for the premiere of "Good Earth" at the Los Angele. Cathay Circle comes from Frank Whitbeck.

ELECTRICAL POWER COSTS are discussed, not without indignation, by J. T. Knight, Jr., in the leading article of his department, giving the theatre owner and manager answers to the arguments of the power companies, and information necessary to an understanding of the electrical rate problem peculiar to the theatre.

MODERN LIGHTING FIXTURES for the theatre and the principles of good taste which apply in their use, are described, explained and generously illustrated in an article by John Eberson, well known theatre architect.

PROJECTION SYSTEM MAINTENANCE and its bearing on the quality of sound, is analyzed by Aaron Nadell. With finer sound equipment now available and being widely installed, no subject could have more timely significance.

IN ADDITION to these articles are many other general and department features . . . including a map that veritably charts the changes that 1936 brought to the number and distribution of American theatres.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Reynosa, Mexico

Dear Herald:

Jevver see a bull fight? You didn't, eh? Well, you haven't missed much. Those who never saw a Mexican bull fight, and have heard so much about them have come to believe that they are quite an event. That was our belief, but we saw one yesterday and one is all we care to see. A bull fight will incline you to think that the human race has drifted back to the stone age. This bull fight we saw was about as sporty an event as to see a 200-pound pugilist fight a blindfolded four-year-old kid. It was no bull fight at all. In the first place, they weren't bulls; they were poor, thin steers that had been brought in off the cactus plains, and none of them were fat enough to make even Mexican beef.

These steers were let into the arena through a chute. As one came through they would stick barbs into the steer's shoulder to make him fight and then the matadors (or whatever they are called) would walk around him with a red blanket and the steer would charge the blanket and the matador would step out of the way. They would keep this up for a while and then one of them would run a long, thin blade through the steer's heart and kill him. This is what the Mexicans call sport. When they killed the steer the crowd would cheer like they do at a Cornhusker football game. After they butchered two of these steers we were so disgusted with the performance that we got up and left the arena, and as we left we were thankful that we lived in a country where this kind of butchery is not permitted.

We went to see this bull fight in order to be able to say that we had seen one, and now we are so damned ashamed of it that we are not going to brag about it, even to our grandchildren. Get this bull fight out of your heads; it isn't sport, it's butchery. It's a torture of dumb animals, and that's not sport.

Shine Mason of the Palace theatre at McAllen was there to see this bull fight also. We were surprised to see him there because he has lived close to the Mexican border for a number of years and we supposed he knew what a bull fight was. Shine got up and left the arena before we did and we don't know whether he was sick at the stomach or went out to get a drink. If it was a drink he wanted he could have gotten that in the bull pen, for they passed it all around the crowd. We don't think it was a drink he wanted, for we don't think Shine drinks, and we are sure he didn't follow off some señorita. Well, we saw a bull fight, anyway.

McAllen, Texas

We have made a "find." The casting directors may not believe it, but we have. We have found a girl that we are confident would make a big hit on the screen, and our twelve years' experience watching the actresses on the screen leads us to this conclusion.

She is a Mexican girl and she can speak both English and Mexican fluently. She graduates from the high school this coming June and she has a personality that would make them grab on to the seats and hang on. She is 19 years old, dark complexion, black hair, blue eyes, and her height is 4.11. She weighs about 110 pounds, dances well, is a fair swimmer, and she is the editor and business manager of the Wheel, a high school paper. Her name is Bertha Garza and she is the leader in all school and social events. She has never taken instructions outside of her school activities and would therefore be an apt student for a screen director, and if some of them don't get in touch with this girl they will be overlooking an important opportunity. Her address is McAllen, Texas. We get our mail at the same town.

The other night we went to the Palace theatre and saw Shirley Temple in "The Stowaway." Of course, you probably know all about this picture already, but if you haven't already played it we would advise you to get. Then we saw "Come And Get It." The action in this picture is built around a lumber camp in the north woods. If you are interested in lumber camps and seeing them cut down big trees and slide them down the mountains into the river, this one will be of special interest to you. It is largely an outdoor picture and it is a he-man picture with a lot of the rough stuff left out. It has a good story well played and well directed. Then we saw "The Garden of Allah," a color picture that will please those who like Oriental settings, though the "settings" reminded us of the sand dunes of the Imperial valley of southeast California. A lot of people called this excellent entertainment, and maybe a lot of people were right; we don't know, as we didn't stay to the finish.

Some girls spend more time in the beauty parlors than they do with mother in the kitchen. We have seen a lot of girls who required a lot of beauty parlor service. But then, how about us?

The other day we passed what we thought was a German, and we said, "Wie geht's?" And he replied, "Buenos dias, Senor." Then we stepped on the gas and went out and got some more grapefruit. You never can tell what these Longhorns are. After this we are going to talk U. S.

There it goes again. For four weeks now we have planned to go up north and call on the boys in the central part of the state, and each time there has been a "norther" which has brought rain to south Texas and sleet and ice to the middle part and no doubt a blizzard to the central states, and here we are with nothing to do but eat grapefruit and oranges and go to bull fights, although we are not going to any more bull fights. There is one thing, however: J. C. Fanning of the Brownsville theatres is just itching for us to come down there and go fishing with him, and that helps a whole lot.

There is a lady who operates a theatre somewhere up in the state. We wish you could remember her name and the town, for we want to go and call on her. We remember when we called on her once before she said "Why, you old scalawag, what are you doing away down here?"

There are some people who seem to think that getting money from the government is just like finding it. As a rule they are not overly burdened by taxation, but—

The tax man comes around about
The middle of the spring
And figures out just what we've got—
Then takes the whole damthing.

We knew a man in Indiana once who told us he was glad he didn't own a railroad. We asked him why and he said, "Because they have to pay so much taxes." We sold our railroad just on that account. All right, let's let it go at that.

HOLLYWOOD DEMONSTRATES

COMPETENT demonstration of effective and decent application of sex manifestations, and motivations, hunger, horror and violence, all dangerous ingredients in motion picture composition, is afforded on a spectacular scale in "The Good Earth", now entering upon its roadshow career for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

There was positively colossal opportunity in this costly and pretentious effort to have made, in the name of alleged box-office appeal, several or all of those exaggerated appeals to salacity characteristic of the technique that got the screen into the troubles of the pre-Code era.

"The Good Earth", too, in the competency of its telling, gives even to the technically experienced eye no indication that there was any effort to go to "the limit of the rules", as all too frequently obtains. The biological elements of the picture plot, and there are many—in fact, it is dominantly a biological story—are given their proper share in the narration, but never with a lingering touch of directorial fondnesses that have tainted many a picture with eroticism and sadism.

"The Good Earth" in its telling includes a nuptial night, child-birth, the seductive lures of a sing-song girl, and infidelity of sorts, without innuendo intended to seduce the spectators, too. The picture sticks strictly to the job of telling the story—without side shows. And yet, there has been no word of criticism implying that there is any lack of realism, any weakening of dramatic effectiveness.

"The Good Earth", among its other triumphs, is a triumph in decency.

HONORING THE CLICHÉ

SOME industrious and unsigned young man, writing for our favorite movie page of the New York Times, under the title of "Directorial Old Hat," has dared to list a lot of time-tried narrational devices of the screen as clichés. He would include the falling leaves of the calendar to denote the passing of time, the racing wheels of the locomotive and the bone in the teeth of the liner to say that the locale moves, the sewing of tiny garments to indicate an impending addition to the cast, etc. The writer does not venture any discussion of what is to be done about the basic motivation of He seeks She. It is criticism like that which makes Hollywood get arty. The way to tell a story is so that the audience understands it. The audience never heard of a cliché. Further, its life and interests are clichés. Many excellent pictures are nothing else. The customers are born young and never get over it. That makes the amusement business possible. Let our art alone.

PROFESSOR ALLARDYCE NICOLL of the dramatic department of Yale, a speaker on the National Board of Review's program at New York University's motion picture course the other night, complained bitterly that Hollywood gives budding talent no chance to start at the bottom and learn the business. He might just as well complain that President Roosevelt does not arrange to give college boys jobs in the mint so they may learn to make money.

"B" OUTPUT ASSURED

AFTER the Paramount partners' tour of Hollywood in sequel to their excursion to Mr. Adolph Zukor's anniversary celebration, the production center was agog with talk about the visiting exhibitors' reported outgiving on the subject of "no more 'B' pictures." The producer-in-chief of another great studio, one of the young wonders of Hollywood, remarked: "The 'B' picture is positively no problem for any of us. By carefully trying our best to make only 'A's' we are all sure to get a grand crop of 'B's'. The public makes the 'B's', at the box office."

NOTE ON PAWPAWS

THE up-country gentlemen are at it again. Now comes Mr. Charles Pettijohn importing pawpaw trees from his native Indiana, a half dozen going to his Westchester place and another like number to Mr. Maurice McKenzie's Connecticut acres at Lockwood Corners. Mr. Colvin Brown of adjacent Mulberry Ledge in Haviland Road views this as an endeavour to "bring Indiana civilization" to our region. That, in the editor's opinion, would do no harm. Meanwhile one is reminded that, speaking of rural matters, Mr. Will Hays, that smart lawyer and farmer of Sullivan County, raised four hundred acres of Indiana soya beans last year and sold his crop to the soya-plastic trade. So you are likely to get a touch of the Hays office in the steering wheel of your Ford and maybe in the soya sauce for your chop suey. There's symbolism concealed somewhere, here, if you look for it. We don't. The editor is letting his place at Tinker's Dam in the Silvermine Valley fence itself with poison ivy.

This Week

What Are They?

"B" pictures, their continuation or abandonment, their essence and quality, are being widely discussed as a major factor in Hollywood's production policy. Rumors, reports and statements all say that they are to be reduced, that they are to abolished, that they are to be continued but called something else. The only fact which stands out in the whole discussion is that it all depends on how one defines them.

A review of the tempest of words is on page 13.

Seven Signed

Paramount is the seventh and last major distributor—Warner Brothers refuses participation—to announce a stand on the ten point trade practice program advocated by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Establishment of local conciliation boards, agreed upon by most of the companies, will begin at once. Trial boards will be set up in four or five territories to serve as models.

Paramount's reply and a summary of the seven replies received by the MPTOA are on page 15.

British Reorganizing

At the same time that the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries was advising the Board of Trade of its approval in general of the principles of the flexible quota and a quality test for the less expensive films, reorganization of the British studios was getting into action. Economy steps at Denham followed reduced activity by Gaumont-British.

Further details of the British industry's larger problems and what it is doing about it appear on page 73.

"Parnell" in Stills

"Parnell," depicting primarily the romantic and secondarily the political career of the Irish patriot named in the title, is in the foreground of Hollywood interest as it progresses toward completion with production following strict story sequence.

Gus McCarthy's preview of the picture in advance stills appears on pages 16 and 17.

RKO to Show "Flanders"

The furore over the American-Tobis picture, "La Kermesse Heroique" ("Carnival in Flanders"), has subsided. On documentary representation by W. E. Van Beverin, president of American-Tobis, that the company is not a German company and should not incur involvement with the Nazi issue, RKO Theatres is to play the production in its houses.

Radio in Hollywood

William S. Paley, president of Columbia Broadcasting System, told Hollywood reporters that radio is more directly in competition with newspapers than with motion picture theatres and predicted that television would not become a commercial factor for at least two years.

Mr. Paley's interview is reported on page 33.

Writers "Revolt"

Western "liberal" writers and educators are in revolt against the manner in which Hollywood producers allegedly "mutilate" the story output of socalled "progressive" authors.

Their plans for an attack on the present brand of Hollywood product are discussed on page 31.

Recorded Music Barred

The National Association of Performing Artists and New York and Chicago locals of the American Federation of Musicians have begun a campaign to check the use of recordings for dubbing in motion pictures, over the radio and in music slot machines. The picket campaign to restore stage shows in theatres is being continued by the Federation.

The story is on page 18.

Finance

Financial news this week included analyses of stock holdings in RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Columbia, a dividend declaration by Loew's, Inc., an earning report for RCA, and an estimated value of $497,257,013 placed on the total market value of motion picture securities on the New York Stock Exchange.

Statistics are on page 71.

Legislation

With Congressional action on bills affecting the motion picture industry delayed, attention of the industry is focused on action in state legislatures. Outstanding is a proposal for a 7 per cent admission tax in Ohio.

State and municipal legislative news is reported on page 32.

Chance in Court

Theatre chance games are involved in two more critical court actions. In Chicago 239 suits brought against theatre managers and corporations were to be heard on Thursday and in Louisiana the state supreme court will review a lower court decision which ruled that Bank Night is a lottery.

Details are on page 14.

Production Impeded

Continuance of the influenza epidemic as an impediment to production held studio activity at approximate level during the first week of February, 11 pictures being taken from the stages and 10 put into work.

Titles, personnel and auspices of the pictures started and finished are given on page 33.

Theatre Grosses

The United States Government reports that 30,317 places of amusements, including motion picture theatres, grossed $476,268,000 in 1935, and that $112,393,000 represented the payroll for 115,281 persons—in 35 states covered so far in the Census Bureau's survey of amusement. At the same time, motion picture theatres were reported from within the industry to have enjoyed a 13.8 per cent gross increase in business in 28 key cities.

The findings in both reports appear on page 34.

Australian Ukase

All exhibitors in the Commonwealth are called upon to observe the established minimum admission prices and ban on giveaways, in a statement signed by all distributors, writes Cliff Holt from Melbourne. The original decree was promulgated by the Film Board of Trade, established last year. This and the adoption of the Quota for New South Wales were among outstanding developments of the past 12 months.

Further discussion of trends and activities in Australia appears on page 43.

Denies Charges

E. C. Mills, general manager of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers in New York, denied this week that his organization levies any charge of any kind on either producers or distributors for the use of its copyrighted music in pictures in a letter to the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, which the association published in its bulletin.

The text of Mr. Mills' letter is found in part, on page 71.

No Government Aid

Mayor Cosme Hinojosa of Mexico City definitely has rejected a plea by Mexican producers that the municipal Government aid the film industry by erecting theatres and reducing taxes. In a letter to the Producers Union he said that writers, directors and players of artistic endowment are more necessary to the industry than Government aid through a quota, subsidy or other means.

A report from Mexico is on page 68.

Educational Plan

Stockholders of Educational Pictures, Inc., have approved a plan of recapitalization which provides for the exchange of the old preferred stock of the company on the basis of 3.2 shares of new common for each share of preferred, plus 1.8 shares of new common in payment of the accrued dividends on each share of the old preferred.

Further details are on page 66.

RKO Offer Accepted

RKO Radio's offer to acquire clear title to the assets of the Orpheum circuit for $700,000 cash and subordination of its claims of approximately $3,450,000 against Orpheum has been approved by Federal Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn. The referee rejected an offer of $2,000,000 cash for the assets made by Hudson County Warehouses, Inc., on behalf of a committee of preferred stockholders. The decision was based on an acceptance of the RKO offer by a majority of Orpheum creditors at a meeting held on February 2nd.

Paramount Meet

A three-day meeting of Paramount theatre operators and partners from every section of the country will be held at Miami, Fla., March 18-20, immediately following the convention there of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which will be attended by Adolph Zukor.

A discussion of the meeting, and other Paramount developments, are found in the story on page 49.

MPTOA Program

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on Monday outlined the schedule for its program at the annual convention, opening March 16th, at Miami, and concluding on March 19th.

Theatre design, construction, management, exploitation, trade practice, legislation and taxation will be the principal highlights. See page 34.

Holland's Problems

American motion pictures continue to dominate in the Dutch theatres, despite growing competition from British and German producers, but the business of the motion picture has been showing a steady decline.

The problems of the trade in Holland are reviewed on page 49.

More Flood Benefits

The flood waters of the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers began to rapidly recede over last weekend and during the week theatres in stricken towns began repairs, in some instances even opened for business. Louisville and Cincinnati were no longer flooded, but the Ohio town suffered nowhere near as much as Louisville and quickly reopened its houses. Theatres throughout the country are doing their part to aid flood sufferers with special benefit performances that indicate collections totaling thousands of dollars.

Complete flood and benefit details are on page 44.

Hollywood Jobs

"The very surest way to get a job in Hollywood is to stay away from there and become important in some of the arts upon which the motion picture draws for talent," Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, told a student gathering in a course conducted by Professor A. Broderick Cohen for Hunter College of the City of New York Tuesday night. "When the picture makers are looking for somebody to do a job they do not search the crowd hammering at the studio gates, but rather they look across the world to find some one so competent that he is already recognized and employed. There is no time, no patience to experiment. Hollywood has no more time to develop talent than a fire department has to dig a well. The time in Hollywood is always Now, not yesterday, not tomorrow—but Now."

Samuel Shipman

Samuel Shipman, playwright, died of a heart attack in New York on Tuesday at 53 years of age. He wrote, alone or in collaboration, 30 plays which were produced on Broadway. Among those made into pictures were "East Is West," "Friendly Enemies," "Over Here," "The Kreutzer Sonata," "Children of Today" and "Lawful Larceny." Three brothers and two sisters survive.

Union Peace

Agreements designed to end the multiple projectionist union situation in New York City were signed early Wednesday by representatives of the Allied Union of Moving Picture Operators, Local 306, International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees and by Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association. The pacts, scheduled to go into effect on Monday, include a merger of Local 306 and Allied and a new contract with members of the ITOA. The projectionists will receive wage increases of approximately 25 per cent and a reduction in working hours from 80 to 70 a week. The agreement was effected under the supervision of a special committee appointed by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia and has been pending for some weeks.

Color Suit

The Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California has advised its members to secure releases in writing from exchanges selling color prints before showing such prints, pending the outcome of a suit between Tricolor Corporation and Technicolor. The suit, scheduled for hearing in March, involves claims of patent infringement on a duplex camera.

"B" FILMS BECOME ISSUE OF STUDIO AND THEATRE

Paramount and RKO Increasing Budget for "B" Pictures; Producers Call Them Testing Ground for Stars and Stories

Most Producers Say Films Made with Little Care and on Small Budgets Should Be Dropped or Curtailed

Reports and statements from the studios and from the home offices concerning the status of "B" pictures indicate that consideration of that classification will be a major problem in Hollywood's production policy this year. Outstanding are these:

Paramount has announced that it will decrease the number of "B" pictures, while allotting more money to them.

RKO will increase its entire production budget, including appropriations for the so-called "B's".

The attitude of the large studios is reflected in a statement by Charles R. Rogers of Universal that no picture can be labeled "B" until it has undergone the box office test.

Many producers contend that "B" pictures are invaluable as a testing ground for new stars and new story methods.

Others say that the issue is inextricably connected with the prevalence of double features.

A wide divergence of definition further beclouds the discussions.

Most producers who have aired their views, for quotation or otherwise, agree that "B" pictures, if defined as productions made quickly, without great care, on small budgets and aimed only at the lower half of double bills, should be abandoned or at least reduced in number, and that pictures made on small budgets but carefully produced and directed should not be handicapped by the "B" label until they have proved their status. The trend, if such it is, is only in the formative stage and few of the larger companies have taken a definite stand.

Stemming from the confusion in definition is a long train of possibilities and suppositions. Involved also is definition of an "A" picture, or even of a good picture, with the fine critical point of whether the basis is artistic or commercial.

Recognize Theatres' Divergence

Producers are conscious of what kind of entertainment is demanded in the Music Halls and the Carthay Circles to prove popular and make money. They are aware of what the patrons require in Wahoo, Nebraska, and the thousands of similar locations. They are going to continue to make product to accommodate the demands of both types of theatres. Whether one type of picture can be made to cover both extremes and whether the labels, in case this is not feasible, will be "A" and "B," are factors in the groping for a solution.

The discussion was precipitated by Paramount's exhibitor partners on the occasion of the studio product conferences in Hollywood following the Adolph Zukor silver jubilee. Paramount acceded to their demand that the number of "B" films be reduced and their quality improved, by cutting the number of program pictures by 25 per cent from 24 to 18. According to a company announcement the saving will be applied to bigger budgets and cast names for the remainder of the schedule.

EXHIBITORS GIVEN CREDIT FOR "B" CUT

M. A. Lightman, Memphis theatre owner, claims credit for exhibitors for Paramount's promise to make fewer and better pictures in 1937. Returning from Hollywood where he and other Paramount theatre partners conferred with studio executives, Mr. Lightman said:

"We convinced Mr. Zukor, Mr. DeMille and others that it would be more profitable in the long run to concentrate time, effort and money on fewer pictures of better quality. As a result, Paramount has decided to reduce its production this year from 70 pictures to about 48."

Zukor Opposes "B" Films

Mr. Zukor, speaking at a press conference in New York, said anent the "B" pictures:

"I'm against them. What do 'B' pictures mean? I know of instances where lesser attractions costing as little as $200,000 or $250,000 have shown a loss of $80,000. The sales department may have an argument for 'B' pictures but there is no argument from the studio angle. This is why we are setting out to make pictures based on merit of story, casts and treatment as best we know how. Some of them, obviously, will end up as 'B' product. At least it is not our intention to start out that way. On the pictures to be made with a smaller budget, and this goes for all, I do not propose to allow them to enter production unless I am convinced there are values at the outset,—story, cast, treatment and director."

Testing Ground

One thesis holding wide support among producers is that "B" pictures, so called, can not or should not be abolished because they provide a testing ground for new names and for experiments in story and treatment. It is claimed that the intermediate picture, costing from $300,000 to $400,000, is the type of production in which stars are launched and in which unusual types of stories are tested and adopted.

This treatment is being applied to the problem by RKO Radio. Budgets for the company's "B" pictures are to be increased from 25 to 35 per cent in the effort to elevate films in this classification to the point where they can play first run and single feature houses with success. The increase will add approximately $2,000,000 to the company's production costs for a program of 52 features.

Samuel J. Briskin, vice-president in charge of production for RKO, believes that the introduction of new personalities and a greater diversity of story material are the logical steps toward creating more widespread interest in motion pictures. He called attention to "The Plough and the Stars," screen version of Sean O'Casey's stage play, in connection with his studio's attempt to break away from the beaten path. The story, concerned with the Irish uprising of 20 years ago, would doubtless never have been considered as screen material a short time ago, the production executive commented, but it is justified by the success of "The Informer" last year. "The Informer," with its comparatively low budget, could be labeled a "B" picture under some methods of classification, he said.

Another illustration in the same company's ledger is "Winterset," the cost of which is declared at about $400,000. The production, although not a box office cyclone, gave the company a personality in Burgess Meredith, it was pointed out.

Also cited are a number of the pictures made by Darryl Zanuck at Twentieth Century-Fox to bring out new personalities. Most recent is "One in a Million" which is said to have gone over $500,000 in cost but gave the company a potential star in Sonja Henie. Columbia's "One Night of Love," which cost about $350,000 but made Grace Moore a star, was still another example.

Protests "B" Objective

Charles R. Rogers, Universal vice-president in charge of production, in presenting his company's stand, took occasion to attack the classifying of pictures with a "B" label prior to their preview. The producer said:

"It is little short of idiotic to handicap a production with a 'B' label, especially when no one can tell how good a picture it may turn out to be."

Mr. Rogers felt that exhibitors are entirely justified in resenting the harmful publicity emanating from Hollywood on this type of picture. He pointed out that spending a million dollars or more on a picture and labeling it "epic" does not guarantee it will catch the public's fancy. On the other hand, he said, the simplest and most unpretentious story often develops into a box office smash. He emphasized that no producer or director is ever justified in aiming at a "B" category, and added that Universal certainly will not countenance the intentional planning of second rate productions. All the skill, care and resourcefulness of which the producers are capable will be put into Universal pic-

MAJORS' STAND ON TRADE PRACTICES

Major companies' replies to the ten point trade practice program of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America were approximately 66 per cent favorable according to an MPTOA bulletin sent to the trade on Monday. Paramount was the seventh and last company to publish its stand, Warner Brothers having indicated that they would not take part in the negotiations. Points on which the replies were indefinite were listed by the MPTOA as "Open". The record follows:

Community Theatre Project Planned

Considerable motion picture executive personnel is directly aligned with a new and comprehensive plan to establish community theatres throughout the country, the first of them to be constructed for the 1939 World's Fair, in New York. This was revealed this week by officials of the American National Theatre and Academy, which in July, 1935, received a charter from Congress for a national theatre movement.

The basis of the program is the creation of an ideal type of community center available for theatrical productions, motion pictures, dance performances and also suitable for the most elaborate Broadway shows. The building and financing of these centers and their choice of programs will be optional with local groups. Although it has a Federal charter, the National Theatre and Academy does not receive Federal funds. It also differs from the Federal Theatre Project in that the latter is primarily for relief.

The National Theatre and Academy's only expenses are administrative, and these have been paid by its trustees according to A. Conger Goodyear, president of the NT and A. He also said that no motion picture money would be used, although he himself is a director of Paramount, and John Hay Whitney, a director of the National Theatre, is chairman of the board of Selznick International and president of Pioneer. Arthur Hopkins, producer, who was also present, agreed with Mr. Goodyear that publicly-financed theatres would not result in a competitive problem for private theatre managers or motion picture exhibitors.

Besides Mr. Goodyear, recently elected officers are Mrs. Edith J. R. Isaacs, editor of Theatre Arts Monthly, first vice-president; J. Howard Reber, second vice-president; Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount, treasurer; and Mary Stewart French, secretary. The executive committee for the coming year will include Mr. Goodyear, chairman; Mrs. Isaacs, Winthrop Ames, Mrs. August Belmont and Mr. Reber. The directors are Mr. Ames, Mrs. Belmont, C. Lawton Campbell, Richard F. Cleveland, Mrs. Frances Crane, Clayton Hamilton, Amory Hare Hutchinson, Miss Anne Morgan, Miss Constance Morrow, Edward M. M. Warburg, Dr. Hugh H. Young and Mr. Whitney.

Warner Trading Halted for Hour

An announcement by Warner Brothers at 1 o'clock on Tuesday that plans for a new stock issue had been abandoned resulted in a burst of buying orders on the New York Stock Exchange which forced a tie-up in trading in the company's stock for more than an hour. When trading resumed it was at an advance of 1⅜ in the price of shares.

A New York Times financial writer, commenting on the situation, said:

"Without attempting to read into the record an unsupported statement that a large short position had been created, it is a matter of general knowledge that several companies of late years have been faced with lower markets upon announcement of issues of rights to purchase new shares. If some such considerations dictated the abandonment of the Warner Brothers stock offering, it should not be a matter of surprise."

Ohio Censor Deletions

The Ohio censors reviewed a total of 502 reels in January, and ordered 28 eliminations. This compares with 756 reels reviewed in December, and 42 eliminations ordered, and 611 reels reviewed, with 16 eliminations in January, 1936.

239 Chance Game Suits Up in Chicago

Important court actions involving theatre chance games were underway this week. In Chicago 239 suits brought by the city against 114 theatre corporations and 125 theatre managers were to be heard in municipal court on Thursday. A test case in Louisiana was placed before the state supreme court on an appeal from the Orleans parish court of appeal.

The only other court case bearing on chance games was heard in Windsor Locks, Conn., where a town court convicted a theatre operator of operating a lottery because he conducted a Bank Night plan which allowed the use of proxies. The City Council of Omaha, Neb., has abandoned consideration of legal action against Bank Night and a county attorney in Kansas has banned the games in his territory.

In the Chicago suits the operators were charged with distributing money by chance on prize drawing nights in violation of a city ordinance under which they obtained their theatre licenses. The maximum fine for violation of the ordinance is $100.

The Chicago city court hearings, set for Wednesday, were postponed for a day.

Clarence V. Beck, Kansas attorney general, has advised county attorneys of the state to move against chance games following denial of a rehearing of a supreme court decision which held Bank Night illegal.

Two bills introduced in the Arkansas state legislature affect chance games. A straight impost of 25 per cent on gross gifts is suggested in one proposal. The second measure provides a license fee of $250 annually from the copyright owners, $40 annually from the distributors, $50 annually from the exhibitors and 20 per cent of the value of each prize given.

Newspapers Pick "Lloyds"

"Lloyds of London" has been voted the best picture released in January by the critics of the 23 Scripps-Howard newspapers throughout the country.

MAJORS FAVOR 66% OF TRADE PRACTICE PROGRAM

Paramount, Seventh Distributor to Reply, Offers Liberalized 10% Cancellation, Favors Boards, Retains Score Charge

Large companies' replies to the ten point trade practice program formulated by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have been completed with the release of Paramount's statement advising Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, of the company's attitude on the proposals. The first of the local conciliation boards, on which cooperation was promised by a majority of the distributors, will be set up this month, indications pointing to Philadelphia as the first exchange territory to complete establishment of a local board. Warners is the only large company refusing to participate in the program.

A combined listing of the replies from the seven companies reveals that the acceptances have been approximately 66 per cent favorable from the standpoint of the exhibitor organization. The MPTOA analysis listed the replies to each point as "Favorable", "Refused", "Qualified", or "Open". [See opposite page.]

With the MPTOA program at this definite stage of development other exhibitor organizations were continuing their activities in the field of trade practice changes. The Independent Theatre Owners' Association of New York has announced that it will seek an injunction against Loew's and all exchanges serving the Loew circuit houses in the metropolitan area in an effort to prevent continuance of the new split week policy adopted by the circuit. The policy provides for showing "A" product over five day weekends. The first bill sponsored by the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors to outlaw ownership of theatres by producers will be considered by the North Dakota legislature, where it has been favorably reported.

Paramount's Reply

Paramount is the seventh large distributor to announce its stand on the MPTOA program. No reply is expected from Warner Brothers, which declined to participate in the joint distributor conferences with the MPTOA executive committee last June. National independent distributors have indicated that they will cooperate with the movement, and several may make formal statements later.

The policy announced by Paramount follows the pattern set by the other companies in granting a liberalized ten per cent cancellation, offering cooperation in the establishment of local conciliation boards but declining to eliminate the separate score charge. The reply follows:

1. "Our policy will be to permit every exhibitor who contracts for all of our feature pictures offered to him, to cancel up to 10% of the total number of features contracted for, provided the exhibitor gives written notice of his election to cancel within 10 days after the company has served notice of availability of each respective picture, and provided the exhibitor is not in default under his contract at the time he desires to make the cancellation.

SEVEN COMPANIES ANNOUNCE POLICY

Universal, first company to reply to the ten point trade practice program, published its stand early last November. Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and RKO Radio followed at intervals, and Paramount, the seventh and last to reply, made known its policy last weekend. The replies are tabulated on page 14.

2. "Paramount will cooperate with all elements of the industry in endeavoring to set up local conciliation boards and to agree on the matters which may properly be the subject of such conciliation.

3. "We recognize the clearance should be fair and not excessive, but we do not believe that clearance can be left to the determination of local boards. It must be the result of individual negotiations between the exhibitor and the distributor, as it has always been.

4. "As to over-buying of pictures, this is a subject over which the distributor has no control and is a problem between exhibitors.

5. "Unfair cut rate competition between theatres is similarly an exhibitor and not a distributor problem. It has always been our policy to insist that its customers charge reasonable minimum admission prices for its pictures. It has also been our policy to refuse to license the exhibition of our pictures in situations where we felt that to do so would unfairly compete with or seriously injure our customer's business.

6. "Paramount has always recognized its responsibility to its customers who are regularly engaged in conducting motion picture theatres. With that in mind we have consistently refrained from licensing our pictures for exhibition by non-theatrical accounts where to do so would jeopardize the interests of a regular motion picture theatre, as well as our own revenue as a distributor.

7. "In the present state of the law we believe that we should not subscribe to a standard license agreement. The proposed standard form which you recommend contains certain provisions which are inconsistent with our sales policy and for that reason we could not adopt it. Regarding your suggestion of the use of a short form of contract which refers to a long form of contract, it appears to us impracticable. We believe it would lead to confusion and possible misunderstanding.

Philadelphia May Have First Conciliation Board; Warner Alone of Large Companies Refuses to Participate

8. "The score charge is an essential part of our revenue and we cannot afford to forego it.

9. "The designation of play dates must necessarily be the subject of negotiation between our company and its customers. We cannot in fairness to ourselves delegate the subject to a conciliation board. Paramount has always exercised its privilege of designation with extreme fairness, having in mind the quality of the pictures designated for preferred playing time. This we will continue to do.

10. "Paramount's policy is to negotiate with its customers for the use of its short subjects according to its customers' needs. We, of course, expect our customers, according to their requirements, to take at least the same proportion of our short subjects as they do of our features."

Dallas or Seattle Next

Major distributors who have agreed to cooperate in the establishment of the conciliation boards will begin at once to authorize their branch managers to participate in the setting up of the boards in conjunction with local exhibitor organizations. Either Dallas or Seattle is expected to follow Philadelphia, and Charlotte may complete the initial trial group.

Conciliation boards will be established only in territories where a majority of the representative exhibitors petition for them, and it is not expected that any additional boards will be set up until procedures have been studied in the initial group.

Court Issues Order On Hearing for Roxy

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey in New York signed an order last Saturday directing creditors and stockholders of the Roxy Theatre Corporation to show cause on March 5 why the plan of reorganization for the theatre company should not be declared fair and equitable by the court and adopted.

Judge Caffey's order also directed the creditors to show whether the company is solvent or insolvent and whether or not stockholders have a right to participate in the plan. The order directs the trustee to mail the plan to all interested parties on Feb. 20 after advertising notice of the March 5 hearing and sets forth that a list of creditors of the Roxy may be had by application to the court.

Manufacturers Trust Company was designated depository for bondholders' assents to the plan, and Halsey, Stuart and Company for the noteholders.

"PARNELL" IS ROMANTIC

IN contrast with such recent pictures as "Beloved Enemy" and "The Plough and the Stars," which in taking for their themes various stages of Ireland's political development emphasized the drama of military conflict, "Parnell" approaches its subject strictly from the viewpoint of romantic love interest against a dramatic background of political intrigue and struggle. In choosing to tell this story of Charles Stewart Parnell, Irish patriot of the moment when initial modern efforts were being made to establish Home Rule in the Emerald Isle, MGM is electing to tell the love story of a great man more than it chooses to repeat the career of a great political leader; of a man whose life was compelling in its humanness, courage and romance and not merely the story of a man made colorful by the passing panorama of historical events.

Briefly Parnell, rallying its protagonists and winning the cooperation of English Prime Minister William Gladstone, launches the fight for Home Rule. Parnell, through the machinations of Captain Willie O'Shea, a political opportunist, meets and falls in love with the latter's wife, Kittie O'Shea. Home Rule enemies, as modern minded as present day politicians, conspire to involve the leader in political scandal. Their plot fails, but another, more dramatically serious, is hatched. Enraged because favors are denied, O'Shea applies for a divorce, naming Parnell as corespondent. England and Ireland rock to the details of this intimate scandal. Parnell's refusal to attend the trial is interpreted as an admission of guilt; the Home Rule party splits, Gladstone withdraws his support and Parnell resigns as leader. Broken in spirit, Parnell dies in Kittie's arms and the cause of Irish freedom is impeded for more than a generation.

As Parnell, Clark Gable is given one of his finest dramatic roles. It may be expected that director John M. Stahl will do as much to establish Myrna Loy, in the role of Kittie O'Shea, as a dramatic actress as he did for Irene Dunn in "Back Street" and "Magnificent Obsession" and Claudette Colbert in "Imitation of Life."

Other cast assignments have been made with care and thought. Alan Marshall (Captain de Trevignac in "The Garden of Allah") is Captain Willie O'Shea. Montagu Love is Gladstone. Edmund Gwenn is Parnell's secretary and Donald Crisp is his closest friend, while Berton Churchill is O'Gorman Mahon. Others of importance are Edna May Oliver, Billie Burke, Donald Meek, Neil Fitzgerald, Halliwell Hobbes, J. Farrell MacDonald, Pat Moriarty, Byron Russell, Brandon Tynan, Phyllis Coughlan and Murray Kinnell. Atmospheric personnel support includes hundreds of Irish types.

With license taken and alterations made, motivation for the production is Elsie T. Schauffler's stage play, presented in New York and other metropolitan centers, adapted by John Van Druten. Under one time London Dublin historian, newspaper man, playwright, Charles Whittaker, several months were devoted to study of Parnell lore and legend for authenticity in historic, romantic and dramatic fullness.

Production detail effected under the supervision of Cedric Gibbons by art director William Horning accurately reproduces Queenstown Harbor, the House of Commons and lobbies, Parnell's quarters in London, Dublin and Irish countryside villages and Kittie O'Shea's home, as they were at the time of the story, the decade between 1880 and 1890. Camera work is by George Folsey, who helped on "The Great Ziegfeld" and also shot "The Good Earth." Musical accompaniment, the beneficiary of intensive research into English and Irish melodies, was created by Dr. William Axt.

Mr. Stahl elected to direct "Parnell" in strict story sequence so that his players might "live their roles" and, less seriously delayed than other pictures affected by the influenza epidemic, the film is expected to be ready for mid-March release.

COMPANIES DEFINE AIMS ON "B" FILMS

tures regardless of their place on the program, he said.

The Universal executive pointed out that the budget on "Three Smart Girls" was increased three times during the production to achieve the desired result, and that similar measures were adopted with "Top of the Town."

Repeating that no one can prophesy how great a picture will be, even a picture made on a modest budget, Mr. Rogers said, "Charm, the greatest appeal any picture can have, like gold, is where you find it, and it is as likely to appear in a production made on a modest budget as it is to grace a two million dollar epic. But it cannot possibly exist in a picture made to 'B' specifications."

Called Disproportionate

The case for a reduction in the number of "B" pictures, while retaining a definite place in the production schedule for them, was made by Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of the company's theatre operations.

"There is no question about there being a definite place in the industry and some real need for 'B' product," Mr. Freeman said. "Pictures of that kind fill a definite need of the smaller theatres and of double featuring. However, so many of them are being made now in proportion to the number of 'A' pictures being produced that the larger theatres are forced to exist on them from time to time. They cannot do so successfully."

The executive pointed out that large studios were turning out from three to five "B" pictures for every "A" picture produced, and expressed the opinion that, from the theatre operator's viewpoint, there should not be more than one "B" for every "A" picture, and that even fewer would be preferable.

Point of View a Factor

The whole discussion of "B" pictures, in relation to the double feature problem, took opposite meanings, depending on the point of view. Opponents of the double feature policy seemed to find in the vague indication that "B" pictures may be reduced or abandoned, a hope that their elimination will kill double bills by cutting off suitable product. Those who saw no end to double bills felt safe in assuming that "B" pictures always will be made because they are needed for double featuring. Chance games and giveaways were brought into the discussion with similar confusion.

The Independent Theatre Owners' Association added its voice to the turmoil with the opinion that nothing much will be done about the matter.

"The prevalence of double features makes it impossible to do away with 'B' pictures," an article in the ITOA publication said. "No producer is going to spend a lot of money on pictures that will have to be the lower half of a double bill. Not enough money can be realized on an investment by such dates. Thus, the 'B' picture. No exhibitor is going to play an 'A' picture which should make money for him, give away a few hundred dollars to attract customers, pay a high rental and expect to wind up in the black.

ENGLISH EXHIBITORS TO VISIT AMERICA

Arthur Taylor, secretary of the London Branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association in England, will lead a group of his fellow exhibitors on a visit to the United States, similar to that of last year. The group will sail from England on the Queen Mary on May 19. While in the United States it is expected they will tour the various cities as on the previous trip and visit the studios in Hollywood.

"If the producers want to cut out 'B' pictures, put picture making on a higher entertainment level and really turn out worthwhile pictures, the only solution seems to be the abolition of giveaways, extended runs and a higher admission price in the first-run houses. Then a subsequent-run house can play a good picture without having to fear that the potential patronage has been squeezed dry. It can also raise its prices and run itself as a theatre."

What the Companies Plan

No revolutionary change from the present production structure is indicated at present. Firm in the intent to make profitable pictures, whether they are called "A," "B" or just pictures, the producers are aware that inexpensive features make a profit that compensates for losses incurred by more pretentious efforts which fail at the box office.

Columbia, which has just completed "Lost Horizon" at a cost estimated at $2,000,000, will continue both classifications. The individual producers in Grand National intend to rate their productions as "A" features but the number of "B" pictures to result remains to be seen. MGM will balance its approximately 30 "A's" with the usual quota of program pictures. The new Republic organization, while expressing some disappointment with "Follow Your Heart," plans to continue along the same production lines that have marked its activities since its inception. Warner Brothers will supplement 36 "A's" with a number of "B" productions. Hal Roach will continue "A" feature length comedies. Sol Lesser will go along with "A" contributions to RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox releases and both "A's" and "B's" on his own program. Twentieth Century-Fox will maintain its established policy with an increasing number of "A's." The one exception is United Artists, the individual members of which maintain that the production of "A's" is their sole policy.

As true as it is trite was the statement made by one producer that the answer lies with the exhibitor, meaning that the original holder of the dime and the quarter which make box office records will make the final decision and at the moment even he does not know what it will be.

Musicians to Ban Recordings; Picket Drive Continuing

A campaign to check the use of recordings for dubbing in motion pictures, over the radio and in music slot machines in order to alleviate unemployment among musicians has been started by the National Association of Performing Artists and New York Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians. The Local is continuing its picket campaign to force theatres to restore stage shows and orchestras.

A ban has been placed on recordings by the Chicago Federation of Musicians and the New York Local is supporting the movement. It is expected that the matter will be discussed at the AFM meeting in Miami, Fla., on February 22nd.

Although the RCA-Victor Company is reported to have protested the Chicago ban, Joseph N. Weber, president of the AFM, has refused to interfere, holding that it is a matter for the individual units to decide. The New York and Chicago locals are confident of obtaining enough support from other units to make a curb on recordings nationwide in scope.

Jacob Rosenberg, president of Local 802, at a meeting in New York charged that 80 per cent of the music in motion pictures is dubbed in from records. While acknowledging the parallel between the horse and the automobile and "live" and "canned" music, he noted that the horse did not try to help the advance of the automobile.

The union campaign to bring back stage attractions, which began September 10th, is being actively continued in New York. A reported 4,000 musicians and 860 members of the American Federation of Actors have participated in the drive which is conducted out of five headquarters in the city. Musicians doing picket duty are reported to be paid 50 cents an hour and the actors serve voluntarily.

Operators of the 20 New York theatres being picketed maintain that the drive has not injured them materially. The most tangible results have been obtained by the musicians in Philadelphia where eight Warner theatres agreed to reinstate stage shows.

Iowa, Nebraska ITO Set Annual Meeting

The Allied-Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, Inc., will hold its annual convention at the Savery Hotel in Des Moines February 15 and 16, with Leo F. Wolcott, president, presiding.

Among the subjects to be discussed will be opposition to proposed adverse legislation by the Iowa legislature this session. The Bank Night bill, admission tax, booth labor bill and censorship are some of the proposed pieces of legislation.

STAGE LOOKING TO HOLLYWOOD FOR MONEY AND FOR SHOWMEN

Public Spending Money but There Are Only 26 Shows in Times Square Compared with 53 Plays in 1927

by FREDERICK W. AYER

$795,000 Paid by Film Companies For Eight Plays; $99,250 Average

Motion picture companies this season have set an all-time high for the purchase price of Broadway plays, paying $795,000, an average of $99,250 each, for eight plays definitely purchased thus far from the crop of 1936-37 productions. This figure is exclusive of the price of $18,000 paid by RKO for the title of "New Faces", taken from the Broadway revue of that name.

A listing of plays bought this season follows:

PLAY	PLAY	COMPANY
Spring Dance	$25,000	Paramount
Double Dummy	20,000	RKO
Boy Meets Girl	65,000	Warner Bros.
Tovarich	160,000	Warner Bros.
Stage Door	150,000	RKO
Night Must Fall	50,000	MGM
The Women	125,000	Goetz-Gordon
You Can't Take It With You	200,000	Columbia

Broadway's legitimate theatrical industry, in a staggering effort to emerge from the apparent state of moribundity in which it has been wallowing since September, finally has rounded the half-way mark of its 1936-37 season after a catastrophic beginning which has planted in the minds of both friends and critics of the stage the fact that the legitimate theatre desperately needs the financial aid and showmanship brains of Hollywood if it is to survive as an integral factor of the American amusement world.

If the legitimate theatre never had the opportunity to prove its worth prior to the current season, 1936-37 dished up that opportunity on a silver platter. The clouds of general business depression had begun to lift, the public was beginning to spend money on a scale comparable with 1927, and that portion of the amusement-seeking public which had been forced during the past six years to confine itself to spending forty cents for film entertainment when it had been in the habit of spending $3.30 at the legitimate theatre box-office formerly once again was ready to loosen its purse strings and support flesh-and-blood drama.

26 Shows, Five of Them Musicals

At the beginning of February in 1927 there were 63 major theatrical productions in full swing on Broadway and out of this number 22 were musicals. At this writing there are 26 shows in the Times Square belt and only five of these are musicals. This might indicate to the motion picture minded that there is a lack of interest in the legitimate drama as compared with the interest demonstrated ten years ago, but the fact remains that what "hit" shows there are on Broadway today are being as ardently patronized as were the "Broadways," "Coquettes" and "Royal Family" of another decade.

The solution to Broadway's problem may be found in the fact that there is at the present time a definite lack of

1. Story material;
2. Motion picture financing;
3. Motion picture showmanship.

If the 1936-37 season has done nothing sensational to date it most certainly has proved not only that story material is inferior, but that there is not sufficient story material. As has been pointed out repeatedly it is not the occasional good play that keeps the theatre or the motion picture alive, but the steady, dependable stream of plays coming from brilliant minds which each of these dramatic mediums must have to survive. Hollywood has found this source, but Broadway, apparently, has not.

At the beginning of the current Broadway season, when more shows had been promised than at any time since 1929, one play after another opened and closed within three-week periods, and with startling regularity. The cry of the critics was always the same: "Give us good plays."

To a great extent the business depression may be blamed for the present state of things. Creative minds, too, demand sustenance and Hollywood producers have been far-seeing enough to realize that they have to have stories, that writers must furnish them and that, therefore, writers must be paid. Hollywood has put writing on a strictly commercial basis by paying writers to turn over the product of their thinking for a salary. Hollywood subsidizes brains, and whatever comes out of that subsidy is flung into the daily assignment.

Subsidizing Urged

There can be no doubt that many of these so casually injected ideas would make successful plays if the playwright had the time and money to work out the detail instead of just throwing it into the heap that he turns out as his weekly grist—on a salary.

It has been suggested time and again that Broadway managers ally themselves financially to support promising playwrights in an attempt to raise the standard of legitimate entertainment, but thus far all such pleas have fallen on deaf ears. It is this writer's opinion that any and all efforts in the playwright's behalf will continue to fall on deaf ears until such time as Broadway managers realize that the legitimate theatre can be held together only by unified support and purpose, financially and morally.

Actors Equity Association for months has been waging a campaign to effect the subsidization of playwrights by legitimate managers and has been engaged in joint conferences with the League of New York Theatres and the Dramatists Guild in an attempt to discover what is wrong with the present day theatre and what can be done to increase its popularity with the public. The results of their deliberations, also, have been reduced to the sole suggestion that playwrights must be subsidized by managers.

"A group of promising young playwrights put under contract and put to work (by stage producers) their output at the subsidizing manager's disposal, could earn their salt many times over," Equity, house organ of the actors' union, editorializes in its January issue. "Suppose one of these writers was to be paid three or four thousand dollars a year. One hit alone would earn the manager and himself many times over what had been paid to him."

Pooled Resources Urged

While Equity's suggestion appears to be constructive, it seems only fair to state that there are scarcely more than a half dozen managers who, individually and personally, are in a sufficiently solvent state to spend such a sum annually on a playwright or a group of playwrights. If, however, all active producing managers could pool a part of their resources for the establishment of a central agency to subsidize promising playwrights—all of whom would, of course, be required to pass certain examinations or competitions—there might be an adequate and feasible solution to the problem.

With respect to motion picture financing of stage plays, a factor of the legitimate theatre which has been noticeably lacking this season, due to the refusal of film companies to back plays contracted for under the new Minimum Basic Agreement of the Dramatists Guild, it is considered reasonable that this lack of official motion picture interest is responsible in a large measure for the continuous failure this season of Broadway managers.

Hollywood long has looked to Broadway for a great portion of its talent, technical and story material. The very fact that this season Hollywood has not officially been overseeing the development of this supply must have contributed to its general deterioration. In the final analysis Broadway managers consider the motion picture possibilities of the plays they produce long before they consider whether or not their property will stand up under the weather of a "run" and from that run return sufficient profit to justify their faith in their business. Further, the average Broadway manager considers his judgment so far superior to that of the average Hollywood producer that he loses sight of the fact that his entertainment material, to be successfully sold to motion pictures, must be in common with the tastes of motion picture audiences.

It is the contention of many observers that the average Broadway manager is incapable of judging what is and what is not good motion picture material, solely because of his lack of experience, and that, therefore, he needs motion picture counsel and financial aid if he is successfully to purvey his entertainment to theatre and motion picture audiences alike.

Showmanship the Answer

These two production factors—story material and financing—tie in together under the heading of showmanship. Broadway producers today appear to rely exclusively upon their bankrolls and not their wits to sell their goods to the public. Press-agentry has become an effete tea-time and cocktail pastime, a sort of "social journalistic interlude". Exploitation, as the motion picture exhibitor understands the word, is unknown to the stage.

If a producer gets "rave" notices for his show the morning after it opens he takes 70-line and 100-line advertisements spread on two and three columns the following day. If his show gets moderate reviews he stays in the alphabetical index and that comprises for the most part his selling campaign. Once in a while he may employ the services of a publicity director who is capable of making a speech or two in front of a woman's club, but the chances are that this is wasted time because the members would go to the show anyway, dependent upon the advice of their ticket brokers.

Not Officially Interested

Obviously motion picture exploitation tactics could be advantageously applied to the selling of plays to the theatrical public but for some reason Broadway managers do not appear to be disposed to take advantage of the possibility that plays can be exploited just as films can. When, last season and the preceding four or five seasons, Hollywood actively was sponsoring theatrical productions, the legitimate manager could call upon his sponsors for advice and help. Today this is not the case. Hollywood is not officially interested in backing plays under the new Dramatists Guild contract and until it is interested it is only normal to assume that Broadway managers can expect no help from Hollywood.

Last summer J. Robert Rubin of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer said at a conference of eastern story editors that it would be less expensive for film companies to pay a higher price for the rights to plays financed by manager than to pay a slightly lower price and finance the plays themselves.

OFFICER OF GUILD CRITICIZES AWARDS

Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists' Guild, challenged the benefits in store for the winners of fellowships and scholarships in the Bureau of New Plays competition, declaring that they had been placed in a "complicated position". By the terms of the contract between the winners and the bureau, the first two plays written under the fellowships must be offered to the bureau first for approval, and the bureau and the seven motion picture companies which sponsor it must reject a script before it can be offered to a Broadway manager who has signed the Guild's new basic agreement.

The dilemma, Mr. Howard said, was this: If such a manager wished to present the play, the author would be obliged to join the Dramatists' Guild before a production could be made. But, he added, the Guild would not accept as a member any person still obliged to submit plays to the bureau for production on terms other than those of the new agreement, to which the film companies are opposed.

"Cheaper to Back Plays"

Two weeks ago Harry Goetz, president of Reliance Pictures, asserted that it was cheaper for the film companies to back plays than to pay $200,000 for plays like "You Can't Take It With You", as Columbia has just done, or $150,000 for "Stage Door", which was the price paid by RKO for the rights to that play.

It was Mr. Goetz's prediction that all motion picture companies again will begin financing Broadway plays next season, basing this prediction upon the fact that film companies must venture into the legitimate theatre to get story material.

"Such ventures," Mr. Goetz said, "are not extremely risky for film companies because if they get two hits out of five shows their investment would be returned with interest."

Meanwhile, the question of competition from the United States Government, in the form of the WPA's Federal Theatre Project has been relegated to the sidelines, in spite of the fact that exactly 1,368,902 attendances have been registered at WPA plays in New York City alone in the last three months, a situation which, if Broadway managers had nothing else to worry about, would be the best basis for major arguments.

The battle between the Dramatists Guild and the Bureau of New Plays, Inc., entered a new phase this week when Janet Marshall, of the Department of Drama of the Yale Graduate School, and Robert Wetzel, a graduate of the University of Michigan, announced they would return to the Bureau awards of $2,500 and $500, respectively, received for plays submitted in a contest sponsored by the Bureau.

At the same time, Walter Pritchard Eaton, professor of playwriting at Yale, repudiated his connection with the Bureau, the action of all three being based on a contention that contracts covering the production of plays were not satisfactory.

Both Miss Marshall and Mr. Wetzel objected to the fact that the Bureau contract called for a 50-50 division of profits, while the Guild agreement calls for a 60-40 division, the playwright receiving the greater share. Mr. Eaton supported their contention.

Lincoln Theatre Fight Ends with Agreement

The protracted fight at Lincoln, Neb., between J. H. Cooper, head of the Lincoln Theatres Corporation; Bob Livingston, manager of the Capitol and dependent on Mr. Cooper for film, and the major film exchanges which have not been getting second runs on schedule, was tentatively settled this week. Mr. Livingston is to start single features, full weeks and raise all prices five cents to 15-20 cents beginning Sunday.

Mr. Cooper, plagued with dime admissions for which the best pictures were refused him for second run behind the Stuart, was unplayed on all but about six of the Stuart's 1936 programs. The new arrangement benefits Mr. Livingston and should improve business since it is another move into the upper price brackets.

Mayer Is Host to MPPDA Members

Louis B. Mayer was host to members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in Hollywood at a dinner last Monday night following which industry problems were discussed. Among those attending were: Will H. Hays, Fred W. Beetson, Samuel J. Briskin, George Cohen, Herbert Freston, A. J. Loeb, Henry Herzbrun, Ben Kahane, Edward Mannix, J. P. Normanly, Charles R. Rogers, Joseph M. Schenck, Leo Spitz, Hal Wallis, Darryl F. Zanuck, Adolph Zukor, M. B. Silverberg and Nicholas Mayfack.

AT&T Hearings Resume Next Week

The Federal Communications Commission public investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company was recessed in Washington last week until February 15 after hearing a contention that the utility acquired control of associated companies by forcing out minority stockholders. Hugo Reyer, accountant for the FCC, testified that one procedure was for associated companies to withhold dividend payments even after receiving large advances from the parent company.

COAST "LIBERAL" WRITERS REVOLT, CHARGE THEIR WORK IS "MUTILATED"

Hollywood Accused of "Systematic Weeding Out" of Writers with "Progressive Ideas" Who "Portray Life Problems"

Secretary of Western Writers' Congress and Champion of "Better Films" Lead Attack at Palo Alto Meeting

by WALTER BARUSCH

in San Francisco

Charging there exists in Hollywood "a systematic weeding out of all writers who have progressive ideas or who attempt to dramatize or portray common problems of earning a livelihood," some 300 so called "liberal" California writers, teachers and "intellectuals" have undertaken a vigorous, militant and apparently well planned revolt against the present style of motion pictures emanating from Hollywood.

The attack first came at a meeting in Palo Alto, called by "The All-Parties Progressives," and was climaxed by scorching attacks on the industry by several speakers, principally Harry Carlisle, secretary of the Western Writers' Congress, novelist and former scenarist for Warner - First National, and Mrs. Howard Ray, northern California champion of the "better films" movement.

The Western Writers' Congress comprises some 200 "liberal" authors, headed by Charles Erskine Scott, author of the "best selling" satire, "Heavenly Discourse;" John D. Barry, feature columnist of San Francisco's Scripps-Howard newspaper, The News; Haakon Chevalier and Mr. Carlisle, both writers, of Palo Alto. The "All-Parties Progressives" is a coalition of various Palo Alto political groups, which showed surprising strength at the last local assembly election. Among the Progressives' leaders are several wellknown educators. The chairman is Dr. E. T. Dana, educator and Harvard graduate. He is supported by Dr. Ernest Hilgard, of Stanford University's psychology department, and Clark Cypher, attorney and member of the Palo Alto High School faculty.

Mrs. Howard Ray is active in the Parent-Teachers Association and has been agitating to reduce theatre admission prices for children.

The All-Parties Progressives at the meeting decided on plans for issuance soon of a monthly publication in which "reforms" of films and improvements in motion picture industry policies will be championed.

Say Conditions Are Confused

Harry Carlisle's principal point was that Hollywood's producers are not permitting the production of pictures revealing actual economic conditions existing, or if they do permit a glimpse of such conditions they deliberately confuse them, concealing the logical solution. As an example of many such films Mr. Carlisle mentioned Universal's "My Man Godfrey."

"This picture gives a glimpse of terrible conditions these days among some of the unemployed, showing men actually subsisting off the garbage dumps," said Mr. Carlisle. "But such problems cannot be solved by building night clubs and putting the unemployed to work in those night clubs after they are finished. Yet, after graphically portraying a scene around a filthy, steaming garbage dump with hungry men searching the refuse for morsels of dirty food, the story gives such a stupid solution to the problem."

Mr. Carlisle also charged that wherever writers attempted to portray life as it really is lived by millions of Americans, especially in the struggle for better working conditions, their stories were so radically altered in the course of Hollywood production that frequently writers failed to recognize their own brain children on the screen.

SEES RADIO GETTING BETTER OF BARGAIN

Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production of Twentieth Century - Fox, believes that radio usually gets the better of the deal when radio and the screen cooperate.

"I feel that there is a reciprocal advantage to be shared between the film industry and the radio, to a certain point," he said. "Where the radio helps to exploit a picture through the introduction of that picture and its stars on an air program, the benefits are mutual. This was demonstrated in the case of the 'Hollywood Hotel' broadcast of 'One in a Million', as a result of which we are again cooperating with an air preview of 'On the Avenue'. But for the screen to get as much in return as it gives to radio in such collaboration, the case must be an exceptional one."

Now and then there does slip through a realistic picture theming the problem now so familiar to the great majority of the population, the problem of improving living standards comparable to the actual wealth of the country, but such cases are exceptions, Mr. Carlisle said. MGM's "Fury" was said to be a picture in point.

"Weeding Out Progressives"

"I know that in Hollywood there is a systematic weeding out of all writers who have progressive ideas or who attempt to dramatize or portray common problems of earning a livelihood," Mr. Carlisle maintained. "The output of such writers is brutally mutilated, or the writers themselves are assigned to themes considered uncritical to the status quo. We hear a great deal of the habits of producers drastically changing scenarios. Well, that's what it's all about in most cases." The result of such conditions, Mr. Carlisle said, was one of the reasons the recent Writers' Congress was called in San Francisco.

While Mr. Carlisle maintained that many writers were being "bought off" in Hollywood, when they displayed liberal tendencies, he did agree with the producers in one issue and that was censorship. He said he did not believe in censorship and felt that censorship had all the seeds of a fascistic institution.

Fear Censorship Abuses

A paper by Viola Brothers Shore, scenarist and novelist, read before the recent Writers Congress in San Francisco, was also re-read at the Palo Alto meeting. Touching on censorship, the paper said, "It is but one step from saying 'don't do' to 'do this.'" Miss Shore, as Mr. Charlisle pointed out, believes that censorship may lead to grave abuses.

The improvement of pictures, as well as the forcing of producers to picture "truthful" economic conditions, depends not on censorship, Mr. Carlisle said, but on aroused public opinion.

"The film industry has shown itself sensitive to public reaction, as was proved by the Legion of Decency," he added. "If the public makes its power felt, much needed changes can be brought about in the industry."

Points to "Abuses"

Mrs. Howard Ray in her address maintained that a number of grave abuses have crept into the policy of showing motion pictures. She said:

"If you don't care to be forced to play roulette in order to see a motion picture, if you don't want to sit through a long tedious poor picture in order to see a better one, if you feel that 50 cents is too much for a thirteen-year-old child to pay to go to the show, you should join some such organization as we have here in Palo Alto.

"And yet that's how motion picture entertainment is sold today. Because you don't protest at such fantastic racketeering ways to stimulate box office receipts, you are compelled as theatre patrons to accept such inconveniences."

Mrs. Ray disputed the claim of film producers that they were only following the public's taste, as far as policy and quality of film entertainment was concerned, and if the public demanded more gangster, or more sex films, or gambling games, they were entitled to it.

"The film industry also affects the public's taste and producers know that if trashy sex films are produced and are profitable they will continue to produce such filth.

"The chief reason the picture industry exists these days is for the sole purpose of making money. The public's interests are very much secondary."

"Co-op" Picture Shown

As an example of what the "liberal" Hollywood writers are trying to do "Millions of Us," first of a series of pictures sponsored by Hollywood writers under the producing name of Labor Films, Inc. was shown. The Co-operative producing group consists of many socially-conscious writers, actors and technicians.

"Millions of Us" is a two-reeler, and tells of the efforts of a jobless young man to obtain employment. In desperation he seeks a job as a strike-breaker, is stopped at a picket line, but goaded by hunger attempts to break through the line. He is knocked down, revived by the strikers, fed by them, shown the iniquities of strike-breaking and converted to the cause of the strikers. The final scene shows him on the picket line himself.

The picture, produced rather crudely because of lack of full technical equipment, serves to show what the liberal writers are striving for. It is being offered on both 16 mm. and standard film to unions and other groups by the New Film Group of Los Angles.

Further meetings are planned by the Palo Alto group, which hopes to spread throughout Northern California.

SEVEN STATES STUDY NEW FILM LEGISLATION

Tax Measures in Ohio and Oregon; 20% Admission Bill Dropped in Colorado

With little Congressional attention being paid at the moment to bills affecting the motion picture industry, state legislatures have passed or are considering a number of measures of interest to film men.

New or increased taxes in various forms are being considered in Ohio and Oregon. In Colorado a proposal for a 20 per cent admission tax has been withdrawn. A state censorship board has been proposed in Missouri and an anti-playdate bill has been introduced in Indiana. New York and Pennsylvania legislators are studying bills requiring two projectionists in booths.

The only federal bill slated for early action that has a direct bearing on the motion picture industry is the alien actor measure introduced by Representative Dickstein of New York and scheduled for committee hearing on February 17th. Opposition of the industry to the bill is based on the fear that it will act to bar entirely the admission of foreign performers in spite of provisions designed to prevent this. The measure provides that temporary or permanent admission may be permitted by the Secretary of Labor if persons of equal talent cannot be obtained from among unemployed citizens or lawful permanent resident aliens.

Foreign Branches Face Tax

Foreign subsidiaries of American film companies would be made subject to excessively high taxes under the terms of a resolution introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman O'Malley of Wisconsin. The measure is an amendment to the income tax law and would impose an emergency surtax of 50 per cent on the net income of all foreign subsidiaries of American corporations, associations, partnerships or individuals.

Among the states the most important legislative news was the introduction of a bill in the Ohio legislature which provides for a seven per cent tax on admissions over 25 cents in addition to the present three per cent gross admission tax. The measure is designed to provide $10,000,000 for relief purposes.

Provision for a tax of one cent for every 20 cents of admission or fraction thereof has been introduced in the Oregon legislature.

A bill providing for a three member censor board has been placed before the Missouri legislature. The board personnel, under the bill, will receive a salary of $4,000 a year and review all pictures at $5 a reel.

In the South Carolina legislature Representative Foster of Greenville introduced a bill to bar commercial advertising on the screen.

Two Projectionists Issue

Outlawing of distributor designation of playdates is provided in a measure introduced in the Indiana legislature and referred to the committee on public morals. In Nevada and Kentucky bills providing that film and other companies must register their trademarks have been introduced. A filing fee of $5 is fixed and a charge of $40 will be made when a registration is approved.

A bill allowing stars, directors, writers and other employees of motion picture companies under personal service contracts to void their option agreements after three years has been introduced in the California Assembly. Banning of giveaways, including all games of chance, is provided in another measure introduced.

Legislation requiring two projectionists in booths in motion picture theatres has been introduced in Pennsylvania and New York. The Pennsylvania bill limits the requirement to theatres having a seating capacity of 300 or more and has been referred to the committee on labor. The New York measure provides for issuance of annual licenses either by a mayor or a licensing body and a fine of $100 or a maximum of three months' imprisonment for violations.

An amendment to the Pennsylvania Sunday motion picture law of 1935, introduced in the state legislature, provides that where Sunday shows have been approved by referendum in two-thirds of the municipalities of a county, they are legal in every district of the county.

A bill providing for a referendum on Sunday shows in Oakland, Md., has been introduced in the Maryland General Assembly by the Garrett County delegation. If the shows are approved a tax of five cents a patron would be levied.

Mrs. Johnson Gets Estate

The will of Martin Johnson, explorer and producer of wild animal pictures who was killed recently in an airplane crash in California, has been filed in surrogate's court in New York and bequeaths his residuary estate, valued at "over $10,000," to his widow, Mrs. Osa Johnson. She also receives an 80 per cent interest in royalties from his films, negatives and positives, and from his writings. Mrs. Johnson is to head an expedition to the Belgian Congo following her recovery.

Sydney Booth Is Dead

Sydney Barton Booth, veteran actor and nephew of Edwin Booth as well as last of the male line of the famous American theatrical family, died last weekend at Stamford, Conn., in the Stamford Hospital following a cerebral hemorrhage suffered a short while before. He was 64 years old. Surviving are his widow and one daughter. He made his first stage appearance in 1892 and his last role was in the revival of "Three Wise Fools" in New York.

Fuesslein Funeral Services

Funeral services for Ernest A. Fuesslein, United Artists accountant at the home office, who died of a heart ailment last Wednesday, were held Friday at Roemell's Funeral Church in Brooklyn. Burial was Saturday. Mr. Fuesslein had been with United Artists for the past 10 years. He was 61, and is survived by Mrs. Fuesslein and two children.

Coyne Funeral Services

Funeral services for Mike Coyne, veteran showman, were held in Hollywood last Saturday. Mr. Coyne was at one time on the staff of Henry W. Savage, and was later appointed field representative for United Artists by Hiram Abrahams. He was in his 69th year when he died and had been retired for the past 10 years.

Funeral services were held last weekend for Charles Lundgren, Warner salesman in Chicago, who died of a heart attack.

Academy Council Approves Project

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science at its first quarterly meeting held last week, approved one technical project, inaugurated a new project and received progress reports from several technical committees.

The Council appointed a committee of cameramen, technicians and theatre projectionists, under the chairmanship of Grover Laube, of the Twentieth Century-Fox studios, to investigate the possibilities of standardizing the method of framing of the picture in the camera and projector aperture.

A report containing a proposed standard electrical characteristic for theatres was approved. It is hoped the report will lead to improvement in the quality of projection by more closely coordinating the studio sound recording and theatre reproducing characteristics.

A report submitted by the screen illumination committee containing recommendations that the council inaugurate a nationwide survey to measure the illumination of screens in all theatres in the country was approved.

Goetz Managing Fehers

Charles S. Goetz in New York has been signed to manage Friedrich Feher and Hans Feher for motion picture, radio and concert work. Friedrich Feher directed "The Robber Symphony," which opened last week at the Venice Theatre, New York.

Cohen Acquires UA House

Herman Cohen, operator of the United Artists theatre on Market Street, San Francisco, has acquired complete control of the house for a reported $75,000. Mr. Cohen, who also operates the Strand and the Embassy, bought into the United Artists house in 1930 and has managed it ever since.

Mrs. Palmer Named Censor

Mrs. A. Michell Palmer, widow of the late United States Attorney General of President Wilson's cabinet, has been appointed a member of the Pennsylvania board of censors at Harrisburg, succeeding L. Howell Davis.

Clem McCarthy, radio and newsreel sports commentator, has closed a contract with Sam Sax, production chief of Vitaphone, for a series of sports short subjects.

Gottlieb Joins Wanger

Alex Gottlieb, formerly with the Columbia advertising department, has joined Walter Wanger Productions. He will work on special advertising campaigns.

Beatrice Kaufman, formerly with Harper's Bazaar, has assumed her new duties as eastern story editor for Samuel Goldwyn.

Harry Thomas, president of Mutual Pictures, has acquired world rights to "Wojan," a Balinese film.

Abe Levine, who has been handling talent trades with other studios for Republic, has resigned.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

The Radio Outlook

Came Columbia Broadcasting System's suave, shrewd president William S. Paley to Hollywood to submit himself to a press interview. An accomplished hand in the business of both answering and parrying questions, Mr. Paley had some interesting things to say anent radio and the manner in which it affects the motion picture business. Agreeing that Hollywood was rapidly becoming a more important radio center and that its importance as such would continue to expand because many of the most desired personalities are located here, Mr. Paley declared that there is no basis for conflict between radio broadcasting and motion picture exhibition. If there is, he said, the difficulties will be adjusted when a code being worked out by representatives of the radio industry and the MPPDA is completed. Optimistic himself, Mr. Paley believes a plan satisfactory to all parties will be developed.

Television, as a threat to motion pictures, is still around a far corner, according to Mr. Paley. Technically, it has been fairly well perfected in a limited range. Experiments are being made in a newly discovered secondary television area. They are being pursued intensively. Yet it will be another two years at least, he predicted, before television becomes a commercial factor. Probably by that time television-radio sets, costing about $400, will be publicly available. Still television's sponsors will have a big problem to solve. That is the convincing of commercial advertisers that the television field numbers outlets affording an advertising field sufficiently wide to justify the expenditures that will be necessary.

Response Is Slow

Unlike the picture business, wherein it usually is possible to tell almost immediately whether a film will prove a success or failure, radio, according to Mr. Paley, has to wait for three or four months to determine whether a broadcast is clicking or flopping. To get this information, radio studies fan mail, but additionally it conducts house-to-house surveys by means of personal calls, telephone and direct mail.

Mr. Paley believes that radio broadcasting is more in competition with newspapers than it is with motion picture production and exhibition. The leading wire services now sell general news items to radio in the same manner as to newspapers. But radio is training its own reporters and commentators

Mr. Paley said that his company currently has no intention of working out any cooperative deals with studios for exclusive rights to screen talent or personalities in any other manner than as they are the subject of unusual spot news interest.

Production Impeded

Influenza continued as a major studio problem during the opening week of February with producers shifting plans and revising shooting schedules to conform with the availability of personnel. Ten pictures went into work as eleven were moved to the cutting room.

Universal started two productions. Ray Milland, Wendy Barrie, Kent Taylor, William Gargan, Margaret McWade, Louise Beavers and Polly Rowles are the principals in "Wings Over Honolulu," which H. C. Potter directs. Buck Jones, Muriel Evans, John Elliott, Donald Kirke, Ted Adams, Mabel Colcord, Bob Kortman and Bob McKenzie will be seen in "Smoke Tree Range." Les Selander is directing.

PRESTIGE AND THE MOTION PICTURE

Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, and Samuel J. Briskin, RKO Radio vice-president in charge of production, were chatting of this and that when a certain film of the kind called fine for want of a stronger word came up for mention.

"One of those little theatre things," said the producer.

"A prestige picture, perhaps," said the editor.

Said the producer, "We've been in this business a long time, you and I, and we've seen a lot of prestige pictures in our day. What I want to know is—who's got all this prestige now?"

Two pictures also started at MGM. Jeffrey Dean (formerly Dean Jagger) and Margaret Lindsay are featured in "Song of the City" with Edward Norris, Inez Pelange, Nat Pendleton, Marla Shelton, J. Carroll Naish and Charles Judels in support. Errol Taggart is the director. "Skidding" will feature Cecelia Parker, Eric Linden, Lionel Barrymore, Spring Byington and Mickey Rooney. George B. Seitz is directing.

Start Colbert Film

Paramount put "I Met Him in Paris" into work. Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young, Mona Barrie, George Davis and Alexander Cross are the leading players whom Wesley Ruggles is directing. "Miracle Mountain" began at Warners. With Noel Smith directing, the cast lists Dick Foran, Helen Valkis, John Merton, Glen Strange, Myra McKinney, Henry Otho, Milt Kibbee, Bud Osborne, Kenneth Harlan and Gordon Hart.

At Republic "Special Orders" started. The cast includes Guy Kibbee, Tom Brown, Lucie Kaye, Marjorie Gateson, Ed Brophy, H. J. Eddy and Ed Gargan. Phil Rosen is directing. "Private Enemy" is 20th Century-Fox's contribution to the new work. The cast is headed by Robert Taylor, Victor McLaglen, Barbara Stanwyck, Brian Donleavy and Sidney Blackmer. William Seiter is directing.

Under Ben Holmes' direction, Radio started "Satisfaction Guaranteed." John Morley, Anne Shirley, Barbara Pepper, Dudley Clements, Gene Lockhart, Billy Gilbert and Alec Craig are the featured players. Last of the new work is "Honeymoon Pilot," Columbia. It will present Charles Quigley, Rosalind Keith, Russell Hicks, Marc Lawrence, Rita Cansino and Patricia Farr among others to be named later. C. C. Coleman is directing.

Eleven Pictures Completed

Generally the completed work came off the line in groups of two; four companies credited with that number respectively accounted for eight of the eleven finished features. Grand National checked in "23½ Hours Leave," a Douglas MacLean production. The cast lists James Ellison, Terry Walker, Morgan Hill, Paul Harvey, Wally Maher, Andy Andrews, Pat Gleason, Arthur Lake, Murray Alber, John Kelly, Ward Bond and Russell Hicks. John G. Blystone directed. For the same company B. F. Zeidman completed "Girl Loves Boy" (permanent title). It will present Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker, Roger Imhoff, Dorothy Peterson, Pedro de Cordoba, Barnadene Hayes, Rollo Lloyd, Spencer Charters, Otto Hoffman, Jameson Thomas and Edwin Mordant. Duncan Mansfield directed.

The Warner pair is "The Prince and the Pauper" and "Marked Woman." The first features Errol Flynn, Billy and Bobby Mauch, Claude Rains, Montagu Love, Barton MacLane, Donald Crisp, Fritz Leiber, Helen Valkis, Phyllis Barry, Henry Stephenson, Murray Kinnell, Walter Kingsford, Halliwell Hobbes and Ivan Simpson. William Keighley directed. In "Marked Woman," which Lloyd Bacon directed, Bette Davis and Humphrey Bogart are starred, with Jane Bryan, Eduardo Ciannelli, Rosalind Marquis, Lola Lane, Isabel Jewell, Mayo Methot, Henry O'Neill, John Litel, Arthur Aylesworth, Allen Jenkins, Kenneth Harlan, John Sheehan, Robert Strange, Edwin Stanley, Raymond Hatton, Guy Usher and William B. Davidson.

Most important of 20th Century-Fox's completed work is "Seventh Heaven." Simone Simon and James Stewart have the leading roles supported by Jean Hersholt, Gale Sondergaard, Gregory Ratoff, J. Edward Bromberg, Victor Kilian, John Qualen, Thomas Beck, Mady Christians, Sig Rumann, Rollo Lloyd, John Piccori, Edward Keane, John Hamilton and Georges Renevant. Henry King directed. "Dead Yesterday" will present Sally Blane, Thomas Beck, Jane Darwell, Joan Davis, Sig Rumann, Wade Boteler, William Demarest, George Walcott, Lona Andre, Ruth Peterson, Howard Phillips, Pat O'Malley and Gloria Roy. James Tinling directed.

Under its own sponsorship Columbia finished "Weather Or No." Cast names are Ralph Bellamy, Ida Lupino, Ralph Forbes, Walter Connolly, Granville Bates, James Flavin and Raymond Walburn. Alfred E. Greene directed. For the company's program Larry Darmour finished "Trouble in Morocco." Jack Holt is teamed with Mae Clarke in the leading roles, with C. Henry Gordon, Victor Varconi, Paul Hurst, Harold Huber and Bradley Page in support. Ernest B. Schoedsack directed.

Radio finished "The Man Who Found Himself," formerly titled "Wings of Mercy." It features John Beal, Joan Fontaine, Philip Huston, Jane Walsh, George Irving, Frank M. Thomas, James Conlin, Diana Gibson, Stanley Andrews, Billy Gilbert and Alec Craig. Lew Landers directed. "China Passage" also was transferred to the cutting rooms. Directed by Edward Killy, the cast includes Constance Worth, Vanton Haworth, Gordon Jones, Leslie Fenton, Dick Elliott, Alec Craig, George Irving and Billy Gilbert.

The title changed from "Short Haul" to "California Straight Ahead," Universal finished a Trem Carr production. Players to be seen are John Wayne, Louise Latimer, Robert McWade, Theodore Von Eltz, Tully Marshall, Emerson Tracy, Harry Allen, Leroy Mason, Grace Goodall, Olaf Hytton, Monty Vandergrift and Lorin Raker. Arthur Lubin directed.

AMUSEMENTS GROSS $476,268,000, THEATRE RECEIPTS ARE UP 13.8%

Census Bureau Reports on 30,317 Places of Amusement in 35 States and District of Columbia

Thirty-five states and the District of Columbia covered to date by the United States Census Bureau, in its survey of business in 1935, reported 30,317 places of amusement with combined gross receipts of $476,268,000, including motion picture theatres. Some 25,523 proprietors and firm members operated these establishments, and $112,393,000 was paid out in salaries and wages to 115,281 workers, $13,226,000 representing wages for part-time employes.

In this connection motion picture theatre grosses in 28 key cities increased 13.8 per cent in 1936 over 1935, during the fall and early winter show season from September 1st to January 1st, according to Motion Picture Daily. This is said to typify the increase in box office receipts in film houses. Earlier estimates indicated that exhibition income had jumped 10 per cent in 1936.

The 1935 total income from first-run theatres in the 28 key cities in the four months was $21,708,740. Motion Picture Daily estimated that the same group grossed 24,704,313 in 1936, an increase of $2,995,573.

An analysis of the 1936 grosses, however, discloses that eight of the 28 key cities did less business in 1936 than in 1935, including first-runs of Cincinnati, Kansas City, Lincoln, Louisville, Milwaukee, Providence, St. Paul and Washington.

In Kansas City, Lincoln, Milwaukee and St. Paul this was considered attributable in part to the drought in the wheat growing country, but no explanation was given for the falling off in Cincinnati, Louisville, Milwaukee and Washington. Cincinnati shared in the general industrial pickup, Louisville general business was good and Washington had more Government employees than ever before. The falling off in Providence is believed to have been due to the overwhelming popularity of horse racing with pari-mutuel betting, a novelty in New England.

Twelve North Central States

Adding to the figures already reported for amusements in 23 states, the United States Census Bureau this week reported on gross income and salaries for the 12 north central states, which, in 1935, had an income aggregating $193,643,000. A total of 11,202 proprietors and firm members were active in the conduct of these establishments, including film theatres, and they employed a total of 47,545 persons who received an aggregate annual payroll of $50,221,000, of which $5,529,000 was for part-time employment.

Among the 13 states for which reports have not been published are New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The Bureau's figures cover amusements as a whole, and no data are given as to the activities of motion picture theatres or any other branch of the industry. Such detailed information will be included in reports to be issued later.

The most important state covered in the latest reports was Illinois, where 1,726 establishments had receipts of $50,732,000; 1,487 active proprietors and firm members were reported and average employment was 9,972, the aggregate payroll being $12,406,000, of which $1,195,000 was for part-time work.

Data for other states reported upon was as follows:

OHIO: 2,201 establishments with receipts of $36,846,000; 1,848 active proprietors and firm members and an average of 9,062 employees; total payroll, $8,697,000, of which $1,130,000 was for part-time work.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT and FRED MacMURRAY in Frank Lloyd's "Maid of Salem"

A Paramount Picture with Harvey Stephens · Louise Dresser · Edward Ellis · Gale Sondergaard · Produced by Howard Estabrook

Right out of the soul searing period in our history when the colonies were swept by an overpowering tide of fanaticism and mob rule comes this story of a young lad who has nerve enough to risk his liberty, yes, his very life, to save the life and liberty of the girl he loves. Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray turn in really wonderful performances. I honestly believe that 'Maid of Salem' ranks with any picture I have ever filmed

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

MANY an Irishman's son is in for the disillusionment of his life—for the southern-born family of Universal's Robert Harvey Cochrane has, with a single bold stroke, "debunked" one of the greatest illusions of the illusionistic Irish: their "Blarney Stone."

Robert H. Cochrane, Junior, 19-year-old son of Universal's president, has pricked the Blarney bubble, claiming that the kissing of the Blarney Stone is an unadulterated piece of commercial showmanship—his Dad's 31 years in the film business proving you can't fool a Cochrane.

Young Cochrane, who is taking his training where he finds it, visited the Blarney Castle in Ireland, and now, in this week's Life Magazine, reports that the stone is "a racket."

"I thought that the Blarney Stone ran back into the dark ages," wrote Cochrane, Junior. "But the guide told me that it is of comparatively recent origin. He called it a racket. He told me that Blarney Castle was bought about 50 or 60 years ago by a man who conceived the idea of attracting people to the castle, not for a fixed admission price, but for a voluntary fee. He cooked up the idea that if you kissed the Blarney Stone you would gain the gift of gab. With the help of a good press agent he spread the story all over the world, and 'suckers' have been kissing the stone and risking their lives ever since."

Young Cochrane submitted photographs to show that the only way you can kiss the stone is by lying on your back. "All photographs showing people lying on their stomachs are wrong."

After a prospective Blarney-Stone-kisser turns on his back he is lowered five feet through a hole in the roof of Blarney Castle, with someone holding his legs. After he is far enough down in the hole, he must then crane his neck upward and kiss the bottom of the stone.

"The fact that thousands have kissed it and left it marked with lipstick and germs is not important," cracked Junior Cochrane. "But after you are pulled back to the roof you feel like a perfect damn fool—which, of course, you are."

The motion picture had its "silly era," while growing, before it became a stabilized commercial art. Its freaks and its follies were many. Now the radio business is going through the same growing-pain period. Last week, a radio station in the midwest had a "singing mouse" chirping through its microphone. This week, radio station WKY, in Oklahoma City, arranged for the "first personal appearance" of a horse on the air. They got Champion, the horse of motion picture's Gene Autry, into the freight elevator of the Skirvin Tower Hotel, and hoisted him up to the studio floor—where the nag wistfully whinnied into the "mike."

The United States Department of Agriculture is sponsoring a film which shows the heartbeat of a cockroach.

AS previously noted, C. L. (Bill) Yearsley is now down in Philadelphia doing a job for Warner Brothers in managing their Roosevelt theatre.

Life wasn't so smooth the first few weeks Bill Yearsley lived on Philadelphia's Leiper Street. He had trouble finding his house, because it is exactly like all the other houses in the block. It is like all other houses in the suburb—it is like all other houses in Philadelphia! Finally, Bill bought an ax, blazed a telephone pole across the street, and marked off 47 paces south of a direct right-angle to his front porch. He had brought a blue electric-light globe from the theatre for the stoop electric-socket, but he had to give that up because the landlady thought it made the house too conspicuous. Now he can always feel the notch in the telephone pole on dark nights, and then it's easy to count his way home. Of course, Bill must first hit the right suburb, then the right block.

INDIA'S LEADER BLAMES TAXATION, CENSORSHIP

Only Dozen Local Films Succeed as Against 100 Foreign, Conference Is Told

by G. A. THAKUR
in Madras

Taxation and censorship are the chief obstacles to progress of domestic film production, executives pointed out at the second All-India Motion Picture Convention, in Madras.

Attending the meetings held December 26 and 27, were such personalities as Seth Cheminlal B. Desai, proprietor of Segar Film Company, Bombay; Mr. Sultan Fazalbhoy, proprietor of Film City Sound Studios, Ltd., Bombay; Miss Sunilini Devi, secretary of the Motion Picture Society of India, and recognized delegates from all over India.

Seth Cheminlal B. Desai, in his presidential address, said in part:

"In the year 1913, Mr. D. G. Phalke, pioneer of our film industry, produced the first picture; now, in the year 1936, we have only 650 theatres in India, of which 450 show Indian pictures. A little over 11 crores of rupees are invested in all the three branches: production, distribution, and exhibition. The number of persons directly engaged is hardly 25,000. Every year about 300 pictures are produced, of which hardly 10 are topping successes.

"Here are some things which are very badly needed:

1. Creation of a special department to attend actively to the wants of the Industry from day to day.
2. Official recognition of the Motion Picture Society of India as the only body, fully representative of the industry, to alleviate the grievances of the producers.
3. Reorganization of the board of censors, electing or nominating members annually, with the help of the Motion Picture Society.
4. Allowing one member of the Society to sit as a member of the board.
5. Abolition of import duty on all raw materials and machinery.
6. Establishment of a credit bank specially for financing the film industry.
7. Calling upon different government departments, like the railways, military, archaeological, naval, and municipal, to give every help to the film industry.
8. Protective legislation with regard to foreign competition.
9. Calling upon different universities to provide higher scientific training in cinematography, and sound film technique. Young persons should be given scholarships to study the industry in foreign countries.
10. Compelling the exhibitors to show a certain percentage of educational films, in every program. The films should be selected by the Motion Picture Society of India with an eye for national culture.
11. Encouraging any enterprise that aims at manufacturing raw film and equipment in India, by providing the latest apparatus and part of the capital.
12. Providing free facilities to producers, to prepare educational pictures in the different Government departments.

"Every year we buy raw film to the extent of approximately 22 lacs of rupees and pay the Government about seven lacs of rupees, for allowing us to buy that film.

"Then we spend about 35 lacs every year in buying machinery and chemicals. On this we further pay a few more lacs of duty. So the Government makes easy money out of our industry without giving us any benefits in return.

"For an industry having only India, and a restricted India, as the sole market for its product, this burden of taxation is top heavy, and it is not surprising to find the industry groaning under its weight.

"Next we come to the other big handicap imposed by the Government, censorship boards. Our board is arbitrarily appointed, and the industry is not represented on the board. In England and America, the newsreel is not subjected to a censor. It is considered just as a newspaper of the screen and is allowed to be released immediately when it is ready. But in India even a newsreel with the latest news must be submitted to the censors, and by the time it comes out licensed it has lost all its news value.

"When pictures like "Captain Blood," "The Ghost Goes West," "Amateur Gentleman," and "Mutiny on the Bounty" were screened in Bombay, almost every Indian picture in opposition failed to draw.

"Every year we produce 300 pictures and hardly a dozen score all-India success. On the other hand, of 300 foreign pictures annually sent out to India, well over 100 pictures achieve rattling success.

"For a population of over 350 millions, and after nearly 25 years of picture making, we have only about 650 theatres, of which only two-thirds are devoted to Indian pictures.

"India provides one theatre for every 534,587 persons, while in Soviet Russia there is one theatre for every 16,000 persons. What a shocking contrast. India has more than 700,000 villages, and most of these villages do not yet know what a talking picture is like. Several of them have not even seen a silver screen.

Eight Companies Continue with Mid-season Plans

Mid-seasonal sales activity of virtually all distributors continues unabated, with RKO Radio and Warners this week decided to hold extra mid-winter conferences of sales personnel to spur selling on remaining product and prospective exhibitor customers. Twentieth Century-Fox concluded its session, at Kansas City, while the Grand National, GB Pictures and Paramount were turning attention to similar gatherings, in addition to sessions already held by other companies. Too, Monogram Pictures announced its entire program for 1937-38, the first schedule to be publicized by any distributor.

Paramount's film rentals for the month of January, the initial month of the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee Drive, hit a seven-year high, according to Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales. The first month of 1937 produced the best business since 1930 and ran more than 37 per cent ahead of the same month in 1936. Credit for this increase is given by the company to the box office reception accorded the initial jubilee pictures headed by "The Plainsman," "College Holiday," "Champagne Waltz" and "Maid of Salem," according to Mr. Agnew.

Results tabulated at the end of the first two-week period of the "George Schaefer Sales Drive" have far exceeded the most optimistic hopes of United Artists officials, A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager, announced Tuesday. There has been a record number of shipments from the branch offices during each of the two weeks and all weekly sales records have been broken, Mr. Smith reports.

Hank Kaufman, Columbia's manager of exchange operations, has left New York on an extended tour of the exchanges in connection with the "Columbia Montague Sweepstakes," the company's annual sales and billing drive. During his trip he will visit every exchange and will devote the major portion of his time to supervising the work of the six home office representatives who started last week on a similar tour in connection with the drive.

George W. Weeks, GB general sales manager, is holding a series of conferences in Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Kansas City and St. Louis.

Grand National will probably hold its next sales convention at the company's studios, Edward L. Alperson, president, announced in Hollywood this week. Tentative plans call for the meetings to be held in May.

Thirty-four features, including a series of eight westerns, will be produced by Monogram during 1937-38, W. Ray Johnston announced this week. All productions will be made under the supervision of Scott R. Dunlap at the New Hollywood Studios by a group of associate producers including Mrs. Dorothy Reid, Ken Goldsmith, I. E. Chadwick and Lon Young.

Milton Kusell presided over a sales meeting at the New York Paramount exchange Monday. J. J. Unger was scheduled to attend.

In the third week of the Republic sales drive, Cleveland, New York and Philadelphia are leading in that order in the eastern division; New Orleans, Atlanta and Charlotte head the southern division; Chicago, Milwaukee and Indianapolis head the central division while San Francisco, Portland and Los Angeles are showing the way to the western states.

Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio distribution head, and Jules Levy, sales chief, were to conduct a one-day sales conference in Chicago Thursday at the Drake Hotel with exchange managers in the mid-western division. Plans for the coming season were to be discussed.

In 27 weeks of this season, the domestic sales organization of Twentieth Century-Fox sold more contracts than during all of last season, when a record of sales was established, John D. Clark, sales head, told 32 distribution executives in Kansas City last weekend as the company's two-day meeting got under way at the Hotel Muehlebach.

Warner branch managers in the midwest and south were to hold two-day meetings in Chicago and Dallas this week in connection with the Sears sales drive which terminates April 4. Leo Blank, district manager, was in charge of the midwest sessions at the Blackstone Hotel and the Dallas gathering was to be conducted by Fred Jack, district manager there.

Seven Television Films Ready

Seven of Television's 28 pictures for the current season have been completed and another six will be finished by the end of February, Maurice Conn said this week. Mr. Conn will produce 20, the rest to be made by Edward and Victor Halprin.

AUSTRALIAN EXHIBITORS URGED TO OBSERVE MINIMUM PRICE RULE

American Films Retain Lead in Commonwealth Favor; Shirley Temple Is Chosen Again in Star Ranking

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

All exhibitors in the Commonwealth are called upon to observe the established minimum admission prices and prohibition of giveaways recently decreed by the Film Board of Trade, in an official announcement signed jointly by all distributing companies and published in the trade publications here.

After declaring that the exhibitor associations of all states, and the Union, Hoyts and Birch, Carroll and Coyle circuits indorsed the Board's action, the manifesto reads:

"All these associations and companies indorsed the decision of the Film Board of Trade to wipe out the practice of making free gifts and other similar concessions and expressed their determination to cooperate whole-heartedly in any steps taken to achieve that end. At its last meeting the Motion Picture Distributors' Association resolved to comply with the request, coming as it does from organizations which represent the large majority of the exhibitors in Australia and the most important factors in the trade.

"The film hire contracts of each of the distributing companies who are members of this association contain uniform provisions whereby each exhibitor who subscribes to them is bound to adhere to certain minimum prices of admission and to refrain from any practices of the nature referred to having the effect either directly or indirectly of reducing those prices.

Exhibitors are therefore asked in the interests of the trade as a whole to cooperate in the maintenance of a standard price of admission by a strict observance of this clause. It was added that the clause will be "rigidly inforced."

Protests were expected from certain of those exhibitors who have been exploiting the free gift with apparent profit; but as distributors are determined even to cut off film supplies if driven to it, such protestations are likely to be short lived.

Outstanding Developments

Establishment of the Film Board of Trade was an outstanding development in Australia in the past year, as was the adoption of the New South Wales. While it is too early to adjudge the full effects of the Quota, at least it is certain that the predicted "mushroom" growth of production companies did not take place.

In fact, the absence of new companies has been a disappointing result of the quota, since there will not be nearly enough local films available to fulfill requirements during the first year. Only the established companies, Cine-sound National Prod., and Expeditionary Films, have been consistently producing, and their combined output will be inadequate.

U. S. Films Hold Place

The Film Board of Trade includes representatives of distributors and exhibitors, and its purpose is to settle trade disputes. The industry is confident that a year from now the board will have been responsible for correction of many disputes.

The year has not made a great difference in the position of American films. The censor's report shows that of the 481 features released, 353 were American, comparing with 345 out of 476 the preceding term.

The trade in general considers that the standard of quality has shown a definite improvement.

Shirley Temple Leads

The star ranking remains much the same. Shirley Temple has unquestionably more commercial value than any other name. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers (as a team only), Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, Charles Laughton and Robert Donat are the best bets.

Among the year's biggest hits were "Top Hat," "Show Boat," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Magnificent Obsession," and the Shirley Temple films.

Musicals which combine dramatic and comedy values seem to represent the type to which the exhibitor looks for biggest grosses.

Position More Favorable

General Theatres Corporation is still the biggest buyer, and holds franchises with every company except M-G-M and Paramount. This also applies to the Hoyts suburban circuits of Sydney and Melbourne in which approximately 60 theatres are involved.

From the economic point of view, the Commonwealth found itself in a much more favorable position. Tax reductions are forecast in the federal and state budgets. There is a healthy spirit of optimism in financial circles.

An expenditure of £150,000 ($750,000) upon theatres will be embarked upon by Hoyts in the Sydney suburbs, and an additional £30,000 in the Melbourne suburbs. Two new theatres will be constructed and eight others modernized out of the former appropriation, and the expenditure in the Melbourne suburbs will be absorbed by the Padua theatre, Brunswick, which will combine modern features.

New Producing Companies

Local production claims more serious attention than ever, and there is every prospect that the record of £135,000 invested in Australian films last year will be easily eclipsed.

Two new companies registered this week are Argosy Films, Ltd., and Fig Tree Studios Pty. Ltd., both capitalized at £50,000. Meanwhile Cinesound is maintaining its announced policy of regular production.

See Censorship Changes

Changes in the Victorian film censorship system are foreshadowed by the banning in this state of the Russian film, "Ten Days that Shook the World." The picture was banned by the Commonwealth censor, Cresswell O'Reilly, but this decision was reversed by the Commonwealth Appeal Board. In his capacity as Victorian censor, Mr. O'Reilly then vetoed the film for Victoria and the State Appeal Board upheld the veto. Commenting on the censor's dual authority, the Chief Secretary for Victoria, Mr. Bailey, said the whole position of film censorship was absurd and that such glaring anamolies would have to be remedied.

By notching the record Australian gross of £1,250 for one day at the Sydney State, "Swing Time" has proved that Australia's appetite for Astaire-Rogers vehicles is as strong as ever.

Warners to Adopt Rental Plan for All Accessories

Warner Brothers-First National Pictures have decided to adopt a "rental plan" as the most effective medium for the handling of advertising accessories available on its feature productions and Vitaphone short subjects distributed in the United States, announces Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president and general sales manager.

Paramount established the rental plan last season, and other large companies now are expected to act similarly.

"For the past two months," declared Mr. Sears, "We have conducted a thorough investigation, the results of which reveal over 95 per cent favorable exhibitor reactions to the new plan. The lower cost made possible will serve to bring many more of our accessories within the reach of a greater number of exhibitors."

The Warner Brothers' plan, which becomes operative on Sunday, April 1, 1937, will apply to all pictures regardless of release date, and will include the following items:

One, three and six sheets; 8x10 stills; 11x14 and 22x28 lobby display cards; 14x36 insert cards; 40x60 and 30x40 Photogelatines; 14x17 colored lobby display cards, and 8x10 and 11x14 Colored-Glos prints.

These items will be billed at prices to be announced later, and exhibitors will receive credit for material returned within five days after the final playdate on the particular picture. Such units as are received back in "serviceable condition" will be credited to the exhibitor in accordance with a "maximum credit" scale. A special credit allowance scale will be set up to cover items returned in damaged or unserviceable condition.

"It is the intention of the company to maintain a most liberal policy with respect to such material returned in damaged condition," said the announcement.

"One of the main reasons for the adoption of the rental basis for the distribution of advertising accessories is to insure the use of the most effective selling angles on the company's product through maximum distribution of the right type of accessory," it was explained. "This can be accomplished through the lowered cost of the material to the exhibitor, which enables him to service himself with a greater quantity of accessories than ordinarily, because of budget limitations.

Until April 4th, when the rental basis plan becomes effective, the Warner advertising sales department will obtain and train additional personnel to be required in branch offices, rearrange old forms and provide such new ones as necessary, and prepare a manual for exchanges.

Directly affected by the rental plan are the independent accessory dealers who purchase stills and other accessory forms from prior-run theatres and sell them inexpensively to subsequents. For years the distributors have complained of huge losses suffered in their accessory sales as a result of this practice and frequently they have attempted in vain to abolish the system on the ground that their material was copyrighted, and, therefore, could not be resold.

Distributors Deny Anti-Trust Charge; New Momand Suit

Answers were filed Monday by the eight large distributors in the United States District Court in Dallas to the charge made by the United States Government that provisions in contracts with first and subsequent run exhibitors in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio, Texas, were in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman Act.

At the same time the large companies were named defendants in another anti-trust action, filed in Boston by Loretta L. Momand, mother of A. B. Momand, exhibitor of Oklahoma City who also is sueing the distributors for $5,000,000 in an anti-trust action.

And while the majors turned concerted attention to the Dallas and Boston matters, RKO Radio, acting independently, through Paxton and Seasongood, attorneys, of Cincinnati, secured a 30-day extension in the filing of briefs in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, at Cincinnati in its suit to prevent the state from enforcing an anti-preferred playdate bill.

Answering Dallas Suit

Companies filing the answers to the Government suit in Dallas were: Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc., Vitagraph, Inc. (Warners), RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Columbia Pictures Corporation, United Artists Corporation, Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation of Texas, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation of Texas.

The answers deny the Government charges and claim that since all the motion pictures are copyrighted, distributors have the legal right under the copyright laws to require subsequent run exhibitors to agree that any motion picture shown first run at an adult admission price of 40 cents shall not be shown subsequently in the same city at a night adult admission price of less than 25 cents, nor as part of a double feature program, and that such agreements are not in restraint of trade.

"The question of law raised by the charge, and the answers, is expected to be tried shortly and the decision will be of vast interest to the motion picture industry," according to the law firm of Thompson, Knight, Baker and Harris, representing the distributors, in Dallas. No trial date has been set.

The distributors' contracts under attack were made at the behest of certain of the Hoblitzelle Circuit theatres in Texas, and agreed to maintain an advanced minimum admission during the runs of pictures specified in the contracts, in return for which the distributors allegedly agreed not to license such pictures to subsequent run theatres except at a designated minimum admission, and then only for single-feature showings. The contracts were unsuccessfully attacked in the Texas State Supreme Court, at Dallas, in 1935.

Momand Suit Filed

Loretta Momand's suit was filed last weekend at Boston, through George S. Ryan, Boston attorney, who also represents Mrs. Momand's exhibitor son. Boston was selected, it is understood, because service can be entered against all the major defendants in that city.

Mr. Ryan had just returned from Oklahoma City, where A. B. Momand's suit had been postponed a few days previously because of the death of United States Circuit Court Judge Tilman Johnson, before whom the case was to be tried. Mr. Momand's $5,000,000 action now has been transferred to the federal court in Denver, where trial is to start February 16th.

Mrs. Momand's Boston suit claims that she had been operating the Odeon theatre, at Shawnee, Oklahoma, dating from July 15, 1935, and claims triple damages as the result of an alleged "unlawful combination and conspiracy to restrain and to monopolize interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films."

Mrs. Momand's complaint charges that the alleged conspiracy was for the purpose of granting to producer-controlled theatres special licenses, privileges and franchises and to refuse to grant the same to independent exhibitors. She claims the alleged conspiracy was also aimed to prevent double featuring by independents; to increase and maintain minimum admissions, and to eliminate so-called "giveaways" as practiced by independents.

The suit further alleges that the Griffith Amusement Company, cited in the complaint as a subsidiary and affiliated operating company of Universal Film, acquired a third house in Shawnee, "knowing that the population was insufficient to support or require an additional theatre."

Mrs. Momand charges that in 1935 the Griffith circuit built another house in Shawnee, and that the defendant distributors supplied it with first and second run pictures to the exclusion of the plaintiff's theatre. The complaint also charges "picketing" of the plaintiff's house.

National Decency Legion Classifies 15 New Films

Of 15 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency during the current week nine were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults, one was classed as objectionable in part and one was condemned. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Don't Pull Your Punches," "Don't Tell the Wife," "Law and Lead," "Left-Handed Law," "Off To the Races," "On the Avenue," "Park Avenue Logger," "Rebellion," "Sarga Csiko" (Hungarian). Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "August der Starke" (German), "The Good Earth," "Mama Steps Out," "Outcast." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Woman Alone." Class C, Condemned: "Pitfalls of Youth."

UA Takes Mexican Film

United Artists will release the Mexican-made "Alla el Rancho Grande" ("Down at the Big Ranch") in all Spanish speaking countries except Mexico. Tito Guizar is starred in the film.

Free Shows Continued

Business men of Aurelia, Iowa, who sponsored free pictures during the Christmas holidays at the Community theatre, are continuing the project through the winter as a trade promotion on Saturday afternoons.

Union Drops Reel Fight

Operators Local No. 182 in Boston has decided to abandon the fight against 2,000-foot reels it has been announced by Thad C. Barrows, president of the local.

Sidney Lehman, formerly of the United Artists Washington sales force, has been appointed sales manager of the company's Buffalo exchange to succeed Saul Resnick.

Theatres Reopen As Floods Recede; Benefits Are Held

As the flood waters along the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers began to recede rapidly this week allowing towns along the banks to return to normalcy, theatre business again was resumed in the rapidly drying out towns as benefits for the flood sufferers were being held.

In Louisville, one of the hardest hit of the Kentucky cities, pumps were in operation this week outside each downtown house in an effort to the rid the basements of water. All houses were affected, and after the water is pumped out heating plants will be dried and made ready for operation. Several of the downtown theatres are replacing damaged rugs and seats although foresight on the part of many managers saved all of their equipment, which they moved to higher levels before the waters rose to the flood stage. Virtually every suburban theatre in the town is now being repaired. Business is not expected to approach anything near normal for sometime, however, as the city is virtually evacuated and it will be weeks before the traces of the flood are removed.

With the Ohio River registering many feet below the flood levels of last week, amusement starved citizens in Cincinnati flocked to reopened and repaired theatres this week. All houses are operating on regular schedules.

In the Arkansas region, however, theatres at Monette, Manila, Truman, Caraway, Earle, Parkin, Marked Tree, and Le Panto are still closed. Further north, at Huntington, W. Va., seven houses repaired damages and opened last weekend.

Meanwhile, New York completed plans for an elaborate benefit performance for flood relief to be held at the Music Hall this week. The show was to run from midnight to 2 A. M., with a lengthy list of stage and screen stars volunteering their services. Seats were to be priced from $1 to $10, and the show time was to be divided into four half-hour periods, each to be sponsored in a radio broadcast at $10,000 for each half-hour. It is expected that between $30,000 and $40,000 will be turned over to the Red Cross.

At the same time, Fred W. Beetson, chairman of the motion picture division of the Red Cross relief drive in Hollywood, announced this week that collection within the industry there passed the $30,000 mark, and that indications point to more than $50,000.

In various cities throughout the country theatres have been conducting performances for the benefit of the Red Cross to raise thousands of dollars for relief. All Cleveland theatres held midnight performances last Friday night with admission at $1. Circuit and independent houses at Columbus donated an evening's receipts to the fund and in Fort Worth about $1,650 was raised at a midnight show at the Worth theatre. The Roxian in McKees Rocks, Pa., raised over $200 with the manager, Sam Fleishman, contributing privately to the fund. Oklahoma City raised over $700 at the Criterion and a midnight show at the Majestic in San Antonio netted $850. A minimum of $1,000 has been promised by John Hamrick, chairman of the industry relief committee in Seattle, and Skowhegan, Me., contributed over $250. Western Massachusetts theatres and others are arranging benefits in Massachusetts while in the St. Louis territory over $50,000 has been raised. Troy, N. Y., also contributed $3,000.

Republic Pictures in Oklahoma City is donating film without rental charges to theatres playing benefits and Gaumont British has offered "You're In The Army Now" to the American Red Cross in New York for a benefit show.

U.S. PICTURES RETAIN THEIR HOLD IN HOLLAND BUT RECEIPTS DECLINE

Federation Saves Members from Further Losses in Increased Taxes and Fixed Minimum Admission Charges

by PH. DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

Decline of the Dutch trade in the past year has had a very strong influence on the total theatre receipts. Using the 1931 attendance as 100 per cent, the following comparison can be made: 1931, 100 per cent; 1932, 80 per cent; 1933, 75 per cent; 1934, 90 per cent; 1935, 75 per cent. While the totals for 1936 are not as yet definitely known, undoubtedly they will be still worse than for 1935.

A very wet summer helped raise receipts above normal for the season, but autumn showed a comparatively disastrous retrogression. The depreciation of the guilder had a stronger influence than had been expected, because the public bought goods in the first place and postponed their visits to film theatres.

If the Dutch Motion Picture Federation had not taken measures to protect its members against several difficulties, such as a proposal to fix minimum admission fees, threatened increase of admission taxes, prohibition of releasing three features in one program, and limitation of number of film theatres, the possibilities of progress this year would have been destroyed. As it is, the managing board of the Federation remains optimistically disposed towards the general situation.

Last year 37 requests for permission to establish film theatres were received by the Federation, and hearings have been held on 34 of these. Nineteen applications have been approved, including two for the launching of production companies after proof of good financial as well as commercial bases. Two newsreel theatres have just opened in Rotterdam.

Problem of Premieres

With such a small increase in number of theatres, and the premiere theatres in the capitals unable to use more than 300 of the 500 features imported, it is easy to understand the problem of importation and distribution. An important number of features never can have a good release, even when all the imported films are of high quality. The costs of pictures which are not released must be paid in part by the distributed ones, hence a higher distribution cost. Thus the general expenses of the theatre manager are raised either by booking superfluous material or by paying too much. In 1935 there were 240 pictures imported from America, 84 from Germany and 145 from other countries.

Difficulties of another kind have been caused by the municipality of Utrecht, fourth largest Dutch city. The Dutch law contains limitations on juvenile attendance, but in practice only very unimportant small towns make use of these stipulations. The conservative Utrecht municipality insisted on action, however, and the Dutch Federation, in order to demonstrate that the law is ridiculous, ordered that Utrecht theatres bar children below the age of 14.

Government figures show that whereas in Amsterdam in 1933 there were 29 film theatres with 14,675 seats, now there are 35 seating 19,333. The increase is largely in the suburbs.

The picturegoer averages one visit a month to the film theatre. In 1935 there were 8,400,000 admissions to Amsterdam theatres, with fees totaling four million guilders. The average entrance price was Dutch fl. 0.48 in 1935.

Competition Increases

While American pictures continue to predominate, there is growing competition from the English and the domestic industry. Twenty English features were released in 1936. The following Dutch features were produced and released in Holland:

"Het leven is nog niet zoo kwaad" (Life Isn't So Disagreeable); "Wereldreis van de KVIII" (World voyage of the KVIII), an educational full-length picture of the adventures of a government man-of-war; "40 Jaar Cinematografie" (40 Years of Cinematography); "Kermisgasten;" "Jonge Harten" (Young Hearts); "Merijntje Gijzen's Jeugd" (The Youth of Merijntje Gijzen), the most successful Dutch picture in 1936; "Komedie on Geld" (Comedy for Money); "Oranje Hein;" "Het Mysterie van de Mondschein Sonate" (The Mystery of the Mondschein Sonata); "Het was 1 April" (It was on April 1st), made by UFA in Neubabelsberg, Germany; "Suikerfreule," Tobis production; and "Klokslag twaalf" (At Midnight), made in Paris with Dutch stars.

Only one film is in production here, "Pygmalion," from the play of Bernard Shaw. The director is Dr. Ludwig Berger, and the producer is Filmox, using the Cinetone studios.

In 1936 the Republic product was introduced on the Dutch market, represented by "Odeon." RKO product is distributed now by Filma, and the Barnstijn studios from now on will release Columbia pictures.

Too many films from stage musicals have been presented here. This kind of picture, once more popular than any other, has lost public interest. A general fault ascribed to American product is too much dialogue.

The biggest success of 1936 was the German picture, "Mazurka," starring Pola Negri.

Censors Active

Last year 33 features, seven short subjects and one newsreel were disapproved by the governmental board of censors, a few of these being admitted after revision. In 1935 there were barred 20 features and 10 shorts, but after revision the number was reduced to 16 features. "Green Pastures," "Exclusive Story" and "Show Them No Mercy" and some gangster pictures were not admitted, however.

The sharp decline of tax receipts from fl. 784,036 in 1933 to fl. 719,529 in 1935 reflects decline of the Dutch film trade despite sale of one million more tickets. Lower admission fees and a bigger sale of cheaper seats, besides cut-rate entrance cards, were factors. Only a few municipalities lowered their admission taxes; many increased them.

The Government is studying the development of television, but no representative of the Dutch film trade has been appointed to the board. The Federation established its own Board of Review as follows: E. Alter, N. R. Besseling, P. Burbach, H. Cohen Barnstijn and A. Gelder.

Paramount Sets Partners' Session

A three-day meeting of Paramount theatre operators and partners from all sections of the country will be held at the Roney-Plaza Hotel in Miami, Fla., March 18-20, immediately following the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which will be attended by Adolph Zukor and most of the Paramount theatre operators, it was revealed this week.

Among the Paramount men who are expected to be on hand for both of the gatherings in addition to Mr. Zukor are E. J. Sparks, S. A. Lynch, Karl Hoblitzelle, E. V. Richards, Frank G. Walker, Hunter Perry, John Balaban, Vincent McFaul, Joseph Clemmons, Saul Gordon, R. J. O'Donnell, Jules Rubin, Tracy Barham, George Trendle, Sam Pinansky, John Friedl, Harry Nace, Harry David, Joseph Cooper, Pat McGee, John Ford, M. A. Lightman, E. C. Beatty, Robert Wilby, Ed Kincey, Martin Mullin, A. H. Blank, Arthur Lucas, William Jenkins and Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of theatres.

Mr. Zukor was officially advised this week that he had been made a Commendatore of the Crown of Italy by King Victor Emanuel III. The presentation of the decoration will be made by the Italian Ambassador in Washington, D. C., when Mr. Zukor makes his next trip east in March.

It was also advised this week that by universal request the dinner planned by the New York exhibitors in celebration of the Paramount head's Silver Jubilee will not be a stag affair, but that ladies will attend. The dinner is to be held March 27 at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Harry Hunter, for many years manager of Paramount's Washington branch office, has been named managing director of Paramount Film Service Limited, the company's branch in Australia and New Zealand. He succeeds the late John E. Kennebeck. Mr. Hunter will be honored by his Washington co-workers with a testimonial dinner there next Tuesday under the sponsorship of the local Variety Club Tent. Two weeks later he plans to leave for Australia.

H. E. Wilton, Canadian Exhibitor, Is Dead

Herbert Earl Wilton, manager of the Strand theatre at Hamilton, Ont., and member of the Canadian Parliament, died following a heart attack in his office last week. He was born at New Sarum, Ont., in 1869 and worked as a telegraph operator and newspaper reporter before entering the industry.

During his managership of the Strand, Mr. Wilson rose high in Hamilton politics, representing the city first as an alderman, then mayor and finally a member of parliament in the last election.

He is survived by his widow, two sons, Frederick C., of Toronto, and Harold L., of St. Catharines, and three daughters.

THE CUTTING ROOM

That I May Live

(Twentieth Century - Fox)

Drama

As this film goes through the production mill, 20th Century-Fox, in an advance announcement crediting director Allan Dwan as the speaker, comments: "'That I May Live' is a splendid love story about a girl who gave everything to a man she loved, although she knew he was hunted by the police, charged with murder, who became the mother of his child, who fought at his shoulder with the help of a fine, unselfish friend, to win back a chance to happiness. Rochelle Hudson emerges from this picture as one of the most physically appealing actresses on the screen and it is this quality which she is forced to employ to gain her end against the forces opposing her man and herself."

A better description of what is in store for exhibitors through this particular film probably could not be prepared.

Accepting the quotation as embracing the substantiating theme of the film, a terse digest apparently is unnecessary. The character seems to have been established. The screen play, which Mr. Dwan directs, is credited to Ben Markson and William Conselman. Both are well and favorably known to exhibitors. Direction of the musical score, which is being counted upon to be an important adjunct to the story's dramatic mood, is in Samuel Kaylin's hands.

The man is Robert Kent and the friend who exerted a profound influence upon Kent and Miss Hudson is J. Edward Bromberg. Other important players are DeWitt Jennings, James Flavin, Mary Gordon, Fred Kelsey, Frank McGlynn, Jr., Gloria Roy and Baby Mondshine.

Release date undetermined.

Marry the Girl

(Warner)

Comedy

With a large number of comedy performers featured, one of the principal objectives of the organization sponsoring this picture was to provide comedy material aplenty. To that end Warners entrusted direction of the production, from Edward Hope's published novel, to William McGann, who has demonstrated efficiency in handling fun-provoking productions.

It takes a lot of funny stuff, even though they don't do any improvising, which they surely will, when a cast includes Frank McHugh, Mary Boland, Hugh Herbert, Mischa Auer, Charles Judels, Hugh O'Connell and Allen Jenkins. McHugh, Jenkins and associates demonstrated that in "Three Men on a Horse." To assure themselves of the fun quality worthy of the talents of those mentioned as well as Carol Hughes, Alan Mowbray, William B. Davidson, Irving Bacon, Bess Flowers, Olin Howland and Arthur Aylesworth, who by force of circumstances must be funny as they attempt to be unfunny, the Warners have gone into a new field for story motivation, the newspaper feature syndicate service. These organizations are familiar to all. They treat in authoritative manner every subject under the sun and some that are above it. While boiler-plating such information, with the associated talent in the presentation running the scale from those who can out-cartoon Rube Goldberg to those who can out-think Mr. Einstein, the while their personal affairs becoming ludicrously and intricately involved, it may be expected that the comedians mentioned will return an all-laugh picture.

Racing Luck

(Columbia)

Action, Romance, Drama

Against an action background of auto racing, midget cars on the dirt tracks, the big ones roaring around the great Indianapolis' brick saucer on Memorial Day, Columbia is spinning a yarn of a man in conflict with another man, not aware that his opponent on the track and for the favor of a girl's hand was his brother. Nature of the theme and character of its production setting seem to be of the quality that will result in an exciting thrill action picture full of thrills and spills as well as an acceptable human interest drama that will satisfy those who may not be so enthusiastic about the mechanical excitement.

The story, like many others that Columbia includes in its stock program, is an original, written by Bert Granet. Lambert Hillyer, in addition to collaborating with the author on the screen play, is also serving as director.

Charles Quigley and Eddie Nugent are featured as the rival drivers. Quigley is the big timer, a winner of the famous Indianapolis classic. Nugent is the reckless sensation of the dirt ovals. Principal girl in the case is Dorothy Wilson. As she carries the straight romantic vein which involves Quigley and Nugent, its comedy contrast is in the hands of Patricia Farr. Other players who will be seen as auto drivers, mechanics, track officials, etc., are Gene Morgan, John Gallaudet, Gordon Elliott and Arthur Aylesworth.

Probable release date, March 22.

Circus Girl

(Republic)

Dramatic Romance

Because it probably will be the sole circus picture of the season, this is a subject of more than usual interest, and particularly for juveniles. While a great deal of big tent atmosphere, both in the rings and behind the scenes, has been incorporated, the story is one of tense dramatic romance.

The leading players are trapeze artists and an animal trainer. Superficially depicting all the color and glamor of the spangled performers who fly through the air with the greatest of ease and the woman who dares the claws and teeth of lions and tigers, the production also traces the intimate personal life of men and women who love strongly and hate fiercely. An aerialist marries a girl. Open conflict flares when his partner, who knows he is unworthy of the girl, resents the union. An accident happens and the husband drops out of the air to serious injury. Becoming aware that his wife loves the man whom he holds accountable for his crippling, he plots to weaken the flying paraphernalia so that his wife and the partner will drop into a cage full of wild beasts. In the climax, his plot for revenge thwarted, the would-be killer saves the life of the man he hates because he knows the woman he married loves him more.

June Travis is the girl, Bob Livingston the hero, Donald Cook the heavy and Betty Compson is the tiger trainer, who permits her jealousy of Miss Travis to allow her to become Cook's accomplice. The supporting cast is notable in one way: it brings the popular old favorite, Charlie Murray, actively back to the screen. The Escalante Family, famous trapeze artists, are featured in death defying leaps and swings, and the active supporting cast includes Lucille Osborne, Donald Kerr, Emma Dunn, John Wray, John Holland and Kathryn Sheldon.

Based on a Cosmopolitan magazine story by Frank R. Adams, the screen play is by Adele Buffington and Bradford Ropes. John H. Auer is directing.

Release date, February 19.

We Have Our Moments

(Universal)

Romance-Drama

Because the production once more teams Sally Eilers and James Dunn, "We Have Our Moments" looms as more than an ordinary source of interest to exhibitors and patrons. Since their first dual appearance in "Bad Girl," both have established themselves as popular screen figures.

Dunn is an undercover detective. Miss Eilers is a New England school "marm" touring in Europe to forget or resolve her romantic difficulties. The girl becomes involved with a lot of crooks. Her adventures are straightened out finally in novel fashion. As the film proceeds, it runs a full scale of love interest, drama, comedy, semi-mystery and suspense.

Being directed by Alfred T. Werker under the production guidance of J. Edmund Grainger, busy also immediately with the details of "The Road Back," quite a few of Universal's writing staff have had a whack at preparing the story, so many in fact the various contributions that no writing credits are available.

The cast which will be seen in support of the leading pair is of a quality not expected in a medium budgeted production. It lists David Niven, seen in "Dodsworth" and "Beloved Enemy," Mischa Auer, who won popular recognition in "The Gay Desperado," Warren Hymer, interpreter of ability in depicting mug characterizations, Marjorie Gateson, Thurston Hall, Virginia Sale, Grady Sutton and Ray Brown.

Probable release date, March 22d.

Maytime

(MGM)

Musical Romance

Elements potentially guaranteeing the commercial and entertainment worth of this production are many. It features the singing stars of "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie," Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. Those films elevated the pair to box office peerdom. in "San Francisco." The vehicle is a Noel Langley adaptation of Rida Johnson Young's original stage play, a music-embellished, moral pointing romance drama. The music is by Sigmund Romberg, composer of the original Broadway presentation score, and Herbert Stothart. It is being produced by Hunt Stromberg, maker of "Rose Marie" and "Naughty Marietta" as well as "The Great Ziegfeld." The director, Robert Z. Leonard, was at the helm of "Ziegfeld." From the production angle it is the kind of picture that MGM makes with unstinting attention to every last detail to assure class and quality.

With prologue and epilogue, the main action narrated in retrospect, it tells the story of a girl confronted with the problem of choosing between an operatic career and love. She seeks the advice of Miss MacDonald, who has lived the experiences that the questioner would have to go through. With fine music, powerful drama, appealing romance, supported by elaborate production effects, it pictures for the girl and audiences the life of one who triumphed greatly but found that love was the only thing in life worth while. The locales are a New England village and the glamorous cities of Europe.

To support the stars, whose box office power is acknowledged, the producers have mustered a cast of more than ordinary merit. It lists John Barrymore, Herman Bing, Tom Brown, Lynne Carver, Rafaela Ottiano, Paul Porcasi, Charles Judels, Sig Rumann, Walter Kingsford, Edgar Norton, Guy Bates Post and Anna Demetrio, in addition to choruses of hundreds of trained voices and dancers of able ability.

Release date, March 19.

Outcasts of Poker Flat

(Radio)

Drama

This production is adapted from a story of the same title by the famous Californian author of historic romance drama, Bret Harte. With the famous Harte characters living again, it tells a story of the Gold Rush days when living was rough and crude, passions flamed and death was sudden. Essentially an action drama, it also tells of love which culminates in a heroic sacrifice. It is being spun of ingredients that have an established popular appeal.

The leading players are Preston Foster, now appearing in "The Plough and the Stars" and "We Who Are About to Die," and Jean Muir, lately in "Once a Doctor" but particularly remembered for her accomplished performance in "The Earth Turns," a Warner feature made several years ago. The principal supporting players and a group that are just as important to the story as the leads are Virginia Weidler; that able interpreter of strong character roles, Margaret Irving; a newcomer, Van Heflin, experienced on the New York stage, who scored notably in his screen debut as the black sheep of Katharine Hepburn's "A Woman Rebels," and Paul Guilfoyle, who was so effective as Garth in "Winterset." Players rounding out the cast are Frank M. Thomas, Cy Jenks, Alec Craig, Dick Elliott and Richard Lane.

The screen play is credited to John Twist, a collaborator on "Wanted, Jane Turner" and "We Who Are About to Die," and Harry Segal, who numbers the adaptations of "Don't Turn 'Em Loose" and "Fatal Lady" among his screen contributions. The director, Christy Cabanne, is a specialist in handling adventure atmosphered dramatic romance.

Production detail authentically reproduces the locales in the Gold Rush California country that were the scenes of Hart's novel.

Probable release date, middle of March.

Espionage

(MGM)

Dramatic Comedy

If persons are interested in the apparently sinister activities of a munitions maker, if they still hearken to the lure of a spy story and like to see what happens to a pair of American newspaper reporters, a man and a woman, naturally, who go adventuring in Europe to become involved in a mess of Continental intrigue, MGM is of the opinion that this comedy-studded mystery drama will develop into an attraction that will have much entertainment and commercial value.

What happens concerns the correspondents assigned to keep the trail of a traveling munitions maker who holds the fate of nations in his hands. By force of circumstances, they are forced to travel as man and wife. Unaware of each other's personal identity, neither, as would be expected, knows the other is a reporter assigned to knock over an exclusive scoop story. For most of the way, the action and atmosphere are common to spy drama-newspaper reporter stories, but there is a climax which surprises the reporters as much as the producers anticipate it will surprise audiences.

MGM has selected what it considers a glove-fitting cast. Madge Evans and Edmund Lowe, who has divided his recent screen activities between reporting and detecting, are the newspaper folk. Paul Lukas looks to be a good choice for the role of the munitions maker, and Ketti Gallian undoubtedly will appear to advantage as the mysterious woman with whom he is traveling. The inclusion of Skeets Gallagher indicates that a comedy part has been written in. Others, an assortment of plotters, conspirators, guards, and what not, are Frank Reicher, William Gilbert, Robert Graves, Leonid Kinsky, Mitchell Lewis, Charles Trowbridge, Barnett Parker, Russell Hicks and Charles Williams.

Kurt Neumann is directing.

Probable release date, March 5.

Racketeers in Exile

(Columbia)

Drama

With George Bancroft, one of the screen's first interpreters of gangster characters, in the leading role, this is the story of a racketeer who made a racket of religion when he sensed the easy and big money there was in it. It is also the story of a gangster who adventured in the realm of ethics and morals, where he found love that reformed him even though his regeneration nearly cost his life.

A novel topic and one in which there is considerable interest, the story is an original by Harry Sauber, who wrote the "Adventure in Manhattan" screen play for Columbia and was associated with many Warner pictures. He also collaborated on the screen play with Robert T. Shannon, a specialist in dramatic adaptation whose previous credits included "Moonlight Murder," "King Solomon of Broadway" and "Times Square Lady." Direction is by Erle Kenton, who made "The Depths Below" and "Man Without Fear."

The featured players supporting Bancroft are names of more than usual merit. Evelyn Venable will be seen as a small town choir singer, who fell in love with Bancroft believing he was a legitimate revivalist. Wynne Gibson, long absent from the American screen, is his gangster moll. As practically all important action is in the hands of this trio, other members of the cast are John Gallaudet, George McKay, Marc Lawrence, Helen Lowell and William Burress.

Among the bigger production features of the film are the series of huge revivals which Bancroft first conducts to mulct impressionable penitents. His erection of a gigantic auditorium from which he takes the air to broadcast as "The Ex-Racketeer, The Voice of Your Conscience," and the conflict that rages between him and another religious racketeer that results in his reformation.

Probable release date, March 1.

Mama Steps Out

(MGM)

Comedy

Domestic comedy recounting the adventures of a hick American family, parents and daughter, in Paris and on the French Riviera, is the story substance of this forthcoming production.

That's prosaic enough. Things similar to it have been done before. But when one considers that Anita Loos adapted the John Kirkpatrick-John Golden original, it is logical to assume that the treatment will sparkle with fresh new angles, dialogue and situations. Her job on "My Man Godfrey" is witness to her ability to inject hilarious fun into almost any kind of story. In addition to the Loos writing material there is a pair of song numbers by Chet Forrest and Bob Wright, which Stanley Morner, whom MGM is grooming for bigger things, will sing.

The Cuppy family is composed of Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady and Betty Furness. Morner's role has him as an orchestra crooner with a tough guy complex. The only other player in the picture who, like the Cuppies, is an American, is Gene Lockhart, the unwelcome guest who becomes the family's savior. Most of the action is local in France.

Direction is in the hands of George B. Seitz, recent maker of "Mad Holiday," "Under Cover of Night" and "The Last of the Mohicans."

Release date: February 12.

Dead Yesterday

(20th Century-Fox)

Mystery Drama with Comedy

With the major action taking place in a hospital, the story told is essentially a mystery thriller with vivid comedy contrast and an effective thread of romantic love interest. Police, doctors and nurses are baffled as to why anyone should want to murder a dead man. On top of that premise they have a difficult time endeavoring to determine who murdered whom, the reason therefor and how. Nobody can make any progress until a redoubtable nurse with a bent for solving mysteries tells them who is who and what is what.

The screen play is an original by William Conselman, long associated with Fox and 20th Century-Fox as a creator and adapter of screen material. The original story on which the photoplay is based is credited to Mignon Eberhart, not identified as having any previous association with films. It is being directed by James Tinling, maker of many pictures in the Charlie Chan, Jane Withers and Jones Family series.

The central figure is Jane Darwell in the role of the nurse. While her part is atmospherically similar to that which she occupied in "White Parade," it has been considerably expanded in such a way as to make her a master sleuth. Otherwise the lineup is a standard affair presenting Sally Blane and Thomas Beck as the romantic leads and Joan Davis as the principal comedy source.

Tentative release date, February 19.

On the Avenue

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Musical Romance

Name values, story worth, production detail and music have been combined in this picture in a manner pointed toward both specialized and general audiences. The same factors cause it to be a subject of more than ordinary interest to exhibitors who consider their film merchandise merely from the commercial viewpoint. The important consideration of names is not strictly confined to those personalities included in the cast. One, unseen in the picture but contributing much to its class and quality, is Irving Berlin, who provided the music and lyrics—the audience appeal of which cannot be overlooked when it comes to publicizing "On the Avenue." He is credited with six songs, which are the melodious sparkle of the piece, and three of them are of the hit caliber.

The picture is a musical romance drama, but, unlike the usual run of such pictures, it is motivated by a sound story. In contrast to this quality, production detail takes on the character of an elaborate vaudeville show or revue. The separate entities are balanced and coherent. While the straight theme is carried by Dick Powell, Madeleine Carroll, Alice Faye, George Barbier and Alan Mowbray, the group are also part and parcel of the revue embellishment which features the Ritz Brothers, Cora Witherspoon, Sig Rumann, Billy Gilbert and E. E. Clive.

As principals in the revue, Blake and Mona present a sketch ridiculing Mimi Caraway, world's richest girl, her father the Commodore and her publicity mad explorer suitor, Sims. Enraged, Mimi plans to flay the hide off Blake, but falls in love with him. As the various specialty features are intelligently interluded the romance is developed to the point that it fires Mona's jealousy. Blake rewrites the sketch, only to have Mona double-cross him and stage it in a manner more bitterly abusive of Mimi.

Now it is Mimi's turn to become the disciple of "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." Buying the show, she plots to restage it in a manner that will make Blake look absurdly ridiculous. The plot succeeds, but the price in heartache is great. It is only Mona's confession that she tricked both Mimi and Blake that makes her a ready victim of Blake's altar raid to rescue her from a loveless marriage to Sims.

Upon that framework is hung the singing by Powell and Alice Faye. The Ritz Brothers burlesque a Russian classic and are in and out of the film for frequent demonstrations of their clowning. The story is also the occasion for many live antics on the part of Cora Witherspoon, to vary her complex to be a Cossack dancer with the ambition to be a flying trapeze performer, a bit of funny business in which she is finely assisted by Rumann. It permits Stepin Fetchit, Billy Gilbert, E. E. Clive, Barbier and Walter Catlett to be characteristically comic. As much of the action takes place on and back stage, it also allows for enough, but not too much, girl glamor and chorus singing and dancing.

An effectively tempoed show that varies the appeal of romantic interest and the charm of good music with exciting and amusing action, it moves at a rapid pace. With the ingredients all in phases that arouse the attentions of almost any kind of audience, the show provides plenty to amuse the patrons and a full quota of those angles which aggressive showmen need to sell their offerings.

Previewed in studio projection room. The exclusive little group of trade paper representatives heard Darryl Zanuck indulge in an analysis of the picture's entertainment and commercial values which created the impression in the writer's mind that the production executive has the interests of exhibitors close in mind when he goes about the business of preparing his films.—Gus McCarthy.

Borderland

(Paramount)

Drama

Drama is the keynote of this picture. Sound, common sense drama, it is logically developed, and the other factors in the film — dialogue, characterization, action and situations erected together with the use of expertly photographed desert backgrounds — are pointed to accentuate the motivating quality. The second quality is comedy. Surprizingly, the love element usually considered necessary in almost any kind of film, is totally ignored. Nevertheless, the picture includes a considerable amount of human interest. In electing to follow this technique, producer, director, stars and cast demonstrate that careful thought and planning were put into preparation and production. A novelty has been attained which, retaining all the elements naturally arousing the attention of the Hopalong Cassidy clientele, also points the show to general audiences.

The story is real. The efforts of players and production crew make it understood and believable. A mysterious Mexican bandit, raiding the borderland, is a thorn to the Texas Rangers and Mexican Secret Service. To learn the identity of the desperado, Hopalong accepts disgraceful discharge from the Rangers in order that the impression that he is a renegade may be accepted by one and all. The plot is kept secret from Hopalong's pals, Johnny Nelson and Windy, whose efforts to convince the force that Hopalong is a victim of mistaken circumstances and to help their hero get a new grip on himself result more in hindering the undercover man than they do in helping him. However, and not without great personal danger, Hopalong manages to become associated with the suspicious Loco, who masquerades as a crackbrained simpleton. Ostensibly becoming a partner in a ruthless raid on the border, Hopalong leads Loco into a trap which brings the combined forces of the Rangers and Mexican police into the thrill action climax.

Fast moving, with expertly photographed desert backgrounds brought into the film in a manner that establishes them as an integral dramatic figure in the story, and not in the customery picture postcarding style of including scenic beauty, the show has entertainment and commercial quality to be capitalized upon not only by those who specialize in outdoor action adventure film but also by those who like to vary their programs by presenting class western features.

Previewed in the Criterion Theatre, Santa Monica. Patrons of a typical big city suburban house, seldom given the opportunity of witnessing a preview, reacted most favorably.

Spain in Flames

(Amkino)

War Film

Here are compiled with sufficient if not striking coherence scenes of the war in Spain. The picture is divided into two parts, the first composed of film designated as made by Spanish government cameramen and the second by Russian cameramen at the civil war front. There is also a spoken introduction by Fernando de Los Rios, Spanish ambassador to the United States, and a spoken finale by the Spanish woman leader known as La Passionari. Between these brief lengths of language film the picture is supplied with sound effects, music score and narration in English.

The narrator comments on the material with frequent and vehement allusion to German and Italian interest in the conflict and fervent allusion to the defenders of Madrid as patriots and to the Spanish government as duly elected and republican. Considerable footage at the beginning is given over to depiction of conditions during the reign of King Alfonso, his overthrow, the elections which followed and to maps showing the country's location in relation to Italy, Germany and the Mediterranean. Italian and German ships are shown, later, in Spanish ports and a Russian ship is seen unloading foodstuffs while the citizenry welcomes the commanding officer. Narration and makeup of film directly reflect the political sympathies of its sponsors.

Regarded independently of spoken narration, the scenes of actual warfare and destruction are interesting and informative as to the kind of war this is and the type of fighter engaged. Air raids are graphically shown, the flight of citizens, death in the streets and ensuing fires giving a rounded impression of devastation. Trench and field fighting is shown in somewhat less detail. The siege of the Alcazar is photographed from the attack side but the dynamiting of the structure and the rescue of its defenders are omitted. Men, women and children killed and wounded are included briefly at intervals in the footage.

Exhibition usefulness of the film in this country is controlled by the nature of the narration and composition.

Head over Heels in Love

(Gaumont British)

Music, Comedy, Romance

A gay and completely exhilarating production "Head Over Heels in Love" is light comedy, romance and music well blended by Sonnie Hale, director. An appealing story of a girl who becomes infatuated with a philandering young man, suffers when he trails an actress to Hollywood, only to discover that love has been lingering on her doorstep in the person of an unassuming devotee. The one who plays the girl is the accomplished Jessie Matthews.

With her twinkling feet, her persuasive voice and expressive features Miss Matthews dominates the picture.

The elaborate musical settings of other Matthews pictures are missing. Only once is there a chorus, all men, employed to assist Miss Matthews in a dancing number, and that is for interpretation and unpretentious.

A measure of applause also goes to Mack Gordon and Harry Revel for the music and lyrics with which the picture is fully stocked: "May I Have the Next Romance with You," "Looking Around Corners," "There's That Look in Your Eyes Again," "I Don't Give a Good Gosh Darn," "Through the Courtesy of Love" and the title song.

An effective scene, largely a triumph of photography, concerns the disappearance of Miss Matthews, after having caused a public scandal, as Robert Flemyng walks the streets in search of her. No words are spoken; the camera speeds about to capture in a sequence the frustration of his search.

A chance encounter while shopping for foodstuffs in Paris results in Jeanne (Miss Matthews) being invited by Pierre (Robert Flemyng) to share his lunch in his studio apartment. Marcel (Louis Borell), Pierre's roommate, falls in love with Jeanne and proceeds to blight any opportunity Pierre might have had as a rival. Jeanne, who is a cabaret singer, gives Marcel a chance in her act, consents to marry him, but when he meets Norma Langtry (Whitney Bourne), an American film star, he leaves Jeanne to follow Norma to Hollywood. Jeanne becomes a sensation as a radio performer when Pierre thinks up a clever advertising broadcast. Jeanne and Pierre become engaged. Marcel returns and appears on Jeanne's program. Infuriated, she causes a scandal and is barred from the air. Jeanne returns to her old cafe as a cigarette girl. Marcel finds her and offers her a contract in Hollywood. Jeanne accepts but leaves Marcel at train time to join Pierre.

Exhibitors should find much to exploit in this picture notwithstanding the fact that the supporting cast is little known in this country.

April Romance

(MGM)

Biographical Music Film

"April Romance" is an English production presenting with manifest respect and occasional dashes of humor and drama certain incidents in the life of Franz Schubert. Richard Tauber, famous abroad as a singer of Schubert songs, plays the role of the great composer with understanding; his singing of several Schubert compositions is superb and, of course, the entertainment factor of major importance to the film. The setting, Vienna in 1820, is extraordinary in its seeming accuracy of detail and whole.

The incidents depicted are those relating to the composer's love for one Vicki, daughter of a dancing master and sweetheart of a soldier, who declines his proposal of marriage made following the public concert in which he has attained his first success. Prior to this he has sold his piano to buy the young lady a dress, which she believes to be a present from the soldier, and when Schubert learns that Vicki expects to marry her military suitor he searches the city for him, finds him in a public house, demands to know his intentions and is thrown out. Later the soldier apologizes and tells him he would marry Vicki if the Duchess in whose regiment he serves had not planned another match for him. Schubert intervenes, obtains her consent, gives the young people his blessing and buries his sorrow in his music.

The film is addressed directly to music lovers and especially to admirers of Schubert's works. Mr. Tauber sings six of the better known songs in the course of the picture. Nevertheless, there was no skimping of production in any department, no dilution of story value or dialogue, and the casting is excellent. Music organizations should be found more than willing to cooperate in exploitation of the picture.

Mysterious Crossing

(Universal)

Comedy-Drama

New Orleans is the unusual scene of this comedy drama, wherein a newspaper reporter solves a murder mystery, and the unfamilarity of the setting imparts a degree of novelty to the picture. James Dunn is the reporter, Andy Devine his comic companion, Jean Rogers the girl the reporter marries and John Eldredge the murderer. Herbert Rawlinson and J. Farrell MacDonald are other player names of box office significance, although both actors have relatively minor roles.

The story centers about a reporter, Murphy, who witnesses a scuffle between two men on a ferry, hears a splash and, assuming that a murder has been committed, establishes the fact of a tragedy by means of reportorial artifices, incidentally obtaining a job on a New Orleans newspaper, and progresses through various adventures to a solution of the mystery, capture of the criminal and winning of the murdered man's daughter. A Carolinian (Andy Devine) who has lent Murphy money follows him through his adventures in an attempt to collect it, affording humorous counterpoint to the dramatic theme.

Player names and locale appear to be the dominant exploitation factors.

Woman Wise

(20th Century-Fox)

Metropolitan Comedy Drama

Professional boxing and boxers are dealt with in such unusual and knowing manner in this story as to argue that exploitation appealing to ring interest ought to be productive of substantial returns both in patronage and publicity. Although the story approach to the subject is by way of sports reporting and presents in unorthodox fashion the goings-on in a metropolitan newspaper plant, the tale focuses interest on the plight of the ring notables of yesteryear and throws light into unfamiliar corners of a professional sport that may be said to require plenty of illumination.

James Whalen is cast as Tracey Browne, sports editor of a major newspaper, whose efforts to clean up professional boxing by exposing gangsters who stage fixed fights bring him into contact with Alice Fuller (Rochelle Hudson), daughter of a down-and-outer being used as a set-up by dishonest promoters. A rival sports editor in secret partnership with the racketeers traps Browne into a match with the has-been and he whips him, incurring the wrath of the daughter, which turns to love. Brought before the boxing commission, he denounces racketeers present and then, to gain funds for the relief of has-beens, instructs a confederate to accept bribe money from promoters. Ultimately they expose him and he is discharged by his publisher, whose son he has rescued from a life of dissipation. The girl's

Secret Valley

(20th Century-Fox)

Western Drama

Plain drama of the cow country, produced in common-sense manner and without ostentation, "Secret Valley" presents Richard Arlen as a brave but backward westerner beset by difficulties over which he triumphs in a manner satisfactory to the customers usually attracted by this type of film. The girl of his ultimate affection is Virginia Grey, who portrays an eastern miss who places herself in his custody for reasons he does not understand until near the close of the picture.

The story has to do with the young lady's efforts to escape an unpleasant marriage. She hides out on a ranch, without explaining her presence, and city mobsters arrive on the scene, following incidents which have conduced to the development of mutual affection between the girl and her western host, determined to take her back to the city. Control of the situation changes hands a number of times, with much brandishing of firearms and some shooting, but the westerner is finally victorious and the ending is the conventional one.

Advertised as plain, unvarnished western drama, with the cast names duly featured, the picture contains the elements commonly expected by patrons responsive to this type of appeal.

Masquerade in Vienna

(George Kraska)

Continental Comedy

This importation is a German-language equivalent of the American "Escapade," the MGM production which brought Luise Ranier into the foreground and added to the stature of Frank Morgan and William Powell as sophisticated comedians. It is, as was "Escapade," from a script by Walter Reisch and said to be founded upon a factual incident, a declaration of interest only as contrasting with the emphatically reverse protestations currently being made on all fronts. The production is also advertised as having won a prize at the biennial exposition in Venice.

The picture is supplied with English titles for the American trade and these interpret the German dialogue adequately. The film follows the American production incident for incident and almost speech for speech. It is a little less comic, chiefly because it does not have the benefit of Frank Morgan's performance, and the suddenly dramatic conclusion seems a little more earnest. The settings are perhaps more nearly authentic, since the production is purported to have been made in Vienna, but somewhat less handsome. Paula Wessely has the role played by Luise Rainer in "Escapade" and plays it quite similarly.

The story, it will be recalled, has to do with a young woman whose name happens to be in fact the improvised one given by an artist under pressure from a gentleman whose fiance he has painted in mask and muff, the picture appearing as a magazine cover to the discomfiture of all parties. Following developments typical of the continental comedy, the artist falls in love with the girl and the ending satisfies the entertainment equation.

While the names of the players are of importance where German-language films are known, no doubt the most effective exploitation of the film consists of billing it as "Escapade" in German.

Love from a Stranger

(Trafalgar - United Artists)

Melodrama

The story values here are original but very highly colored, climaxing in a scene in which a girl, alone with her husband in an isolated country cottage, discovers that he is a homicidal maniac, whose technique is to marry a woman for her money and to kill her after arranging for the legal transfer of her wealth. With the date set for her own death, and cynically announced by her sinister spouse, the girl succeeds in frightening him into a fatal heart attack by the pretense that she has poisoned his coffee.

Added to the possibilities of stunt publicity suggested by this eposide, the picture offers selling values in Ann Harding, in her first British film, Basil Rathbone, a Frances Marion script, and direction by Rowland V. Lee. To the lovers of thrillers it will be a recommendation that the picture derives from a very successful stage production based on an Agatha Christie story.

Carol Howard, an office girl, wins a big prize in the French Lottery. She plans a trip to Paris to collect the money, and advertises her flat to let. Ronald Bruce, in love with her, is estranged by her wealth and her apparent expectation that he will become dependent on her. Gerald Lovell, plausible and fascinating, comes to view the flat, makes an impression on Carol and, turning up on the Paris boat, uses his opportunities to persuade her to a speedy wedding.

Back in England, Lovell persuades his wife to buy a country cottage in an isolated spot. He also tricks her into signing documents which guarantee that her property will pass to him. His anxiety to keep everyone from the cellar where he practices a mysterious hobby, his sudden flashes of violent passion, and other incidents gradually arouse suspicion in the girl, but when she finally discovers that she has married a murderer and a madman she is alone with him and at his mercy. The girl, terrified, attempts to plead with and then to trick the maniac in the way already described, as Ronald and a friend break down the door of the cottage.

The big scene has suspense value but is not too convincing in action, however impressive it may be in literary form, and it is over-acted by both leads. Rathbone has a very far-fetched character to interpret and that he does not make it convincing is perhaps the author's fault as much as his; Ann Harding, also, gives the impression that she does not believe too heartedly in her role.

Better class audiences are not likely to think it impressive, but will find compensation in the light comedy and variety of settings of the earlier scenes, and the crudity of the thrills will perhaps be no drawback to audiences which like their melodrama without pretense.

Arizona Days

(Grand National)

Musical Western

This, the third number in the Tex Ritter series of Westerns, cannot be classed as a very notable addition. Story material is below par and is composed of situations that are routinely handled, with the result not very exciting entertainment. Mr. Ritter's songs are plentiful, but to these Eastern ears they tend to sound of the same tuneless mould. Elements that make any western complete, such as a full quota of hard riding and gun play, are not particularly important factors in the composition of this subject. The scenic backgrounds are none too beautiful or expansive.

Part of the film's weakness lies in the story's structure. The plot seems to be divided into two parts. In the beginning and for a good deal of the resulting action, the musical portion of the theme is stressed. It is only at the very end of the complications that things grow interesting and then it is a little too late. The result remains entirely unsatisfactory and must be designated for a minor place.

Enroute to Tombstone, Arizona, Tex Malinson (Tex Ritter) saves William Faversham from having his traveling show attached by the sheriff for back payment of bills. To show his gratitude Faversham makes Tex a member of his troupe. Malinson's stage debut is marred by a ruffian named Price (Forest Taylor) and his gang of hoodlums who have forced their entrance into the theatre without paying the admission price. Compelled to reimburse the cashier, the gang leaves in high humiliation and retaliates by burning the Professor's wagons. The show is thus reduced to a financial crisis. Forced to do something to cover the loss, Tex is employed as a tax collector by Workman (Earl Dwire) who counts as one of his blessings a comely daughter (Eleanor Stewart), which fact, of course, is more than added inducement for Malinson to accept the position. The first assignment is to collect Price's back taxes. That gentleman is none too pleased and even goes so far as to take a shot at Tex's life. As a result of beating Price in a contest for the quickest draw, Tex does finally collect

Thunder in the City

(Atlantic—Columbia)

Comedy Drama

Edward G. Robinson's first British film, produced by Alexander Esway for Atlantic Films, released in England by United Artists and in America by Columbia, is more comedy than drama, and splashed with broad satire aimed at English and American idiosyncrasies impartially.

It is really amusing audience material and there are good angles for exploitation. Ned Mann provides one of these by his special model effects of a fleet of airships flying over London on an "American" exploitation stunt, but the big line is probably that an English Duke is presented as a willing and active partner in the type of ballyhoo which includes street parades and a "Sales Song." Savouring this situation is the fact that the American salesman portrayed by Robinson has been fired in New York because of the blatancy of his car-selling methods and recommended to go to England and see how dignified methods are in that country. He alters all that.

Dan Armstrong, sales manager for the Snyderling Straight Eight, is fired after he has sent a fleet of "blimps" over New York, dropping leaflets. That sort of exploitation is too crude nowadays, say his employers, and he is given a check and a hint to go to England or some other place where they can show him Dignity. Dan goes to England, creates a bit of a stir by carrying a street musician and his organ into his Savoy bedroom, and in these circumstances makes the first acquaintance of some distant English relatives, very "County," who invite him down to the ancestral hall.

There he meets the shabby, unconventional Duke of Glenavon, and learns that His Grace owns mines full of the new ore Magnolia, lighter than aluminum and stronger than steel. He also encounters Manningdale, English financier with an eye on the mines and on the Duke's pretty daughter Patricia. Dan, without a cent, "buys" the mine and persuades the Duke to wait for his cash until the shares are sold to the public. Forthwith he plans one of those selling campaigns that lost him his New York job. All the Duke's aristocratic friends are lined up to sell the script, coached in salesmanship, taught to sing the "Magnolia Song." Publicity tells the nation the wonders of the new metal; the "blimps" sail triumphantly over London. The company goes over big—and then Dan discovers that the only process by which the metal can be prepared has been bought up by Manningdale. To save the company he resigns and books a plane seat for Vienna. Before he gets aboard, a procession of shareholders, headed by the Duke and singing the Magnolia song, arrive. It is plain that Dan, who finds Patricia an unexpected fellow-passenger, will make another comeback.

The comedy values are well worth a little extra trouble with the selling campaign. Robinson, as the man who finds England's dignity not so formidable, makes the most of that situation and of many opportunities for getting fun out the little things in England that amuse Americans. Duke-Salesman Nigel Bruce is the other obvious publicity angle.

Beware of Ladies

(Republic)

Comedy-Drama

What goes on backstage in a political campaign and what comes of it is briskly and entertainingly portrayed by well chosen players amid modern settings and with plenty of action in this Nat Levine production. The topic is of increasingly general appeal and the treatment is broad and readily understandable. There is a reasonable love interest and much of the material is melodramatic in character.

The somewhat involved story pertains principally to a candidate for the district attorneyship and a girl reporter assigned to cover and support his campaign. He is thrust into publicity enterprises not of his choosing, but they win for him the feminine backing he needs. Gangsters employed by his unscrupulous opponent discover that the girl reporter has a living husband, obtain what appears to be compromising photographs of the girl and the candidate and threaten blackmail. As this plan appears about to succeed, however, one of the conspirators decides to exact toll from both parties and in ensuing complications the girl's husband is murdered, the plotters are exposed and the candidate appears in a fair way to win both election and bride when the picture ends.

Donald Cook and Judith Allen have the leading roles, with Russell Hopton enacting a particularly despicable heavy. There is adequate comedy relief.

Woman in Distress

(Columbia)

Comedy Drama

The woman of the title is played by May Robson with characteristic color and the distress has to do with the theft of an authentic Rembrandt given to her by a girlhood sweetheart and treasured in the solitude of her small town home for 40 maiden years. Against the gentle, sentimental background thus established is projected a crook-detective-reporter melodrama involving frequent transitions to the metropolis and, finally, attempted murder.

May Robson's performance is the outstanding portrayal, naturally. Irene Hervey and Dean Jagger are adequate in the romantic roles and Douglass Dumbrille is satisfactory as the principal criminal. The incidents pertaining to the theft and recovery of the picture are melodramatic and plausible, with practically all players participating at intervals in the comedy relief.

When newspapers report a rumor that a genuine Rembrandt believed to have been burned is in the possession of an up-state spinster, rival editors send Fred Stevens and Irene Donovan, reporters, to investigate, and Jerome Culver, a shady art dealer, plans to steal the painting. While the rival reporters send their papers conflicting reports, Culver obtains the painting and arranges for its sale. Miss Donovan brings the spinster to New York and police are brought into the case. Stevens finds the painting in Culver's quarters after the crook has lured the old lady back to her home with intention of murdering her in such manner as to make her death seem accidental. Fred Stevens arrives in time to effect a rescue and marry his reportorial rival.

Gypsy

(Warner-British)

Romantic Comedy

From the Warner studio at Teddington, London, this is an adaptation of Lady Eleanor Smith's novel, "Tzigane," which offers the contrasted backgrounds of Hungarian circus, cafe and caravan and of English life in its most genteel manifestations in town and country. This, and the story of how a gypsy girl marries a staid middle-aged London bachelor and turns his life upside down, are the selling angles of a production with many obvious box-office values, but unfortunately with equally obvious crudities of presentation and characterization.

The name of Roland Young is an obvious asset and his performance as the recluse swept off his feet by a feminine tornado can quite truly be advertised as in his best vein. Chili Bouchier as the gypsy girl is too consistently fortissimo to please critical audiences, but puts over the broader comedy episodes well. The general story element of the gypsy in society lends itself to exploitation, and there are two separate incidents from which ingenious showmen can make capital. One is the girl's headlong fall from a tree, culminating in her giving household instructions while hanging by her feet outside the kitchen window, and the other pictures her invitation to a gypsy troop to make whoopee in the ancestral hall. There are possibilities also in her ingenious scheme of reaching London from Hungary by forcing herself on a series of unwilling fellow travelers and compelling them to smuggle her across the frontiers; an amateur aviator is the last victim.

The story is that Hassina, a tempestuous dancer in a Budapest cafe, loves Brazil, a lion tamer, and decides to follow him to London. Arriving by the means mentioned she parks herself in the car belong to Alan Brooks, a middle-aged, studious, rich bachelor, who unwillingly gives her a night's refuge, later rescues her from the police and ultimately marries her, after the lion-tamer has been reported killed.

At Alan's country house, Hassina's unconventional habits lead to a quarrel between her husband and his nephew, who accidentally discovers that Brazil is still alive and appearing in London. Hassina, who regards herself as pledged to the lion-tamer, goes to him at the circus but discovers that he has married another girl. She returns glady to the disconsolate Alan.

There is a clever comedy butler characterization by Frederick Burtwell, but some of the other parts are grossly over-acted and the general lack of polish of the production, despite good story values, limits the film's appeal, it seems, to the less critical communities.

Trade shown in London.—B. A.

Produced by Warner-First National Pictures. Distributed by Warner Bros. Directed by Roy William Neill. From the novel, "Tzigane," by Lady Eleanor Smith. Screen play by Brock Williams and Terence Rattigan.

The Mill on the Floss

(National Provincial - British)

Drama

This is an unusual and in many ways a very attractive British offer, presenting effective opportunities for exploitation in situations where it is reasonable to expect appreciation for a finely characterized and carefully detailed picture of life in another country and in another age. It is a faithful interpretation of George Eliot's great book, which means that it is a "period" production, but the costumes and atmosphere of the early nineteenth century, which may be a drawback in many theatres, are likely elsewhere to be an asset.

The story deals with fundamental human passions and deals with them finely in a dramatic sense and effectively from the photoplay point of view. There is a magnificent portrait gallery of English types; the English countryside and the social life of pre-Victorian England are here in their real beauty and their authentic quaintness. It is an English film, says so frankly, and should be sold as such.

From the point of view of acting standards it compares very favorably with British films for which Hollywood has been raided. In the leading role of Maggie Tulliver, Geraldine Fitzgerald gives a really moving and sensitive performance. Frank Lawton also is well cast as the self-effacing Phillip Wakem. Griffith Jones is the other outstanding player, as Sydney Guest. For the rich range of character parts provided by the overflowing imagination of the authoress the producers seem to have called upon all the best known members of the London stage.

Pictorially, the film offers many beautiful English country scenes and spectacularly some very realistic flood scenes when a dam bursts and the river sweeps away the Mill and drowns the girl and her faithful lover.

The story closely follows the book with a richness of detail. Essentially, it traces the results of a feud between Tulliver, owner of the Mill on the river Floss, and Wakem, a neighboring landowner.

"The Mill on the Floss," for which no American release so far has been set, is a picture which, when it does reach the States, calls for careful consideration by exhibitors playing to critical and intelligent audiences. It should be personally viewed in order that its wealth of character, atmosphere and color should be judged with regard to the local situation.

Viewed at a night trade show, Piccadilly Theatre, it held an audience which regarded it as a refreshing departure from the bulk of films.—B. A.

Produced by John Clein Pictures and distributed in England by National Provincial Film Distributors. Directed by Tim Whelan. From the novel by George Eliot. Adaptation by Garnett Weston. Dialogue by John Drinkwater. Camera and lighting John Stumar. Art director, Douglas Daniels. Costumes, Irene Segalla. Running time, 90 mins. General audience.

Fishing Thrills

(Columbia)

Sport Short

Opening with scenes depicting the mild sport of fishing for trout and graduating to the more dangerous and strenuous catch for sailfish, tarpon and swordfish and concluding with views of the most dangerous tests of fisherman skill in the harpooning of whales, this edition of the New World Sports Series is exciting enough to provide the emotion promised in its title. Particularly attuned to the anglers in the audience, there is nevertheless in the subject a certain quota of entertainment even for those whose piscatorial interest stops at a weekly fish diet on Friday. Running time, 10 minutes.

House of Magic

(Universal)

Comic Cartoon

Madcap Meany, Miny and Moe take shelter from a rainstorm in a "House of Magic." What befalls them turns out to be several times more worrying than a shower. Though the adventures are a bit routine, the treatment is fast and fresh. Ghostly hands come from nowhere to play a weird tune upon a piano. Strange changes in monkey anatomy take place. A magic carpet lends a note of mystery. Rabbits that multiply from a silk hat and paper snakes serve as complications. It surely should tickle the youngsters' risibilities. Running time, eight minutes.

A Horse's Tale

(Warner)

Race Track Capers

Joe and Asbestos fall heir to a race horse in this "Broadway Brevity" subject and, as might be suspected, win the big race. They inherit the horse when two fixers convince the owner the horse is permanently crippled, and Joe and Asbestos are delegated to see that the animal is killed. Removing a nail from the hoof of the injured horse's leg, Joe and Asbestos train the animal and enter it in the race. Needless to say the two fixers lose their collective shirts. Running time, 20 minutes.

The Golfers

(Universal)

Cartoon Comedy

That trio of mischief makers, Meany Miny and Moe, takes up the popular sport of golf. Impedimenta such as difficult shots and hen's eggs offer material for some comic but routine business. The finale of the monks' score with a robot golf machine provides some rapid fire and occasionally humorous situations. The youngsters, of course, and perhaps the golf minded of the audience will find something in the gags to chuckle about. Running time, 8½ minutes.

Nice Work

(Warner)

Interesting

This is a very interesting and colorful insight into the occupations of different nationalities: Indians are shown carding wood, weaving blankets and hammering metal. The Swedish are depicted winding yarn by a process called spindling, spinning thread from flax and teaching the weaving of woolens. Norwegians are fishing for sardines and canning them, and finally the Hawaiians are shown cultivating their fields of sugar cane. Narrated by Milton J. Cross. Running time, 10 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 33

(Universal)

Novelty

A collection of the usually interesting oddities is the material matter to be found in this issue of the novelty series. Some of the singular items include a one armed paper hanger, a cute Oriental Miss who works a Chinese typewriter, a gentleman who sports what purports to be the world-champion eyebrows, and finally for the wonder of wonders a one legged skier, one Arthur W. Kidder of Denver. The photography and the running commentary are of the customary high grade and the whole composition is certain to hold the interest of any audience. Running time, 8½ minutes.

The Pretty Pretender

(Warner)

Songs, Comedy

Bernice Claire, a singer in a night club, has aspirations of starring in a Broadway production. Affecting a French accent she goes to the office of a producer and poses as the star of several Parisian revues. She shows the producer several photographs of acts that have appeared with her, the acts coming to life on the stage. The producer sees through her deception and tells her so. Then Miss Claire discovers the supposed producer is only the producer's son. Later, however, at the night club the real producer signs Miss Claire to a contract. Others in the cast are Stanley Smith, Bruce MacFarlane, Nina Olivette with Murray and King, Byrne Sisters and Adrina Otero. Running time, 21 minutes.

Fun Begins at Home

Mediocre

Domestic troubles, such as servant temperament and rent bills, are many and heavy for the team of Barry and Whitlege, but, being the gracious hosts, the entertainment of their guests at a house party comes first. Billed as talent are Virginia Verrill, the radio songster, who demonstrates how versatile she is by chanting "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby" in heavy but expressive French; the dance act of Montgomery and Whitty, executing some rather routine dance steps, and a colored quartet called The Charioteers who do a song in the Mills Brothers style without being as good as their model. The finish of the subject—and the charming hostess too—is the discovery of the perfidy of her butler, who has been selling tickets for the entertainment, to utter and inelegant strangers as a means of raising his back salary. The whole is hardly spectacular; the material is a bit colorless and the humor rather humorless. Running time, 10 minutes.

(A) H. Edwards replies, "Remembering that the angle of incidence and the angle of reflection are equal, it follows that since different points in a light source of area must be at slightly different angles to all points of the reflection surface of a spherical mirror, their angle of reflection will be slightly different. The practical effect of this situation is that as distance from the mirror's center is increased, the reflected light reaches the axis of the beam at a point nearer the mirror, this effect being what is termed spherical aberration."

D. Danielson says, "The chief cause of spherical aberration in spherical mirrors is the area of the light source itself. Rays leaving the source at different distances from the optical axis must of necessity strike the mirror surface at different distances from its optical axis, which causes the said rays to converge at various planes other than the true one they would all reach were the reflection surface fully corrected for spherical aberration."

J. R. Prater puts it very well. He says, "The cause of spherical aberration in spherical mirrors is the considerable area of surface presented by the light source itself. Were the light source a single point having no area all rays incident upon the mirror would be focused at one distance from the mirror—at one point. The angle of reflection always equal the angle of incidence, and since rays from points removed from the center of the light source must, of necessity, meet the mirror surface at slightly different angles, it is plain that they will be reflected in such manner that they will again meet (be focused) at different distances from the mirror surface. This effect is progressively greater from the optical center of the mirror toward its outer edge. Aberration in the projector is exaggerated because the light source is placed well within the true focal length of the mirror, therefore its reflected image (as well as the aberrations) is magnified several times."

(B) B. DiVietti answers, "The practical effects of spherical aberration is to bring rays from different diameters of the mirror to a focus at different distances from the point at which they should meet, and by this fact to cause much of the light beam area to waste itself upon the cooling plate and, in some cases, fall outside the free diameter of the projection lens, which latter action sets up added unevenness of screen illumination."

W. C. Brown says, "Spherical aberration causes waste of light. It causes an abnormal portion of the rays to fall upon the cooling plate, where they accomplish no useful purpose; also, under certain conditions, some of them to fall outside of the projection lens, which means added waste."

C. L. Mosier says, "Spherical aberration has the following effects: It distributes the mirror's point of focus along a considerable distance, instead of all rays meeting at one plane. It compells the use of a much larger spot of light on the cooling plate than would be required were it not present, hence it sets up light loss at that point. It causes a diverging, instead of a converging, light beam between aperture and projection lens, thus compelling the use of a projection lens of large diameter, with consequent loss in depth of focus, and under certain conditions, waste of light because all of the diverging beam cannot enter the lens, which in turn sets up additional unevenness of screen illumination."

(C) Charles Oldham says, "Parabolic and elliptical mirrors are those so made that if the light source be placed at the focal point thereof, a beam of parallel rays will go forward from the mirror."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 61

(A) Explain the construction and operation of dynamic loudspeakers.

(B) Explain the construction and operation of magnetic loud speakers.

(C) Tell us which you believe to be best and why. (This latter applies, of course, only to projectionists who have handled both types.)

O. H. Schmidt says, "A parabolic or elliptical mirror is one the reflecting surface of which is tilted progressively from its center, away from the true spherical form, so that according to the amount of tilt, a parabolic or elliptical surface is formed."

G. and S. E. Gay says, "We think, Brother Richardson, it is best to stick to our old friend Daniel Webster on this one. He says, 'Parabolic Mirror: a mirror the paraboloidal surface of which gives images of very distant objects free from aberration.' 'Paraboloidal: of pertaining to, or bearing resemblance to a paraboloid.' 'Paraboloid: the solid generated by the rotation of a parabola about its axis.' The definition of a parabola is too lengthy to quote."

(D) There is an astonishing variety of answers to this section. Since our allotted space is already almost full, I will answer the question briefly myself:

Spherical aberration, as it concerns projection lenses, makes impossible the projection of a critically sharp screen image. As it concerns the light collector (image or condenser), it serves to break up the light source image at the aperture, thus preventing projection of a sharp image of the light source to the screen, which image would, as we all know, not have even illumination.

Loose-Leaf Catalog of RCA Equipment

A catalog of loose-leaf type so arranged that new developments can be included as they arise, has been issued by the RCA Manufacturing Company on its Photophone recording and re-recording equipment.

The initial issue has 84 sheets giving specifications with respect to both construction and operation for all recording apparatus and accessories, including power and test equipment. Each item is illustrated in halftone printed in black on blue block background), while in many instances operating characteristics are set forth in graphs.

The loose-leaf covers are of heavy board decoratively covered with gold and brown paper. Sheets are of coated stock in a durable weight.

Nominees Listed For Winners of Academy Awards

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, in Hollywood, this week completed the nomination of motion picture and talent candidates for the annual awards to be announced at the banquet on March 4th. In the final awards, one each will be selected from the following nominee groups:

Films—"Anthony Adverse," Warners; "Dodsworth," Goldwyn-U. A.; "The Great Ziegfeld," M-G-M; "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," Columbia; "Libeled Lady," M-G-M; "Romeo and Juliet," M-G-M; "San Francisco," M-G-M; "The Story of Louis Pasteur," Warners; "A Tale of Two Cities," M-G-M; "Three Smart Girls," Universal.

Actors—Gary Cooper in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town"; Walter Huston in "Dodsworth"; Paul Muni in "The Story of Louis Pasteur"; William Powell in "My Man Godfrey"; Spencer Tracy in "San Francisco."

Actresses—Irene Dunne in "Theodora Goes Wild," Gladys George in "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie," Carole Lombard in "My Man Godfrey," Luise Rainer in "The Great Ziegfeld," and Norma Shearer in "Romeo and Juliet."

Supporting Actors—Mischa Auer in "My Man Godfrey," Walter Brennan in "Come and Get It," Stuart Erwin in "Pigskin Parade," Basil Rathbone in "Romeo and Juliet" and Akim Tamiroff in "The General Died at Dawn."

Supporting Actresses—Beulah Bondi in "Gorgeous Hussy," Alice Brady in "My Man Godfrey," Bonita Granville in "These Three," Maria Ouspenskaya in "Dodsworth" and Gale Sondergaard in "Anthony Adverse."

Direction—"Dodsworth," by William Wyler; "The Great Ziegfeld," by Robert Z. Leonard; Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," by Frank Capra; "My Man Godfrey," by Gregory la Cava, and "San Francisco," by W. S. VanDyke.

Original Story—"Fury," by Norman Krasna; "The Great Ziegfeld," by William Anthony McGuire; "San Francisco," by Robert Hopkins; "The Story of Louis Pasteur," by Sheridan Gibney and Pierre Collings and "Three Smart Girls," by Adele Comandini.

Screenplay—"After the Thin Man," by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett; "Dodsworth," by Sidney Howard; "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," by Robert Riskin; "My Man Godfrey," by Morris Ryskind and Eric Hatch, and "The Story of Louis Pasteur," by Sheridan Gibney and Pierre Collings.

Assistant Directors—William Cannon for "Anthony Adverse," Jack Sullivan for "The Charge of the Light Brigade," Eric G. Stacey for "Garden of Allah," Clem Beauchamp for "The Last of the Mohicans," Joseph Newman for "San Francisco."

Art Direction—"Anthony Adverse," "Dodsworth," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Lloyds of London," "Magnificent Brute," "Romeo and Juliet," "Winterset."

Black-and-white short subjects not exceeding 1,000 feet in length—"Wanted A Master," M-G-M; "Bored of Education," Roach-M-G-M; "Moscow Moods," Paramount.

Short subject cartoons, black-and-white and colored—"The Country Cousin," Walt Disney-United Artists; "Sinbad the Sailor," Paramount; "The Old Mill Pond," Harmony-M-G-M.

Short subjects in color not more than 3,000 feet in length—"La Fiesta de Santa Barbara," M-G-M; "Popular Science J-62," Paramount; "Give Me Liberty," Warners.

Short subjects in black-and-white between 1,000 and 3,000 feet—"Dummy Ache," RKO; "The Public Pays," M-G-M; "Double or Nothing," Warners.

Original songs written for motion pictures—"Did I Remember," from "Suzy"; "I've Got You Under My Skin," from "Born to Dance"; "A Melody from the Sky," from "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"; "Pennies from Heaven" from the film of the same name; "The Way You Look Tonight," from "Swing Time"; and "When Did You Leave Heaven?" from "Sing, Baby, Sing." (Because of a tie vote for fifth place, six songs were nominated.)

Musical scores from motion pictures—"Anthony Adverse," "The Garden of Allah," "The General Died at Dawn," "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "Winterset."

Sound recordings from motion pictures—"Banjo On My Knee," "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Dodsworth," "General Spanky," "A Girl from Paris," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "San Francisco," "The Texas Rangers" and "Three Smart Girls."

Film editing—"Anthony Adverse," "Come and Get It," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Lloyds of London," "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Theodora Goes Wild."

Photography—"Anthony Adverse," Warners; "The General Died at Dawn," Paramount; and "The Gorgeous Hussy," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

A fundamental change in the rules governing the Academy art direction Award has been announced by President Frank Capra. For the first time, the production to receive the award will be selected from the group nominated by a committee representing the art directors section and all other branches rather than by general vote of the entire Academy membership.

The committee appointed consists of Bernard Harzbrun, chairman; Roland Anderson, Perry Ferguson, Keith Glennan, Stephen Goosson, Howard Green, John Harkrider, Raymond Hatton, Fred Hope, John Hughes, Edward Laemmle, Hans Peters, Willy Pogany, Robert Ross, A. Toluboff and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Technical Bureau.

Warner to Film Radio Programs

Warner Brothers are planning to branch out into the field of motion picture transcriptions of radio programs, totaling as many hours a day as the organization can find time buyers, according to Motion Picture Daily. Applying straight entertainment principles, and the complete resources of the studio, the shows will be recorded on film. They will be unhampered by limitations imposed on the producers of radio shows and will be handled on a scope which marks modern motion picture production methods, the limitations imposed on the plan being only those imposed by the radio medium itself, the paper continues.

An elaborate program has already been discussed. Dramatized newsreels are well within the realm of possibility, extensive musical and dance routines viewed as outside the pale of the one-time produced radio shows are others.

Experimental in intent is a full hour's film-recorded program with Dick Powell as master of ceremonies. It was built by Don Becker of Transamerica, a Warner subsidiary, and includes the Vitaphone Orchestra, conducted by Leo Forbstein, a voice ensemble of 40 voices, bits by Allan Jenkins and Rosalind Marquis and a re-enactment of scenes from "Kid Galahad" with Bette Davis and Edward G. Robinson.

A print is expected to arrive in New York momentarily where it will be "auditioned" for prospective buyers. It has been reported that Chase and Sanborn will get a first look at the show.

New Educational Plan Is Approved By Stockholders

A plan of recapitalization for Educational Pictures, Inc., was approved in Wilmington, Del., by a special meeting of stockholders Monday. The plan provides for the exchange of the old preferred stock of the company, about 18,000 shares of which are outstanding, on the basis of 3.2 shares of new common for each share of preferred, plus 1.8 shares of new common in payments of the accrued dividends on each share of old preferred, or a unit of five shares of new common for each share of old preferred. The preferred stockholder also will receive a warrant to subscribe for one new share of common stock at $10 per share for each share of old preferred now held.

Holders of Educational's old common stock will receive a warrant to subscribe for one share of new common at $10 per share for each two shares of old common now held. The warrants to subscribe for the new common will extend for 18 months after the plan becomes effective.

The plan must be approved by the Delaware state chancellor and the new issues of common and cumulative convertible preferred must be registered with and approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. The new common will consist of 150,000 shares and there will also be 150,000 shares of the new $100 par preferred.

The stockholders' meeting also authorized the company to proceed with the dissolution or merger of six of the nine subsidiaries of Educational Pictures, and this will be undertaken by the company at once.

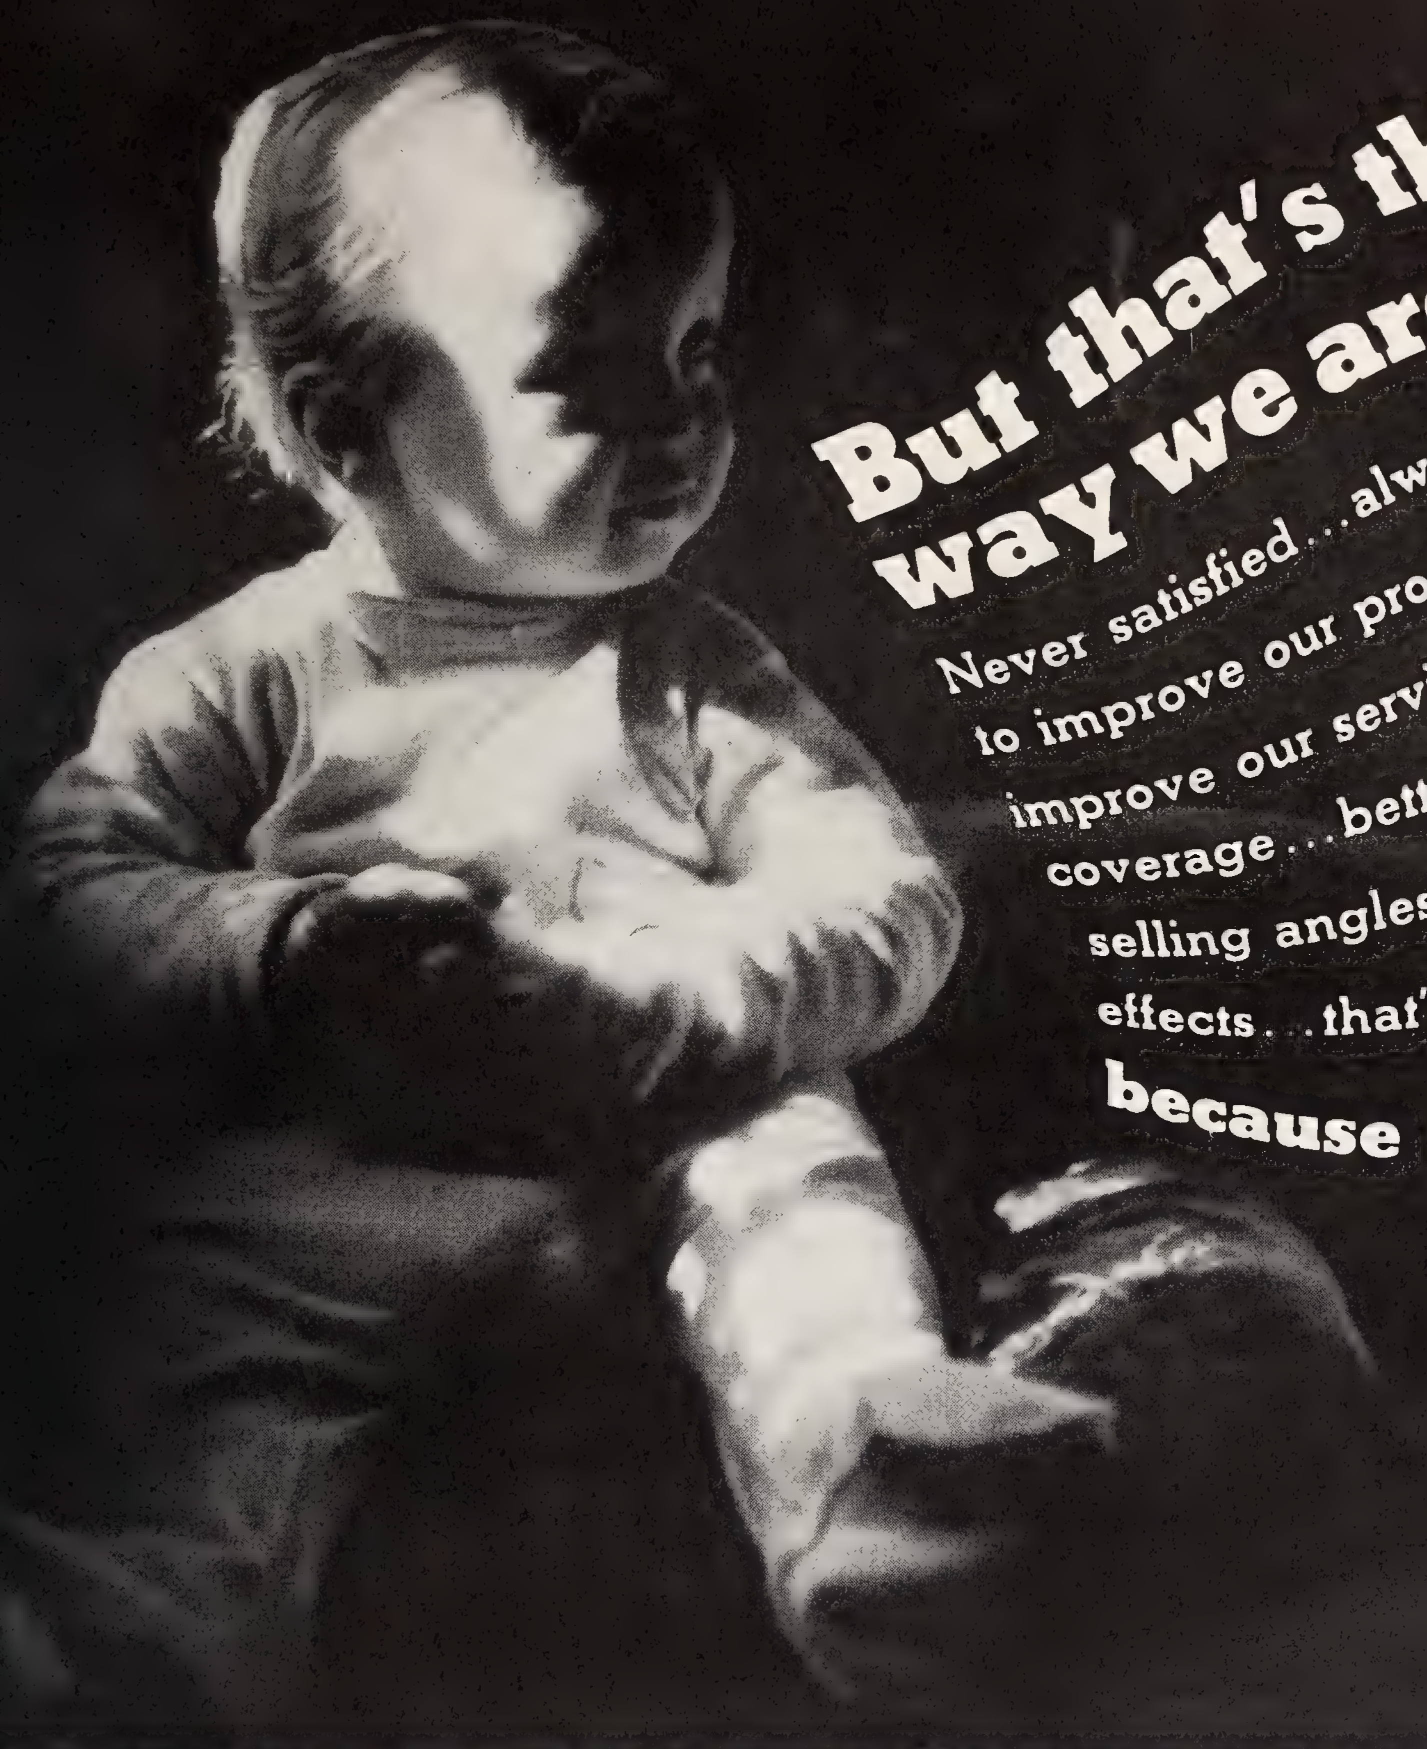
Commenting on the meeting, E. W. Hammons, Educational president, said, "The fact that more than 75 per cent of each class of stock now outstanding has given approval to our plans, with no objection being voiced by any stockholder, is a most encouraging sign for Educational's plan for greater future activities."

New Erpi License Pacts Retroactive

New recording license agreements now being negotiated by Electrical Research Products, Inc., with the large companies and embodying rate reductions will be retroactive to June 1st of last year.

Completion of the negotiations, under way for some time, is expected in the early spring. The first agreement, containing basic provisions which will then be incorporated in all other contracts, is expected to be signed by Loew's. The new agreements will remain in effect until 1944.

The new Erpi recording charges will be the same as those now offered by RCA. A charge of $54 per reel has been established for features in the higher budget brackets and $27 per reel for those in the lower brackets. Foreign recordings and dubbing charges are eliminated but the $100,000 minimum royalty requirements will be continued.



But that's the way we are...

Never satisfied...always trying to improve our product...to improve our service...faster coverage...better prints...new selling angles...snappier camera effects...that's the way we are because

MEXICO CITY REFUSES SUBSIDY FOR INDUSTRY

Mayor Tells Producers Screen Must Seek Own Salvation Through Better Films

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

The Mexico City Government, in a polite but pointed letter from Mayor Cosme Hinojosa to the Mexican Movie Producers Union, has definitely rejected the Union's plea that the city cooperate with the industry by supplying more theatres and granting substantial tax reductions. The Mayor told the Union that catering to the public is the only efficacious means of protecting the national industry.

"If the Mexican movie industry of the Federal District (which includes Mexico City) finds itself unable to pay municipal taxes," the letter said, "that is because the industry is in its incipient stage because of the lack of definite capital and adequate organization. Indeed, it is to be observed that in its few years of life, the industry amounts to little more than a series of associations that each make one or more pictures and fail in their first attempt.

"The civic government is of the opinion that if the national production of movies is to succeed, much more than the installation of studios and laboratories and the acquisition of good equipment are necessary. Above all, talent must be found for the production of worthwhile stories; there must be directors and players of good taste and artistic endowment who can act on their own initiative without aping foreign producers.

"Positive and practical protection of the movie industry is not in the province of the municipal government. Such protection, matters concerned mostly with import duties, fiscal, income and other taxes, is the affair of the federal government which has direct supervision over the entire cinematographic industry. The civic government finds that the real reason for the critical situation in which the national movie industry finds itself is one of production but not exhibition. Therefore, legislation that is to help the industry should be directed at production rather than at exhibition. Laws that make it obligatory for exhibitors to show a national made feature or several shorts once a week or once a month, with exemption from tax payments during the period of the exhibitions, are detrimental to the best interests of national production for there is the danger of the exhibition of bad pictures or the revival of those that offend public taste. This forced exhibition does not favor the natural and rational development of the home movie industry. It is also bad for the exhibitors, for the public cannot be forced to pay to see pictures it does not desire to witness.

"I desire to remind the Union that the law is in effect which exempts from municipal taxes for five years, starting Jan. 1, the movie industry of the Federal District."

SEATTLE CENSORS HAVE SEATS IN THE BALCONY

A city ordinance in Seattle sets forth that members of the theatre censor board, in the course of their work, must be given "a proper seat." Mrs. Cecilia Schultz, theatre operator, last week became indignant over admitting censors to her higher priced chairs and decided to seat them in the cheaper balcony seats. Mrs. Schultz made it clear that she was not discriminating against the censors, adding that they can have the best seats in the house—if they pay regular prices, plus the usual tax.

The censor board is reported discussing the matter.

Tax Exemption Voted

Mexico's government has acted again to assist the native film industry, in the form of two bills passed by congress.

One measure exempts the sector of the industry functioning in the Federal District, this land's District of Columbia and center of things economic and social, from municipal tax payments for five years. This law is a substitute for a rejected bill which demanded that all the domestic industry, everywhere in Mexico, should enjoy freedom from every federal, state and municipal levy for one year. Congress estimated that such sweeping tax paying exemption would be too hard a blow to the various official treasuries.

The other state move is a mandate which makes it obligatory for exhibitors throughout this republic to screen at least one home-made feature a month. If no feature is available, the exhibitor must show several domestically made short subjects. However, this law is not all-hard for the exhibitor. He is allowed a tax reduction of from 8 to 15 per cent, in accordance with the size of his theatre and the volume of its trade, during the time home-made pictures are shown. Exhibitors who disobey this law face fines of from $14 to $280, depending upon the flagrancy of the offense, for the first misstep, and cancellation of license for the next breach.

Commenting editorially upon the forced exhibition measure, the Mexico City daily newspaper El Universal says:

"Congress clearly desires to protect the national movie industry by means of creating an artificial and forced market. This measure reminds us of the one that was in effect for a short time which demanded that all cinemas in Mexico had to exhibit all made in Mexico pictures, including some that were intolerably bad. This measure died of its own weight, for the simple reason that there were not enough pictures and productions could easily be shown in but one theatre, let alone all in the country.

Says Law Hurt

"That law did our movie industry more harm than good, for the public resented this obligatory exhibition of pictures, even those that were examples of the Stone Age of our picture industry. Such forced sales and showings of pictures have scant if any economic benefit for encouraging the Mexican movie industry, for in the final analysis it is the public that fixes the value of pictures. If the films are good, the public is glad to pay well to see them. If they are bad, no legislation can force the public to pay to see them or enable the producers to retrieve their loss. Does congress imagine that by passing a law it can force people to pay to see movies?

"The movies is an industry that partakes much of the nature of the fine arts. Therefore, it is impossible to apply to it commercial rules that govern prime necessity articles, and it is easy to improve the quality of such articles by importing equipment and foreign technicians and other experts that will make such articles better. But that cannot be done with our pictures. We have sadly experienced the fact that to make good pictures much more than fine cameras and equipment are necessary. Better writers, players and directors are necessary, elements that have much more than a smattering of the superficial recipes of foreign producers.

"Experience has proven that it is puerile to build up a Mexican movie art-industry by coercion. It is far better to have natural development, to make it up to the producers to make pictures that people want to see, for their intrinsic value. This can be done by relieving tax burdens, allowing exemptions, offering prizes, so that the industry will have more resources to devote to artistic and technical perfection of production. Of course, that is more difficult to attain than by merely passing laws. But it is well worth attempting."

From Autos to Films

An automobile manufacturer has turned film producer. General Motors of Mexico this week, with Hollywood assistance, starts making a series of six shorts to show tourist-minded Americans what this country has to offer, especially to those who travel in their own cars or buses. The film will depict various beauty spots in the Mexican capital and places on roads in and out of it.

The first picture is to be a travelogue of the international highway between Mexico City and Laredo, Texas. General Motors is reported to be ready to invest some $75,000 in the enterprises, and hopes for exhibition in 15,000 American cinemas.

"Judas," a picture that the Azteca Films Company, a Mexican enterprise of El Paso, Texas, recently made with Mexican government aid, has led to a lawsuit. Azteca is suing Victor Urruchua and Josefina Escobede, well-known Mexican picture players, for $1,900 which it alleges they obtained fraudulently by obtaining exclusive rights to the picture by political pressure, after the Government had refused to permit it to be exported to the United States. Azteca says it gave the accused rights to exhibit the film in northern Mexico and the United States. The charge is that they showed the picture in Mexico on their own.

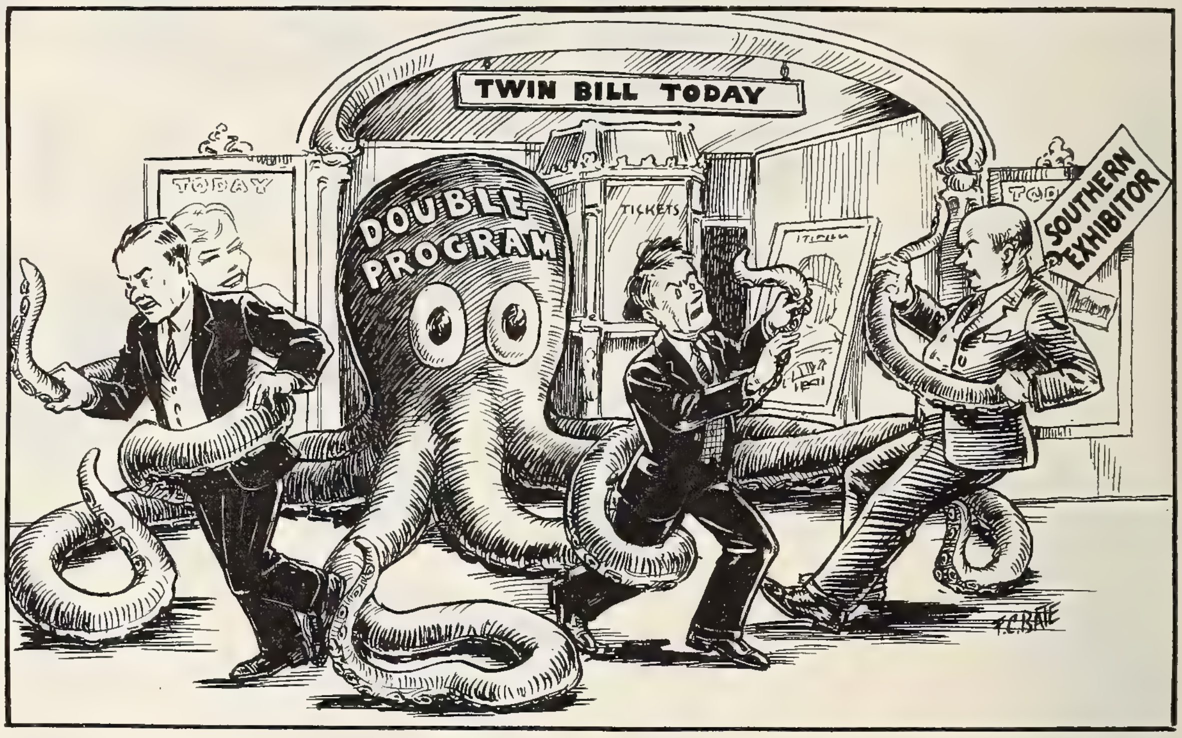
Calls Double Feature Octopus Strangling Quality and Receipts

Vice-President of Southeastern MPTO Urges Exhibitors Do Something

by J. H. THOMPSON

President, Martin & Thompson
Hawkinsville, Ga.



An octopus, which has already wrapped its tentacles around a number of struggling northern exhibitors and which threatens a reaching out to strangle southern showmen, too, is a fair mental projection of the double-feature evil. But a truer portrait would be that of a Frankenstein slowly crushing its creators to death. The motion picture industry is creating this monster and it is the motion picture industry which will be destroyed by that creation.

Since we, ourselves, are responsible for this thing we fear, would it not be the part of wisdom for us to pause for a little introspection? Would it not be smart on our part for us to find out where the real seat of trouble is—instead of damning the system of double booking as a whole as though it was something which had forced itself upon us in spite of our vigorous protests?

Let's have a look at "us" and see if we can't get a correct diagnosis of this ailment which would terminate our existence.

All of us are "cogs" in an educational and entertainment machine and we well realize that when even the smallest cog in a train of gears ceases to function—the whole train comes to a standstill.

We are part of an industry which years of study, research and unremitting effort along scientific, artistic and showmanship lines have developed into a magnificent success.

By a careful molding of public opinion, we have taught the people to expect great things from us, and up 'til now we have delivered the goods.

Today, something hurtful is happening, something which, if not checked in its incipiency, will very quickly entirely destroy this marvelous fabric which our strenuous efforts have created.

Founded on Service

In our fierce endeavor to build up box-office receipts from day to day, we have temporarily lost sight of the vital fact that our industry is founded on service to the public and our battle against the ever increasing competition among ourselves for the preemption of lucrative trade territories has caused this fatal oversight.

Our present double feature tactics may force a momentary jungle growth of profits. But those same tactics, persisted in, will in a brief span of time leave the entire industry stranded high and dry on an arid desert of non-interest on the part of our sustaining public.

The public is fickle. We admit that—but it is wise with it. And that very obvious wisdom must have the most careful consideration, if our success is to be a lasting one.

A good high-pressure "one-call" salesman can dispose of junk and make a profit for himself out of it temporarily. But we are not to be at all classed with the "pitch man" who stops one day, "works" the town and moves on. We are fixtures, self-respecting business men and permanent institutions, and just as soon as the public realizes that we have only "junk" to sell, that moment will our profits cease and our usefulness to the community will become but a relic of memory.

As a people, we are great "buck-passers." So, when a situation develops which is manifestly evil and detrimental to our business, we get some pleasure out of being able to place the blame on the shoulders of some one other than ourselves. This may relieve our feelings a bit, but it doesn't have any noticeable effect on those profits which we should have had, but which we lost.

In the case of the double features, we exhibitors, in our attempt to assure our patrons of at least a few good pictures during the year, buy up more than we can possibly use on our regular playing schedule so that we may have access to those exceedingly few good pictures which each producing company makes. Then necessity forces us into playing double features to use up our excess product, and for that we damn the producers.

The producers, however, point the finger of blame at a certain group of thoughtless exhibitors, saying:

"Those exhibitors who attempt to strangle competition in their respective territories are the ones who have burdened the industry with double features. Trying to withhold product from their competitors, they have over-purchased their requirements and then, to avoid governmental complications as to restraint of trade, they have been compelled to play two and even three features together to use up their purchases."

"Vicious Circle"

Wherever the blame may justly fall, the fact remains that the double feature policy has tossed us into a vicious circle which will shortly engulf us all, unless immediate steps to remedy the conditions are taken.

The more we play double features, the more and worse pictures the producers are going to put out. And the greater the number of bad pictures which are made, just that many more poor pictures and double billings the exhibitor will have to run in order to get at those occasional good ones which sometimes do come out. And so on, ad infinitum and ad nauseam.

All this discussion would be unnecessary if double features were money-makers; but in the experience of small town exhibitors they most decidedly are not. They are only a source of added expense. The small town showman has no flossy, sucker, tourist trade to keep his theatre out of the red.

Pictures rose from an interesting mechanical, photographic and optical novelty to the foremost place in the entertainment field through a very gradual and hard won improvement in their character—their character and their quality. And, when lack of foresight on the part of either producer or exhibitor, or on both their parts, causes the character or quality to slip in the slightest degree, the whole industry will immediately skid into the oblivion it will so justly then deserve.

And now, now that we have the facts before us, let's get busy and do something about them.

Stock Reports On RKO, Fox And Columbia

The analyzation of stock holdings in RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Columbia Pictures; a dividend declaration by Loew's, Inc.; an earning report for RCA, and an estimated value of $497,257,013 placed on the total market value of motion picture securities on the New York Stock Exchange, were the principal financial developments this week involving motion picture business.

Atlas Corporation's books carry the company's RKO investment at $4,058,274, it was disclosed in the report giving effect to changes in the company's structure as a result of recent mergers and dissolutions of Atlas subsidiaries. The Atlas holdings in RKO were listed as $2,128,597 face amount of RKO bonds and 263,493 shares of RKO common. RKO is working out details of a settlement by which M. H. Aylesworth, resigning chairman of the board, is to receive approximately $200,000 for interesting Atlas capital.

Further sale under escrow agreements of 429 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common and 858 shares of $1.50 cumulative preferred stock by the Chase National Bank in December has been reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. At the close of the month, the bank still held 352,347 shares of common and 704,694 shares of preferred. The commission also reported Sidney R. Kent as acquiring, through his Berkshire Finance Company, 6,355 shares of common in exchange for 5,048 shares of the $1.50 preferred.

Back reports on Columbia filed with the commission by Harry Cohn showed the acquisition in August, 1936, of 37 shares of common; sales of 6,000 common voting trust certificates in April, 700 in June and 1,400 in July, and the acquisition of 1,723 in August; and the sale in April of 6,000 purchase warrants and acquisition in August of 585 in an adjustment for dilution.

The board of directors of Loew's declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common in addition to an extra of 50 cents, payable March 31 to stockholders of record as of March 12.

The preliminary report of Radio Corporation of America and its subsidiaries for the year ended December 31, 1936, showed estimated net profit of $6,100,000 after interest, depreciation, amortization of patents and goodwill, and federal income taxes. The report states that after providing $3,300,000 for all 1936 preferred dividend requirements, there was an estimated balance available for common stock of $2,800,000. This would be equal to approximately 20 cents a share on about 13,800,000 no-par shares of common stock.

During 1935, actual profit was a net of $5,126,873, which, based on present capitalization, is equal to around 13 cents a common share.

Kansas Variety Tent To Move

The Kansas City Variety Club will move from the Country Club Plaza to film row on March 1st. Frank Hensler is Chief Barker.

Rogers Succeeds Schenck On MPPA Directorate

Charles R. Rogers has been elected second vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, to succeed Joseph M. Schenck. Louis B. Mayer, president, and all other officers of the association were re-elected at the annual meeting in Hollywood. Mr. Schenck resigned because of the pressure of other business affairs. The other officers re-elected were: Jack L. Warner, first vice-president; Fred W. Beetson, secretary-treasurer; Joseph I. Breen, director of Production Code Administration; Dr. James Wingate, director of studio relations, and Mrs. T. G. Winter, associate director of studio relations.

ASCAP Denies Score Charge Share

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers does not levy any charge of any kind on either producers or distributors for the use of its copyrighted music in pictures and does not participate in any way in the score charges collected from exhibitors by distributors, E. C. Mills, general manager of the organization, advised the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York in a letter published in The Independent.

"ASCAP's sole and only charge made to exhibitors," Mr. Mills' letter states, "is in respect of a license to publicly perform musical compositions copyrighted by our members. We make no charges whatever to the producers of pictures—have no contract or relationship whatever with them . . .

"We have suggested before and we suggest again that it would be perfectly proper and consistent for the exhibitors to ask the producers who bill them for these charges to explain just what is covered by the charges.

"I wish emphatically to repeat," the letter concludes, "that this society does not participate in the revenue derived by film exchanges or producers under the heading of score charges."

May Withdraw From Austria

Unless the Austrian Government cancels its new legislation increasing Kontingent regulations by 25 per cent, all of the major distributing companies now operating in that country will close their offices, it was revealed in New York this week by a foreign executive. Columbia Pictures is the only major company not operating in Austria through its own office.

A decision by Austria is expected later this month. Distributors contend that under existing regulations offices cannot operate profitably and if the new 25 per cent Kontingent increase goes through there is no other alternative but to withdraw.

The new ruling affects only American pictures, it is said. German films are imported tax free, according to a law passed some time ago, while the French Government has a private agreement with the Austrian Government banning Kontingents.

Annual Luncheon, Conference Held By Review Board

The 13th annual motion picture conference of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures was held in New York for three days from February 4th to 6th and concluded last Saturday with the organization's 22nd annual luncheon. (Picture on page 12).

The several hundred delegates to the conference attended, on the morning of the opening day, a performance of "The Eternal Mask," a Swiss film, at the Belmont theatre and later heard it discussed by Dr. A. A. Brill, psychiatrist and member of the board's executive committee.

An afternoon session on the theme, "Looking Backward and Forward at the Motion Picture," featured talks on censorship and the growth of the newsreel by Pearl Buck, writer, and Truman Talley, editor of Fox Movietone News. Other topics included: old days in film production, the past and the present film public, the coming of sound, talent scouting and music in motion pictures.

On Thursday evening "The Old and the New in Motion Pictures," was demonstrated by showings of "Queen Elizabeth," produced in 1912, and "Maid of Salem," one of Paramount's latest releases. Addresses were made by Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, and Professor Allardyce Nicoll, of the department of drama of Yale University.

Various uses of the motion picture were discussed at the second day session. Alan Villiers showed films made during a recent world voyage of his full rigged ship, the Joseph Conrad, and other speakers talked on representative films in art, literature, psychology, religion and science. A review of the history of color in screen work was part of the program.

Junior motion picture activities, especially those of the young reviewers, occupied the program on Saturday morning and the conference concluded with the annual luncheon at which prominent figures in various fields spoke. Among the speakers were Fritz Lang, director; Will Irwin, author; F. Trubee Davidson, president of the American Museum of Natural History; Dr. Clarence Cook Little, managing director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer; Langdon Post, Tenement House Commissioner of New York; Mrs. Johanna M. Lindlof of the New York Board of Education; Friedrich Feher, composer and director; Erin Obrien-Moore, Walter Abel and Sir Cedric Hardwicke. Mr. Irwin's talk was a vigorous attack on censorship of any form of literary effort.

Dillingham Sale Delayed

The sale of film, theatrical and television rights to properties owned wholly or in part by the estate of the late Charles Dillingham has been adjourned by Federal Referee John Joyce to March 12th.

FROM READERS

ASKS INDUSTRY TO BAR GANGSTER PICTURES

To the Editor of the Herald

Isn't there some way we can stop the producers from continually making and releasing all those gangster, murder and robbery pictures? Our patrons are sick of them and do not hesitate to tell us, and by the time we play them from all our contracts it's a continuous round of shooting, robbery and murder. One thing sure—it must not take much brains to write or money to produce them, or both.

The following is a list of our recently played pictures, all with murder, gangster or robbery theme in them, or all three combined:

"Sworn Enemy," "Longest Night," "Wanted—Jane Turner," "Plot Thickens," "All American Chump," "Mad Holiday," "Laughing at Trouble," "15 Maiden Lane," "Winterset," "Night Waitress," "Big Show," "Sinner Take All," "Under Cover of Night," "Secret Valley," "Career Woman," "Charlie Chan at the Opera."

We may have missed a few of them and I note there are several more coming up. Yet we wonder why so many sensible people stay away from the movies!—E. C. Arehart, Manager Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa.

Meeting the Interest Of Library Patrons

To the Editor of the Herald:

Public library patrons are becoming increasingly interested in films made from published books, short stories and plays. Some months ago a list of 130 titles was compiled by Maxine Block and published in Wilson Bulletin, a periodical which goes to librarians throughout the country. Librarians wrote that displays of books and still pictures and shelves of books marked Coming Film Releases were drawing many readers; that patrons asked for the books before seeing the pictures and then commented to the librarians as to the accuracy of the film. Several wrote that they had found their shelves short of classic titles when the demands for "Tales of Two Cities" and "Mutiny on the Bounty" were large. Now they want to know what classic books will be filmed so that they may order additional copies for their shelves. Many requests for information on "The Plainsman's" literary background have been received. In order to help librarians, a list of film-books is published in the Wilson Bulletin every month.

If the Legion of Decency hadn't stepped in, chances are that librarians would continue their aloof attitude for what they call the stepchild of the arts. But the need to find uncensorable material which led to the classics has made librarians aware of the publicity which they may reap out of displays, and of book marks such as are issued on important films by the Cleveland Public Library, of radio talks, and so on. While librarians naturally feel that they do not wish to exploit any film, as they are not in that business, the increasing high cultural type of film shown makes it advisable for them to go into a relationship which was distasteful to them when films were not based on biographies, classics and topical subjects of a serious nature.

Alert film publicity departments have a wealth of exploitable material in this tieup. Instead of mentioning boldly the book from which the film is made, in most cases they merely state "taken from a book by so and so." This does not help the librarian, who hasn't time to hunt through the author's writings for a title which contains the material of the film. Changing titles of wellknown books to get box office titles is also a serious loss of valuable publicity.

Many agencies are trying to keep the librarian up to date on what books will be in demand. Among them Library Journal publishes a list of films each month in various classifications such as completed, in active preparation, recent purchases, and the like. Anyone who wants to see how far the films have advanced need only look at this publication, which is a dignified, scholarly one devoted to the science of librarianship. Publisher's Weekly almost every month publishes a list of current features and recent purchases. The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures publishes a Selected Book Films every year which lists a large number of titles and which is in great demand by libraries. Another publication is Books and Films, a monthly publication devoted to library-film co-operation which is published by Ina Roberts and Anthony Belle, who are connected with the Cleveland Public Library. They have received so many letters inquiring about library-film co-operation that they found it necessary to publish a pamphlet called "When Books and Movies Meets, a Guide to Library-Film Cooperation." The Motion Picture Review Digest probably publishes the most complete list of films made from books in its weekly issues.—Maxine Block, Managing Editor, Motion Picture Review Digest, 950 University Avenue, New York.

Liability Insurance Rate Doubled in Missouri

Public liability insurance rates on out-state Missouri theatres have been doubled, increasing from five cents a seat to 10 cents. The change was made effective this month by the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters. Rates in St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., Kansas City, Kan., and out-state Kansas remain the same.

Approximately 50 theatres in Kansas, Greater Kansas City and western Missouri are securing public liability at 25 per cent under the established rate through the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, under a plan worked out for the group a year ago by Finton H. Jones of the Travelers Insurance Company. Under the increase, out-state Missouri exhibitors who are using this plan will pay 7.5 cents a seat instead of the 3.75 cents per seat they have been paying.

Hollywood Studios Personnel

Executives and personnel of the recently organized Hollywood Studios, Inc., include Maurice Gebber, president; Lloyd H. Clifton, vice-president; Oscar L. Horn, studio attorney; Louis Felix, secretary-treasurer; Ray Kleinburger, director of public relations; John F. Meehan, studio manager; Harry Jolson, casting director, and Joseph Diskay, musical advisor.

BRITISH BEGIN STUDIO REORGANIZING; PRODUCERS SUPPORT FLEXIBLE QUOTA

Economy Move at Denham and Reduced Activity by GB; Floor Space, Recently at Premium, Now Available

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

The "crisis" in British film production, so widely publicized by the daily press after the Twickenham failure, is now being seen in a more accurate perspective. Prospects of a universal collapse, prophesied as the sequel of a bank boycott now seen to have no basis in fact, have faded. Some crashes there have been and more are to come, but for the most part the concerns affected have been marked down by knowing trade folk, as destined to failure from the beginning by their financial structure and method of conducting their affairs.

So far as the established large scale production units are concerned, the position is that an era of economy is opening, following upon rather prolonged season of lavish spending and, in some cases, of extravagance.

Undoubtedly the new policy has been imposed by the financial interests behind production, but it does not imply that capital will be denied to British production this year. More accurately, the money granted will be governed by a knowledge of the facts of the international film situation which financiers very obviously lacked a year ago.

Surplus Studio Space Seen

One of the most important of those facts is the real as opposed to the theoretical value of the American market to British production at its present stage of achievement. An obvious result of its realization by those with the money will be that capital for the "£100,000 picture," budgeted on the shaky precedent of "Henry VIII" takings, actual or estimated, will be out of all proportion more difficult to obtain in 1937 than it was in 1936.

Since a large percentage of British floor space in 1936 was occupied by pictures of this type,—some of them made by individuals who will make no more of any type of film—it follows that one of the most obvious effects of the existing atmosphere in the City will be a surplusage instead of a shortage of studio floor space.

This situation in fact already has begun to reveal itself. With the eight-stage Amalgamated plant at Elstree approaching completion, but not yet in use, the Gaumont-British studio at Lime Grove has only one picture on the floor. There is another G-B picture in progress at the Gainsborough studio. British Lion's Beaconsfield studio is shut down. So are the three plants recently occupied by the Julius Hagen units at Twickenham, Elstree and Hammersmith. Completion of the last British National production left Herbert Wilcox Productions, Grosvenor Films, and Paramount the active tenants of the fine Pinewood plant, where an additional floor is even now in construction. At Denham there is half the activity of three or four months ago.

Any new production enterprise, British or American, is undoubtedly in the position that it can pick and choose among several modern and "Hollywood equipped" plants in London, whereas a year ago studios were in the happy position of having a call for 50 per cent more space than they could supply.

Illustrating this situation is the uncertainty which still exists as to the plant ultimately to be used by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British pictures. An announcement of an agreement with Amalgamated has been expected for many weeks. Now there are stories that Pinewood is making very special efforts to get the M-G-M space contract.

To a certain extent, this situation is temporary. A weeding out of insolvent and incompetent producers has coincided with a policy of lessened expenditure by established units, dictated by the results of their experimental period of practically unlimited expenditure. At the same time plans for large scale production by or for American interests have not yet reached the studio stage. Three months hence there will probably be three times as many films of "international" scope in production as at the present moment, and this production will be on an infinitely sounder financial basis than much of that of 1936.

London Film's New Policy

The revision of policy announced by London Film Productions a few days ago illustrates the fact that the British industry, instead of collapsing, may be finding its way to stabilization. London Films served all of its employees earning £5 ($25) a week and upwards with notices of salary reductions of 5 per cent on amounts of £5 to £10, 10 per cent on £10 to £20, and 15 per cent on larger amounts, and stated that the cuts were necessary to preserve the stability of the company, which demanded "the most stringent economy."

Not officially stated but generally understood in the trade was that the Prudential Assurance Company, chief backer of London Films, had imposed these economies and others not mentioned in company pronouncements as a condition of continuing its financial support for another twelve months. Staff reductions have been considerable, amounting to 50 per cent in the case of the scenario department, but some of them are due to the fluctuations in production. A total reduction in the Denham studio

BRITISH BROADCASTER CITES HERALD POLL

Alistair Cooke, film critic of the British Broadcasting Corporation, cited the status of western stars, as shown in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD poll of money making stars, as "the best item that this critic can find" in an address over the BBC network. Mr. Cooke took satisfaction from the fact that Gene Autry and Buck Jones earned places in the poll and praised western films as "natural and sincere fiction."

Mr. Cooke's radio feature, like all other British programs, is not sponsored, and it is estimated that his broadcasts are heard by a large percentage of the 20,000,000 BBC listeners.

Moyne Report Approved in General by Film Group in Report; Want Trade Members on Film Commission

The Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, representative body of British production interests, has submitted its official comments on the Moyne Report in a letter to the Board of Trade signed by M. Neville Kearney as secretary of the Group.

Producers are in general agreement with the conclusions and recommendations of the Report, the Group announced, but various suggestions of amendment in detail are made.

Referring to the proposal to set up an official Film Commission or Administrative Body to regulate and control the trade, the Film Group's statement said:

"It is assumed, in referring to control, it is not intended that the Commission should have any power to interfere with the administration of individual businesses. . . . The Group agrees that the Commission, should, subject to the above proviso, have powers to administer a new Act, but if it should be desired to entrust it with further powers, the Group would welcome an opportunity of expressing their views on the detailed proposals."

Suggestions also were made as to the composition of the Commission, the Group expressing the view that, while the principle that the membership shall be independent has its support, it is essential in their view that the Commission also should include individuals having up-to-date and practical experience of the industry, though such persons need not be a majority of the membership.

"In any event," went on the statement, "an Advisory Body comprising leading personalities actually engaged in the industry, analagous to the exisiting Advisory Committee to the Board of Trade, should be set up, so that the Commission could consult it from time to time, both as regards current business and the exercise of the wider powers which the Report recommends should be conferred upon the Administrative Body."

If the administration of a new Act is transferred from the Board of Trade to the Commission, the Group suggested the existing staff of the Board of Trade should be "seconded" for the purpose.

Suggests Quota Minima

The principle of a British Films Quota variable from year according to the output and quality of British films in the preceding year was accepted by the Group, but it was urged that Quota minima of 20 per cent for distributors and 15 per cent for exhibitors should be set up.

The suggestion that the Commission should operate a Quality Test for films for which a British certificate is sought was described as "not in itself wholly inadvisable," but, it was stated, in practice, the task would be complicated and burdensome and might also have a serious effect upon the financing of British films. "There would always be a fear that any picture might be rejected by the Commission, however much it had cost."

Pointing out that "the test to be applied should be whether the film represents a bona personnel from 3,000 last summer to 1,400 at the present time is partly accounted for by the fewer number of outside units using the studio.

Alexander Korda denied entirely that there would be any fundamental change of policy and described as "rubbish" the theory that British pictures could be made profitably for the British market alone.

Such £20,000 pictures, he said, were likely to prove more expensive than a £200,000 picture with a world release. London Film's revenue, he said, was drawn as to 48 per cent from England, 28 per cent from America and 24 per cent from the rest of the world. The first six pictures made by London grossed over £1,000,000 and, among individual pictures, "Sanders of the River" cost £100,000 and grossed £180,000. Six London films completed but not universally released, "Fire over England," "Knight without Armour," "Elephant Boy," "Troopship," "Dark Journey" and "Storm in a Teacup," had cost £1,200,000 ($6,000,000), he said, and his backers were confident, in spite of losses inevitable in building up a new industry, that production for the world market was sound business.

585 Exhibitors Default

Placed before the House of Commons by Dr. Burgin, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, the figures of "exhibitors who failed to show the statutory percentage of British films" in the four years to Sept. 1935 were: 585 defaults, 42 certificates of exemption granted.

In the case of distributors, in the four years ended March 1936, there were 29 defaults and no exemptions.

"B" Film Idea Reported Dropped

Remarking that "it is untrue that we are going to make a cheaper kind of picture," Mr. Korda supported, without actually confirming, a general impression that the deal recently announced whereby "B" pictures would be made at Denham for British Lion release had been abandoned.

There were stories in Wardour Street that United Artists had asserted a sole right to all films made by Mr. Korda; also suggested was that the Prudential was not disposed to finance this further enterprise. As this mail closes there is a story that the "Denham Productions" enterprise will be taken over by Robert T. Kane, of New World, and that the films will go out through Twentieth Century-Fox instead of British Lion. Confirmation is forthcoming to this extent: "Four Dark Hours," directed by W. Cameron Menzies and originally publicized as the first of the Korda-British Lion features, now appears among films to be produced by Mr. Kane.

Irish Oppose British Invasion

The Irish Cinema and Theatre Association, of the Irish Free State is to associate itself with a movement originated by the National Agricultural and Industrial Development Association to protect the Irish theatre field from "penetration" by British circuit interests. Irish industry wages are declared to be 50 to 100 per cent higher than in England. An all-Irish newsreel is one of the objects aimed at by the movement.

"Dixey Scheme" Floated

The "Dixey Scheme" of cooperative distribution by exhibitors has been formally registered as The British Independent Exhibitors (Distribution) Co., Ltd.

The authorized capital is £200,000 divided into £100,000 of £1 preference, £60,000 in 300,000 ordinary shares of 4 shillings value, and £40,000 in 400,000 franchise shares of 2 shillings value. The franchise shares are reserved to exhibitors and carry a right to the company's product.

The directors are: Capt. A. C. N. Dixey, R. McLoughlin, J. X. Prendergast, J. Milner, R. Dooner, Randolph E. Richards, F. W. Astbury, O. E. Wetzel and G. M. Heap. The three last-named represent financial interests. Also on the board are A. George Smith, former London chief for Samuel Goldwyn, and J. H. Hess.

At a private dinner at the Mayfair hotel, at which the launching of the company was celebrated, it was stated that pictures would be made for its program by Joe Rock, who had given an option on "Edge of the World," and Signor Ludovico Toeplitz, of Toeplitz Productions, who promised "super-pictures" using British stars and stories but made in the new Italian studio.

Buchanan Launches Company

Jack Buchanan Productions, Ltd., has been registered with capital of £100,500. Other Directors are J. Arthur Rank and Charles M. Woolf, of General Film Distributors, Ltd., and S. J. Passmore, an attorney. Mr. Buchanan will produce at Pinewood Studios, and will release through General Film Distributors.

Lionel Carson, veteran editor of The Stage and a figure in the theatrical world of London for more than 20 years, is dead.

Marlene Dietrich entertains a visitor, Herbert Marshall, on the set of "Knight Without Armour", in which Robert Donat stars with her. It is a London Films subject directed by Jacques Feyder, at Denham. Miss Dietrich arrived in New York this week en route to Hollywood for her next production.

Flexible Quota Idea Supported

fide attempt to provide the public with reasonably good entertainment," the letter added. "It is obvious that all pictures on which more than a certain amount of money has been spent should pass this test," and suggested that any Quality Test imposed by the Commission be governed by this consideration.

Specific Proposals

Its specific proposals were:

"That any long film costing not less than £1 per foot should, ipso facto, be considered as having passed the Commission's Quality Test and be eligible for renters' (and of course for exhibitors') quota."

"That makers of films who could not prove that their cost reached or exceeded the minimum figure should be entitled to submit the films to the Commission for examination, without disclosing their actual cost."

"If rejected, such films to be eligible for exhibitors quota only."

Whether a film is rejected by the Commission or passed (in which case it becomes eligible for distributors' as well as exhibitors' quota) it was urged that its actual cost should not be disclosed. Recommending that short films shall be treated on the same basis as long, the Group added a warning of the great importance "of not endeavoring to enforce any definite standard of artistic merit. No independent Commission can possibly be as well qualified to judge what will please the public as the companies actually engaged in production."

On the recommendation that restrictions on advance bookings shall be withdrawn, the Group dissented "entirely." The suggestion that block-booking should be made illegal it described as "impracticable."

Columbia

AVENGING WATERS: Ken Maynard—Ken Maynard is always popular, to be never forgotten, since he broke all records for us in "Strawberry Roan."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COME CLOSER, FOLKS: James Dunn, Marian Marsh—Just a programer. Running time, 61 minutes. —W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

NORTH OF NOME: Jack Holt, Evelyn Venable—Will do as the weak end of a dual. Excellent outdoor shots make it worth while, although the story is slow paced. Running time, 63 minutes. Played January 22-23.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

NORTH OF NOME: Jack Holt, Evelyn Venable—Just a programer. Running time, 63 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—Fine picture for any spot. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THEY MET IN A TAXI: Chester Morris, Fay Wray—Just a programer that will get by. Running time, 69 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THEY MET IN A TAXI: Chester Morris, Fay Wray—Above average program picture which should be double billed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TRAPPED BY TELEVISION: Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot, Nat Pendleton—This nameless, inexpensively produced program picture accounted for more profit than the average special. Its title attracted our patrons, and the action and novelty of the subject pleased them.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

First National

CAPTAIN'S KID, THE: Guy Kibbee, Sybil Jason—Just a programer. Gets by.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Patricia Ellis, Dennis Moore, Mickey Rooney—My idea of a swell picture. Seemed to please the patrons and heard a good many favorable comments the next day. Was right down in the front row with the kids yelling "Come on, Faithful" during the show. Mickey Rooney is very good. Running time, 66 minutes. Played January 20-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Patricia Ellis. Dennis Moore—Good programer. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Owl Town, Maine. General patronage.

HERE COMES CARTER: Ross Alexander, Anne Nagel—Nice program picture which satisfied. Sorry that Alexander is gone. Hope they give that Nagel gal an opportunity. Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THREE MEN ON A HORSE: Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell—Box office smash in any spot. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THREE MEN ON A HORSE: Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell—Very good. Not up to expectations, though, as we must have expected too much. Attendance poor, part of which we attribute to lots of sickness here. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 24-25.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TRAILIN' WEST: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—Just another of those star Westerns so short that to give the patrons any show at all has to be built up with shorts. Running time, 56 minutes. Played January 22-23.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TRAILIN' WEST: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—A satisfactory western. Foran's singing is a high spot. The musical score is swell and expertly played. It creates a neat background for the picture accentuating the action. Played January 12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Good picture for any spot. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ALL AMERICAN CHUMP: Stuart Erwin, Betty Furness—Dandy program picture which kept the patrons in fits of laughter most of the time. Running time, 64 minutes. Played January 14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart —Box office smash. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CAMILLE: Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor—Not much. Running time, 109 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Luise Rainer, Myrna Loy—Everything the producers claimed, which was plenty. However, I question the wisdom of roadshowing a production of such magnitude, then withdrawing it, to be generally released following season after exploitation peak has passed. "Time marches on" and so does the procession of "super-colossals." Business in smaller spots bound to suffer from these deferred releases. Class dismissed. Running time, three hours. Played January 24-26.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—A very satisfactory comedy drama. It pleased all who saw it 100 per cent. Severe weather probably cut our attendance in half but the picture is not to blame. Running time, 98 minutes. Played January 8-9.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

LIBELED LADY: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Swell picture which didn't do any extra business. Can't understand it, except that bad weather had something to do with keeping them away. Certainly you could not ask for better entertainment. Running time, 98 minutes. Played January 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford—Box office smash in any spot. Running time, 81 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MISTER CINDERELLA: Jack Haley, Betty Furness—Poor.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

OUR RELATIONS: Laurel and Hardy—Good program and pulls well. Running time, 86 Minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald—The best show we have had for long time but the storm had to play us the opposition so no one could hardly get out, only a few brave men folks came and all were pleased. If we have a good picture Mother Nature works her trick and takes joy out of show business. Step on it boy if you didn't play it yet. Running time, 12 reels. Played January 24-25.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SUZY: Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone, Cary Grant—Although this was played late, it still drew good at the box office and had a good many favorable comments on it. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 19.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

Paramount

ACCUSING FINGER: Paul Kelly, Marsha Hunt—Good. Running time, 61 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ALONG CAME LOVE: Irene Hervey, Charles Starrett—Here is another one of those little sweet pictures, and you have a marvelous cast beside the two principals. There is Doris Kenyon, just as sweet as ever, and Irene Franklin (Chicago's own), bringing back the happy days of 1912, and believe it or not she is still good, and you have a picture worth any playing time.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ALONG CAME LOVE: Irene Hervey, Charles Starrett—Just a programer. Gets by. Running time, 69 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ARIZONA MAHONEY: Larry Crabbe—Swell western.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen—No theatre could go wrong on this picture as it is by far the best of the "Big Broadcast" pictures to date. Running time, 100 minutes.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

COLLEGE HOLIDAY: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen—Box office smash for any spot. Running time, 87 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

HUCKLEBERRY FINN: Junior Durkin, Jackie Coogan, Mitzi Green—Played to a packed house. It is still a fine picture after many years. Of course, the story is well-known throughout all public schools and is well liked by the children, and also a surprising amount of my adult patrons thought the picture was real good. Hope I can get more stories like that. Running time, 77 minutes. Played January 24-26.—Milton D. Bundt, Dyckman Theatre, New York City, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West—Lay off.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

I'D GIVE MY LIFE: Sir Guy Standing, Frances Drake, Tom Brown—Very nice program picture. Why is it that the producers have for the past year made about ten light comedy dramas to one serious drama such as this? Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS, THE: Ray Milland, Dorothy Lamour—Patrons seemed to enjoy this better than average jungle drama. Played January 27-28.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE PRINCESS: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Good in any spot. Running time, 84 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LET'S MAKE A MILLION: Edward Everett Horton—Poor.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple, Adolphe Menjou—Broke all records for Limerick. Nuf sed. Running time, 86 minutes. Played January 26-27.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: Charles Ruggles, Alice Brady—Good comedy drama with Ruggles and Alice Brady pleasing. The Boy Scout angle also very good and could be played up. We did not appreciate how much or how good that angle was until too late. Played January 31.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MURDER WITH PICTURES: Lew Ayres, Gail Patrick—A program picture that proved fairly interesting. Needs good shorts to back it up. Played January 20-21.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Box office smash. Running time, 109 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SPENDTHRIFT: Henry Fonda—A good show but the title is no good. It will please 'em all if you can get them in. They will tell you so on their way out with a smile. Running time, eight reels. Played January 23.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Republic

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Kay Hughes—We have just received the glossy paper pamphlet which Republic flatteringly calls a press sheet on "Round-Up Time in Texas." Exhibitors in buying the product of this company are well aware that complete sales are usually made on the strength of the Autry pictures, yet this star is apparently in the studio doghouse judging by the press sheets and advertising material prepared for his productions. While sermonizing, we might also mention the shoddy story material the producers are inflicting upon the star in trading upon his popularity that is beginning to show slight signs of decline. The original subject of this report, "The Big Show" depends almost entirely upon the Texas Centennial backgrounds for its entertainment strength, which wavers precariously when Autry sings such a hot-cha unwestern number as "I'm Mad About You." We would say that the popularity of this player has been due to his singing ability, pleasing personality and the intriguing titles given his films, not his story material, which has with but two exceptions been exceedingly trite. The novelty of a western star singing has carried Autry this far and won him a public that is beginning to compare his efforts with those of the Hopalong Cassidy series, noteworthy because of their fine production values and story strength. Are you listening, Republic?—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Forth Worth, Texas. General patronage.

COUNTRY GENTLEMEN: Olsen and Johnson—So screwy that it could not fail to get the laughs. Everyone seemed to be well pleased and got a big laugh out of it. Running time, 68 minutes. Played January 14.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

THREE MORE SEND REPORTS ON FILMS

Reporting in "What the Picture Did for Me" this week for the first time are the following showmen:

Milton D. Bundt, Dyckman Theatre, New York City.

Gavin Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont.

Henry McNeil, Jubilee Theatre, Stellarton, Nova Scotia.

Read the comment of these exhibitors on the business done for them by the product they have played recently.

RADIO MADE HIM A STAR!

NBC and CBS Featured him in Cowboy Tom's Roundup—Maverick Jim—The Gibson Family—Barn Dance—Tex Ritter's Campfire—Terry and Ted The Lux Radio Theatre—Eno Crime Clubs—Gang Busters—Cafe of the Red Dagger—Death Valley Days—Bobby Benson—Court of Human Relations.

HE'S TEX RITTER THE new GRAND NATIONAL SINGING COWBOY STAR

DOWN TO THE SEA: Russell Hardie, Ann Rutherford—A good little picture which did not go over for us. We are too far from the coast for this type to click in this town. If Republic would use better star names it would help put over their pictures much better. Played September 25-26.—Gavin Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

GHOST TOWN GOLD: Robert Livingston, Kay Hughes, Max Terhune, Ray Corrigan—This is the second of this series of the Three Mesquiteers westerns which we have played. The first one pleased very well but were we surprised to find that we had created a following with the use of only one of this series. Played November 27-28.—Gavin Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

GUNS AND GUITARS: Gene Autry, Dorothy Dix—Good entertainment for the younger set. Not very much music, which puts Autry over. Need more songs. Running time, 6 reels. Played January 7-9.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Our box office jumps every time we play Gene Autry westerns. This is the best Western star we are using. Autry pictures gross with the biggest pictures we play. Played January 6-7.—Gavin Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

RIDE, RANGER, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—When better westerns are made Gene Autry will make them. All Gene Autry pictures do a fine business for us. Played December 4-5.—Gavin Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

RIDERS OF THE WHISTLING SKULL: Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune—This is the best of this series to date. Our patrons were well pleased with this western and told us so. This trio is coming along nicely. Played January 23-24.—Gavin Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

ROARIN' LEAD: Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune—Each of this series is building at the box office. They are well made and Republic has a fine series in these westerns. Played December 18-19.—Gavin Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BIG GAME, THE: June Travis, Philip Huston—Programer. Just gets by. Running time, 73 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DON'T TURN 'EM LOOSE: Lewis Stone, Bruce Cabot—Is a picture that should be played in every state of the union and especially for all the parole boards connected with the law enforcement agencies. "Don't Turn 'Em Loose" should be the slogan of all the governors in every state of U. S. A. Running time, seven reels. Played January 20.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MARY OF SCOTLAND: Katherine Hepburn, Fredric March — Another rather elaborate historic drama. This will prove highly satisfactory to patrons who are interested in 16th century history, which only means that the picture will definitely please not more than 25 per cent of the usual patrons of small-town theatres. Running time, 123 minutes. Played Jan. 22-23.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou—Good entertainment.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Just a programer that will get by. Running time, 57 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Helen Broderick, Victor Moore—Past masters in the art of "danceology," Fred and Ginger once more scale the heights in this their latest picture. From the minute of the first reel to the last minute of the last reel there is not a letdown in the continuity. Ably supported by Victor Moore and Helen Broderick, the picture is a riot of fun, clever dancing and tuneful songs and for 100 minutes makes you forget the cares of the day. The "Bojangles of Harlem" sequence with Fred dancing with the shadows is tops in dance staging. Running time, 100 minutes. Played January 29.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—A real night's entertainment that disappointed us at our box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WINTERSET: Burgess Meredith, Margo—Grim, stark melodrama, featured by outstanding portrayals by several of original stage cast. While considered a critics' picture, pleased most of our patrons, but business hit two-year Sunday-Tuesday low, miserable weather conditions being partially responsible. You probably will not make any money on this picture, but you'll not regret having played it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played January 17-19.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Box office smash for any spot. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee. Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CRACK-UP: Peter Lorre, Brian Donley—A complete crack-up at the box office. No stars, no story, no good. Try to figure out what Brian Donlevy was doing in this one. We have not yet decided whether he was villain or hero. Suitable for the double bills only.—Henry McNeil, Jubilee Theatre, Stellarton, Nova Scotia, Can. Small town patronage.

CAN THIS BE DIXIE?: Jane Withers—Good programer. Running time, 66 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

15 MAIDEN LANE: Claire Trevor, Cesar Romero—Just a programer get by. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town Maine. General patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon, Don Ameche—Fox rates this as Class A. To our patrons it rated a darned poor Class C. I have taken more razzing than on any picture this winter—and we had no business to speak of. It's a miscast mess with no story and splendid stars like Gaynor, Young, Bennett, Ameche wasted. As for Simone Simon, our patrons panned her in "Girls' Dormitory," but that was mild compared to what they say of her last effort.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Loretta Young, Simone Simon—And Fox calls this a "special." Janet Gaynor and Loretta Young are popular, but they can't make anything out of this dud. As for the much over-advertised "See Moan-See Moan," if she is an actress, I am a deep sea diver. It's the patrons who do the moaning when they have to watch her cave woman technique. Fortunately, no doubt, one can't understand what she says. Just a long line of walkouts on this one. I did not hear the comments; I beat it to the booth before the show was over. Pass this one up, special or no special. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley, Yacht Club Boys—My patrons in general do not care for football pictures, but this one has quite a lot of comedy, action and loads of music, which makes this picture stand out as one of the best. Cast is excellent and it is well played throughout. Business was good. Running time, 92 minutes. Played January 30-Feburary 1.—Milton D. Bundt, Dyckman Theatre, New York City, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly—A musical comedy drama with a football background that pleased young and old. Good music, good fun, and the football was not overstressed so that it was good this long after the season is over. Jack Haley, Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, The Yacht Club Boys, Arline Judge, all pleased, and the new kid sister (Judy Garland), who caught the football melons, and afterwards sang, is a comer. Played January 22-23.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Park, S. D., Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—Very fine picture with good color and sound. Everybody enjoyed this picture. Average business. Played January 17-18. —Gavin Bros., American Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Adolphe Menjou—Good show to fair business but we can't see why Adolphe Menjou should play a part of a drunk when his talents should be of the refined class. I can't see that a star should ever play a part that puts him or her in the class of the low-downs. Maybe it's OK but we don't approve of it. Give us clean fun, if any. Running time, 10 reels. Played January 17.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young, Alice Faye—Here is a first class Temple feature. Helps to recuperate our business on this little star after "Dimples." Give us more like this, Fox. Robert Young almost steals this picture. Alice Faye isn't hard to look at, either. Give this show the works. It will do good business and help build up Shirley for future pictures.—Henry McNeil, Jubilee Theatre, Stellarton, Nova Scotia, Can. Small town patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple—Shirley will pull them in and it will please. Not a big picture. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

UNDER YOUR SPELL: Lawrence Tibbett—Good programer and Lawrence Tibbett. Running time, 62 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WHITE HUNTER: Warner Baxter, June Lang—Just a programer. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WILD BRIAN KENT: Ralph Bellamy, Mae Clarke—Made from Harold Bell Wright's novel. Our patrons complained because nothing remained of the book except title, and they even partially changed that. Others razzed what was supposed to be the big scene; a battle with flames in a wheat field. Personally thought it a crudely directed mess. Played January 29-30.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WILD BRIAN KENT: Ralph Bellamy, Mae Clarke—Just a programer. Gets by. Running time, 58 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

United Artists

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Mary Astor—Fine picture for any spot. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Universal

CRASH DONOVAN: Jack Holt, Nan Gray—Very short, but plenty full of action. Saturday patrons should eat this picture up in any town. Running time, 54 minutes. Played January 16.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

EMPTY SADDLES: Buck Jones—Just imagine making a picture and naming it "Empty Saddles" and not even using the song. This is another very bad picture from Universal. Buck Jones' name still means something at the box office and if the producers would make the picture right he would be a good bet for some time to come, but with the type he is now putting out, it does not look so good.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

GIRL ON THE FRONT PAGE, THE: Gloria Stuart, Edmund Lowe—I did not think much of it, but everyone seemed to think it was very good, especially the hardboiled newspaper angle played by Edmund Lowe. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 21.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

SUTTER'S GOLD: Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—Another old one that is far above average. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 30.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

Warner Bros.

CAIN AND MABEL: Marion Davies, Clark Gable—Good enough for any spot. Fast paced and some fine musical sets. Our territory in grip of sub-zero, snow-blocked roads most of month. Business 60 to 75 percent of normal. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 15-16.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

CAIN AND MABEL: Marion Davies, Clark Gable—An excellent show. Clark gives his usual very good performance with plenty of support from Marion and the entire cast. Good, snappy story and some wonderful dance sequences. The Pipe Organ number is great. Very satisfactory picture, but extremely cold weather and bad roads left me in debt. Can't blame the picture for that, however. Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

"VERY VALUABLE TO EXHIBITORS"

"This is our first report on pictures for 'What the Picture Did for Me' department," write Gavin Brothers, from their American Theatre at Stevensville, Montana.

"This is the section of the Herald which is very valuable to small town exhibitors and from time to time we will contribute other expressions of opinions of pictures."

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Wonderful show but it flopped for me. Tied with schools, too. Can't get it through my head why. Running time, 115 minutes. Played January 29-30.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—No winner. Big production. Running time, 113 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, A: James Cagney, Joe E. Brown, Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland—Were quite peeved at Vitagraph for asking us to bring this back after a roadshow engagement which was quite successful. But we did, and must say that if the weather had not been so bad, we would have done a nice business as many people wanted to see it who had previously been unable to on account of the high prices. Running time, 117 minutes. Played January 20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GOLDDIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Victor Moore—It is high time that Warner's got away from this type of musical. We are getting tired of Dick Powell, Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell and the too familiar faces of this company's stars. The same players are used in too many features for our fancy. Little has been changed from the last "Golddiggers." Give us something a little different for a change. Running time, 12 reels, 6 reels too long.—Henry McNeil, Jubilee Theatre, Stellarton, Nova Scotia, Can. Small town patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—Good enough for any spot. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. Mcphee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ONE WAY PASSAGE: Kay Francis, William Powell—Enjoyed by everyone who came to see it. Print very poor. Running time, 7 reels. Played January 1-2.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

PUBLIC ENEMY'S WIFE: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—Just a natural for any small town community. Pat O'Brien very popular here. Not a kick in a carload of this class of entertainment. Running time, 8 reels. Played January 14.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

SONS O'GUNS: Joe E. Brown, Joan Blondell—Very good entertainment for a small town audience, although Brown not popular in this district. Some good comments on this production. Running time, 9 reels. Played January 21.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AM I HAVING FUN: Andy Clyde—Very good. Play it. It's a scream.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HALF SHOT SHOOTERS: 3 Stooges—Better than the average for this team and nutty enough to make anyone laugh. Running time, 18 minutes.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

LAUGHING WITH MEDBURY IN THE PHILIPPINES: Interesting and instructive. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PAIN IN THE PULLMAN, A: 3 Stooges—About the only thing Columbia had last year that was any good was a few comedies. These three nuts are always good for laughs if they are not shown too often. Running time, 18 minutes.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

PEACE CONFERENCE: Krazy Kat Cartoon—Don't pass this up. A take-off on our peace conference.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S BOY SCOUTS: Scrappy Cartoons—Scrappy cartoons always popular with children.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 13—Received with a very favorable audience reaction.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOMORROW'S CHAMPIONS: New World of Sport Series—A juvenile sport reel. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHOOPS, I'M AN INDIAN: 3 Stooges—Leave it to the Three Stooges to get the belly laughs. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Educational

FEMININE FORM: Treasure Chest Series—A dandy reel for education on exercise and dancing. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

KIKO AND THE HONEY BEARS: Paul Terry-Toons—Good music, fine recording and lots of fun for the kiddies. O.K. three Bears and Kangaroo. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RODEO DAY: Song and Comedy Hit—Good. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEHIND THE HEADLINES: Pete Smith Specialties—Exceptionally well done, both instructive and entertaining. Rates among the best of Pete Smith shorts. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

EARLY BIRD AND THE WORM, THE: Harman-Ising—Good music and singing in this colortone cartoon. Fair for a filler. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

LET'S GET MOVIN': Popeye the Sailor—Good Popeye cartoon for all. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LUCKY SPILLS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Another corker. Running time, 19 minutes.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

NEVER KICK A WOMAN: Popeye the Sailor—Good for more laughs than any Popeye we have played. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS SINBAD THE SAILOR: Popeye the Sailor—Step on it. It's a feature in itself. Running time, 20 minutes.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

RAH, RAH, FOOTBALL: Will Osborne and Collegiates—It's a corker. Not a filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

SHORTY AT THE SEASHORE: Paramount Varieties—I still believe that people got tired of these monkey shorts long ago. This was no better than usual, in my opinion. Running time, 9 minutes.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DEADLY FEMALES: Struggle to Live Series—Chills and thrills as scorpions battle and spidery ladies eat their husbands. Odd and interesting. Adds zest to the program. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

DEBONAIR NEW ORLEANS: Easy Aces—Traveling through New Orleans with the Easy Aces interspersing their sure fire line of running stuff and nonsense. This team is always well received here.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SWING IT: Radio Musical Comedies—A very good musical. Worth anyone's time to run it. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S GRAND OPERA: Mickey Mouse—An exceptionally good Mickey Mouse cartoon in color. Running time, 9 minutes.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

Universal

MUSIC HATH CHARMS: Oswald Cartoon—Very good for this type. Running time, 8 minutes.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BACKYARD BROADCAST, THE: Broadway Brevities—And boy, it's some broadcast. Acted entirely by kiddies, this appeals to all ages. Good dancing and snappy songs. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BOULEVARDIER OF THE BRONX: Merrie Melodies—Fine for all kids under 90 years. Running time, seven minutes.—S. A. Kimball, Sokokis Theatre, Limerick, Maine. General patronage.

CAMERA HUNTING: Our Own United States Series—Very interesting entertainment.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

COOCOONUT GROVE: Merrie Melodies—A take-off on the famed Cocoanut Grove. Excellent Merrie Melody. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

FOR SPORTS SAKE: Our own United States Series—Good sport reel. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HARRY RESER AND ESKIMOS: Melody Masters—Very good musical. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LOGGING ALONG: Vitaphone Novelties—Excellent reel of the logging industry. Big trees and thrilling scenes. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PARIS IN NEW YORK: Irene Bordoni—A great little feature. Irene Bordoni sings in her own inimitable style. An "apache" team goes to town, and a xylophone player supplies the laughs. Book it. Running time. 22 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RED NICHOLS AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Series—Worth playing in any theatre. First class entertainment.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

REEL VAUDEVILLE: Big Time Vaudeville Reel Series—These vaudeville reels are all good. Pep up any picture. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

RHYTHMITIS: Hay LeRoy, Toby Wing—A good musical short with Hal's inimitable tap dancing.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STUDY AND UNDERSTUDY: Broadway Brevities Series—Very fine entertainment. Running time, 2 reels.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town patronage.

SUNDAY ROUND-UP, THE: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—An excellent colored musical.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VITAPHONE TROUPERS: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Four vaudeville acts to the reel. All good. The Four Trojans, acrobats, Aunt Jemima, "Coon Shouter," Maxine Stone, excellent comedy act and the Buccaneers, male singers. Very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J.

Serial

Universal

FLASH GORDON: Buster Crabbe, Jean Rogers—This serial has been head and shoulders over anything made by any company so far and it has more than held its own all the way through the thirteen episodes. If you want a good one, play it.—Roy Pringle, Eureka Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

ON MANAGERS WHO "COOK"

Whoever said it first and wherever his body rests, a stone suitably inscribed should be placed over the remains of the guy credited with the apt line:

"The man who can lick himself, can lick the world."

It's a grand thing to study and may be aimed especially at well situated theatremen to all appearances resting comfortably where they are.

F'rinstance, there's the case of the lad out in the midwest counted among the smarter showmen, who is doing an excellent job for himself, his boss and of course his family. His weekly check is healthy, he falls heir to gratifying yearly bonuses, comes and goes as he pleases, lives well and saves money.

So what? Or, but what?

This Round Tabler is hot for the big spots. He wants to shake off his suburban surroundings and hit for New York where his abilities may be properly recognized (?). The bird is "cooking himself" because he is not exposed to the fiercest competition there is, where he would have to be on his toes even in his sleep, where much more dough than he is now making would not go half as far as his present stipend.

Then there is the boy down in the sunny South who yearns for the cold, wintry North; the man out in the Pacific Northwest who hones for the Southwest; the bird in the Bronx who cried for California—but why go on.

The names of the restless are Legion and there's a post in almost every town.

Now if at least once a year it could be so arranged that at a given signal every manager who wanted another spot could proceed immediately to his "promised land," that would solve the problem and quite neatly, too. But it can't be and if it could, chances are six-two-and-even that a lot of the boys would soon discover their new paradise was spelled wtih a very small "p".

Of course, it would be unwise to say that every man who desires to change is unfair to himself, his superiors, his family. Not every manager is grazing in green pastures and not by a long-shot is every showman nursing a shoulder sore from pats of complimentary bosses. But let's be sensible about it and agree that all executives are not Simon Legrees, all towns not impossible, all compensation not disproportionate.

To those men who rate more money, better spots and better treatment and are not getting a fair shake is accorded every wish that the powers that be will steer them eventually to smoother going. But those theatremen who are doing well where they are, have excellent opportunities of going further in their organizations and are yet rebellious, should concern themselves more with shutting off impractical fancies and mix a few rousing cheers with the jeers.

Isn't it ironic that a showman trained to spot and overcome weaknesses in the attractions he plays should not be able to do somewhat of a similar job with his own personal outlook?

AN INVITATION TO READERS

What Dave Perkins says on a following page in his article on the neglect of story values in motion picture advertising again brings up the questions:

"Are first-run managers depending too much upon publicity other than the usual theatre media to sell coming shows?"

"Is the publicity created by the Hollywood syndicate column, the fan magazine and radio, sufficiently complete to replace even a part of the selling job Perkins claims the theatres should do and are not doing, especially on pictures without strong star value?"

That patrons know more about coming attractions than the manager is an expression ofttimes heard in show circles, meaning that through the above-mentioned channels of information the customers are able to spot the clicks and the so-called turkeys long before the theatreman has a chance to put out his "coming" lobby posters.

In effect, Dave says "no" and goes on to tell why. He also suggests how the weaker sisters may be strengthened—all of which is highly interesting.

The importance of the subject calls for additional comment pro or con, and your Round Table is pleased to tender to readers an invitation to take pen in hand on the subject for publication in these pages.

Columnist down in Miami recently broke out with a yarn on managers in which the theatremen are referred to as the forgotten men of showbusiness and sichlike. The writer winds up by saying: "Being a manager is like eating spaghetti gracefully—it's not an immortal achievement or even a mental feat, but it is a minor art."

Something like filling a lot of space in a newspaper with a column on theatre managers, eh?

Penn Ties Contest To Merchants' Co-op.

An identity contest tied to a "name the picture" idea on "Rembrandt" was utilized by Manager Ed Penn, Fox Arlington, Santa Barbara, Cal., in a full page co-op tiein in which each merchant's ad carried a still of Charles Laughton showing him in parts played in previous pictures. Space was left under each of the stills where readers were asked to set down the name of the feature to identify the still.

Contestants were required to cut out each ad and paste on sheet of paper. Neatness and promptness of response was given consideration in the judging for the prizes of five pair of guest tickets given by each store. Ads were topped by full page box with contest rules and theatre credits.

ROUND TABLERS WILL HOLD LUNCH

Club members in the New York metropolitan area are contemplating a Round Table luncheon get-together on Thursday, February 18, from 12:15 on, in the lounge at Lyons' Chop House, 50th Street and Sixth Avenue.

Theatremen who would like to attend are requested to get in touch with club headquarters or the following committeemen: Paul Binstock, Republic Theatre, Brooklyn; Lew Preston, Endicott Theatre, Brooklyn; Joe Salmon, Riverside Theatre, New York; Ed Siegal, Jerome Theatre, Bronx, and Eric Van Dyck, Loew's 83rd Street Theatre, New York.

The Committee wants it known that all theatremen outside of the above - mentioned circuits are also invited to attend.

Sound Screen Display Plugs "God's Country" in Phoenix

J. R. Rodgers of the Fox Theatre, Phoenix, Ariz., used an effective lobby display in conjunction with "God's Country and the Woman," rigging up a "sound screen display" consisting of a 35mm sound projector placed on the mezzanine and projected down upon a large display screen. The sound horns were placed behind the screen. The trailer for the picture was run continuously in the lobby during peak hours.

Rodgers also sent out 2,000 novelty cards to ballyhoo the film, and made tieups with all libraries and book stores in town. One prominent photographer devoted his entire window to forest scenes, with the head, "God's Country and the Woman."

Milt Harris Wins Trip

Free plane trip to New York, hotel accommodations and seven-day journey to Nassau offered by United Artists for best campaign on "Dodsworth" has been voted to Milt Harris, Loew's Cleveland theatres ad chief, for campaign on the date at the State Theatre. Contest broke before release of the picture last September.

Newspaper Works With M & P On Identity Contest

Recently completed and to highly gratifying results was the 12-week "Movie Title and Identity" contest put on by the Boston American and M & P downtown Boston theatres. One hundred and seventy-five prizes were given, first money being $5,000, the total awards coming to double that sum, M & P contributing a share of that sum. All bona fide residents of New England were eligible except employees of the paper, the theatres, motion picture companies represented or their families. No subscriptions were involved nor were there any monies to pay. The paper was interested of course from the standpoint of added readers and M & P was plugged in all ads and publicity plus daily paragraph that the houses concerned screened scenes and titles of productions used in the contest.

Cartoons were run every week day for the 12-week period, each cartoon representing, conveying or suggesting the title of a picture current or to be shown at the seven houses concerned. A number of possible titles was run with each cartoon for guidance and in addition, contestants were also required, from another list incorporated in the contest blank, to select correct list of three players appearing in the picture.

Rules also stated that answers were to be submitted only in groups of the entire 72 and with the last printed blank space was provided for an appropriate slogan of not more than 10 words which entrants were also required to send in. Examples given included: "Movies, the Nation's Favorite Recreation," "Movies, They Amuse and Educate," etc., and only one slogan was required with the entire listing of answers. More than one set of answers could be entered by one contestant, but no more than one prize could be won by any entrant nor any one family.

Among the circuit publicity men who participated in putting this over under Browning's supervision were Gene Fox, at the Metropolitan; Paul Levi, at the Paramount and Martin Glazer, Scollay Square Olympia.

RoundTablers Win Prizes Offered by Warners on 'Tiger'

Louis Charninsky, of the Capitol Theatre in Dallas, Texas, was awarded first prize of $350 for his campaign on "Bengal Tiger" submitted in Warner Bros.' Campaign Contest on the feature, according to an announcement by Gradwell L. Sears, Warner vice-president and general sales manager.

The contest began September 5, 1936, coincident with the national release date of "Bengal Tiger" and ended January 1, 1937. Prizes were offered for the best all-'round exploitation campaigns submitted by theatre managers over the country on the feature. Warner Theatres were barred from the competition.

The winner's campaign was also awarded the Quigley Awards Silver Plaque for September, 1936, and detailed in the Round Table, issue of October 17th.

Four other winners in the contest, as announced by Sears, are: Sid Holland, Elco Theatres, Elkhart, Indiana, second prize, $250; A. J. Belle, RKO Skouras Terminal Theatre, Newark, New Jersey, third prize, $150; H. F. Borresen, Strand Theatre, Minot, North Dakota, fourth prize, $100, and J. T. Floore, Empire Theatre, San Antonio, Texas, fifth prize, $75.

The campaigns submitted in the contest revealed a variety of unusual ballyhoos used to sell the feature. One of the highlights of Charninsky's first prize winning campaign included a tieup with the Dallas Centennial Exposition which gave him free plugs for the film over the Fair's public address system. To secure this, Charninsky entered the cage of a live tiger on the Fair Grounds, a stunt which broke Dallas papers.

Second prize winner Sid Holland was also numbered among the Quigley Plaque winners during 1936 and other of the top-finishers in the Warner contest have also taken honors in various months of the Quigley Competitions.

As in previous contests sponsored by producing companies, the majority of the winners in the "Bengal Tiger" drive are active Club members, in this instance four out of the five holding membership.

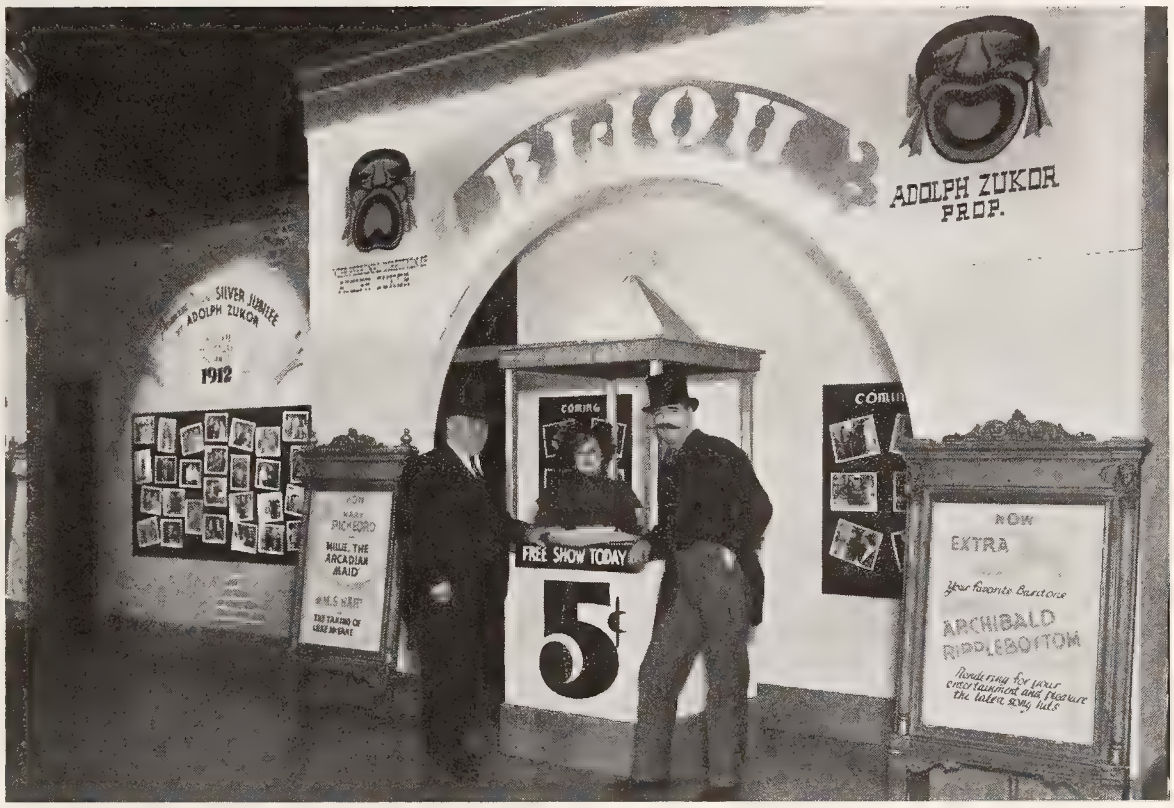
Replica of First Adolph Zukor Theatre Constructed for Omaha Silver Jubilee



Outstanding in the exploitations executed for the inauguration of Paramount's Silver Jubilee was a replica of Adolph Zukor's first theatre installed in the lobby of the Orpheum, Omaha, with projection for silent films showing early pictures made by Mr. Zukor. Seats were installed and patrons admitted without charge. Piano was also used for incidental music. The bewhiskered gent with the topper in the above photo is Manager Bill Miskell with Mayor Butler to left and the cashier in mutton sleeves and pompadour. Details were arranged by Evert R. Cummings, Tri-States district manager, and Ted Emerson, Tri-States' Omaha publicity director.

Silver Works with Red Cross To Aid Flood Refugees

Under the supervision of M. A. Silver, zone manager of the Warner Theatres in New York State, the Red Cross were permitted to go into the theatres for collections for the flood refugees. Several thousand dollars were raised and trailers run on screen in cooperation with local papers, urging the public to send canned goods to a special depot selected in the city of Albany.

In Troy a monster midnight benefit show was run in cooperation with the Mayor for which the Junior Chamber of Commerce sold tickets. Collections were also made in the Warner houses in Utica, Batavia, Dunkirk, Elmira, Hornell, Jamestown, Olean and Wellsville. Other houses in these situations also cooperated on the drive.

"GOD'S COUNTRY" WEEK PROCLAIMED BY MAYOR

For the reason that the picture was filmed in the Portland, Ore., sector and that it was swell publicity for the city and the lumber industry in the Pacific Northwest, Mayor Joseph Carson was prevailed upon to issue a proclamation announcing a "God's Country and the Woman" Week, current with the date at the Portland Paramount Theatre.

The break, of course, was plugged to the fullest at the theatre, in local dailies and other advertising.

Money-Back Offer Made by Davis

Accompanying photo shows 12 by 18-foot banner planted on wall on main street by Walt Davis, Capitol Theatre, Regina, Can., four weeks ahead of "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" with money back guarantee.

For lobby gag, Walt erected compo board display on which were placed three-inch pieces of red cord, copy read "A string to tie around your finger to serve as a reminder to save a date for Carrie." Strings had to be replaced several times a day. Lobby contest consisted of bottle filled with colored water, ducats offered to those guessing how many tears it would take to equal the amount of water in the container.

Painters Wear Signs For Paramount Week

Much was done by Manager F. Burr and publicity director A. Livermore, for the Paramount Week celebration at the Cameo, Sydney, Australia, starting well ahead by wide distribution of Paramount Week tabs imprinting of restaurant napkins, rubber stamping of circulars, letters, etc. Special cards were placed on suburban trams, prominent windows promoted, one displaying a large card with the theatre phone number with copy inviting passersby to phone the theatre about Paramount Week. Other stores advertised specials for the event, milk bars carrying cards urging patrons to drink more milk during the celebration.

Tiein was made with racing paper for contest to select a number of winning horses at the local track. Prizes were given for those sending in most accurate choices during Paramount Week with copy of ad and the racing paper in addition to mentioning the prizes donated by the theatre included plugs for the period in newspaper ads and announced it on radio programs.

Theatre front was lavishly decorated and a traffic-stopper proved to be back-banners worn by painters working on building next door to theatre (see photo), copy reading: "Brightening up for Paramount Week at the Cameo."

Clark Gable Congratulates Altoona Gable on "Cain"

Among the leading stores in Altoona, Pa., is the Wm. F. Gable Co., and this gave Dave Goodman, manager of the Strand an opening for an ad and window tiein on "Cain and Mabel" with a sale held by the store. Goodman had the studio wire congratulations from the star, copy starting with the line: "From One Gable to Another." Wire was blown up for reproduction in store window (see photo) and also incorporated in page ads in two papers.

The pressbook "snappy comeback" contest was also planted to back up Goodman's vigorous ad layouts, magazine distributors bannered trucks, and 10 passes awarded daily on clothing store's radio program to names selected from among customers. Stills and tiein copy were planted in music stores and the hit numbers played by studio orchestras at radio stations.

Story Values Neglected In Ads, Says Perkins

Round Tabler Declares Stars Not Only Assets In Selling Pictures at The Boxoffice

by DAVID F. PERKINS

The author of this article has had many years of experience in show-business as exhibitor, advertising executive with the Paramount interests in New England and more recently advertising director for the Schine circuit with headquarters in Gloversville, N. Y. In his opinion, pictures without definite star value may be built up at the box office by more emphasis on the story in exploitation and publicity as well as newspaper advertising.

There has been a gradual, almost imperceptible change in picture newspaper advertising during the past decade, which as a whole can not be considered an advancement. I make this statement advisedly after the examination of thousands of theatrical newspaper tear sheets during the past few years. This change is in a measure due to the average theatre manager's attitude toward his attractions. This does not apply to all theatre managers, but the exceptions prove the rule that there has arisen a growing belief that the public is only induced to come to the theatre because of the star value of the players—the marquee value of the names he can illuminate in electric lights.

This belief has been fostered by various national engraving "mat" services and by the artists who make hand-drawn newspaper ads. With this belief uppermost in the theatre manager's mind, the faces of his stars are featured in his ads and their names are exploited above the attraction title. Further, in the belief that people haven't time to read an ad, he dismisses the story and nature of the picture with as few words as possible.

If he is correct in his belief, then the millions of dollars spent in the explanatory copy of countless commercial ads is wasted. But people do read advertising copy if it is prepared so that it intrigues their interest and these millions of dollars are not wasted but bring countless millions in sales.

Unfortunately, when star values in a picture are weak, the majority of managers classify the attraction as a "B" picture and put as little energy as possible back of selling it. To them it is just one of those things—a program picture, that they have to bear with.

The circuit heads of the Paramount partnerships at the recent conferences which grew out of the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee dinner in Los Angeles, went emphatically on record against "B" pictures.

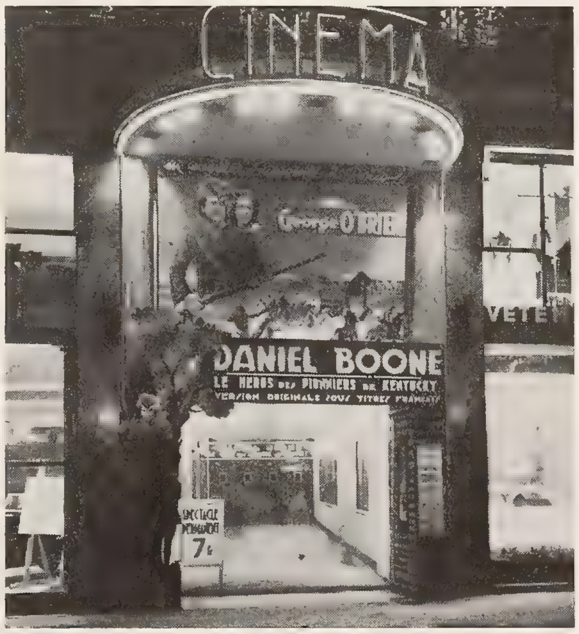
Calls Story Important

But "B" pictures we will always have with us. Not through the desire of the producer, chain theatre executives or exhibitor, but because of the vital fact that the cost of a production does not assure that it will be a smash hit, nor does the star values assure it, though both are frequently contributing factors. It is a combination of stars, players, direction, production values and treatment of the story that makes an "A" picture. And with all the good intentions in the world to make an "A" picture, the result is often a "B" picture as far as real excellence or as far as box-office value is concerned.

There is a place for "B" pictures. Players on the way up can only be developed as stars through a steady growth in popular favor through "B" pictures. The star who arrives overnight is a miracle and miracles are scarce. Exhibitors must awaken to the fact that actual stars can be counted on less than their fingers and toes. If they depend upon lesser luminaries for advertising appeal, they have only used 50 per cent of the potential appeal. The other 50 per cent is the story.

The selling of "A" pictures as well as "B" needs a definite right about face, if the tear-sheet evidence is to believed.

When we fail to like a favorite star or player in a certain attraction, the fault is probably the story. The player is the same actor or actress we have admired before. Why do so few cinema theatregoers return to see their favorite star in a picture which they have already witnessed? It is because of the story. Why do players that are not favorites fail to intrigue their interest? Because the story is not played up in the advertising enough to intrigue the theatregoers' interest, which a well rounded cast of featured players would make acceptable.



CHAMPS GOES WESTERN. Front for "Daniel Boone" at the swanky Elysees Cinema, Paris, reported the first time a western has been booked on Avenue Champs Elysees. Mme. L. Rudlof, Paris Radio publicist, is credited for the display.

The subject matter of the story is neglected in 75 per cent of theatre newspaper advertising and yet it is one of the most important factors that make for the selling of motion-picture entertainment.

There is too prevalent an attitude on the part of most managers to rely upon the vast channels of information with which the Hollywood productions come heralded to the fans today. But the mentality of the broad public is childishly forgetful. It must be reminded again and again.

The basic principals of effective theatre advertising, as well as of all advertising, can be stated in a few fundamental rules that are all-embracing.

Offers Basic Principles

Advertising is salesmanship in print. That means: give to the prospective theatregoer in a compelling way the "Reason-Why" the theagoer will be amused or entertained by a specific attraction.

Primarily, a theatre ad must have a central "Reason-Why" that strikes to the heart of a reader's emotions and arouses curiosity.

Secondly, there must be an arresting and compelling layout or form of presentation that grips the reader's interest and creates the desire to see the attraction.

These fundamental ingredients: Emotion and Reason, or shall we put it, aroused curiosity and created desire, are the dominant factors that sell theatre tickets.

Thousands of tear sheets from all sections of the country clearly indicate that these fundamental principles of good picture advertising are being lost sight of, not alone in the selling of the "B" picture, but in "A" pictures as well.

Star names and titles of pictures, while valuable, are not sufficient "Reasons-Why." Headlines and caption copy are necessary. The mass of theatregoers should be sold on story values as well as star values. If the exhibitor will consistently do so, not only in his newspaper advertising and publicity, but also in his exploitation and ballyhoo, he will be surprised how his "B" picture attendance will pick up and often make him think it was really an "A" attraction.

Boy Scouts Cooperate

To sell "Ah Wilderness" Tom Simmons, at the Dunlap, Clarksville, Ark., had local Boy Scouts go house-to-house with blanks to be filled in with name and addresses, one to each family. Guest tickets were given to those whose names were selected at the theatre and Scouts filling out the cards were given free admission. Theatre copy was carried on reverse side of blank.

PATRON VOTES ASKED FOR "REQUEST WEEK"

Clubs, Churches and Libraries Cooperate with Francis Gooch to Choose Ace Return Dates

Put on by Francis J. Gooch and successfully at the Columbia, Bath, Me., for the week before Christmas was a "Request Week" of pictures previously played, the selection made by patrons. No extra money was spent on the campaign and the details supplied by Gooch may be used for other dull weeks during the year or, of course, filed away for this year's pre-holiday period during December.

Drive started three weeks ahead with trailers announcing the event and asking that requests for certain pictures be left at the box office. Then the regular trailer a week ahead with the pictures selected carried a leader reading: "The Hits You Have Selected." For two weeks in advance, and to keep interest high, portable slide projector was used to project slides on front border over center of screen. Slide copy carried current voting results, idea being used during first two minutes of the regular trailers. Lobby one-sheet was also used for the listing idea with each day's leaders in the voting. Copy was changed daily and on the day before, final list of the leaders announced which of course were the pictures already booked for the "Request Week."

To save on the regular accessories in his inside lobby frames, Gooch covered these with masks carrying the "request" copy. Openings were left to use as little exchange material as possible and with six changes a week. Francis was thus able to save quite a bit in this direction, cutting down about a third on accessory costs. Same procedure was adopted in the 14 by 36 insert card spaces with the entire week's program listed on cards of this size. Title cards with stars and pictures were used instead of eight by ten stills and masked one-sheet instead of the 40 by 60's also employed to hold down expenses.

The house personnel cooperated enthusiastically with a special service meeting called three weeks ahead when the event was explained and discussed. At another meeting held the following week, "Employees Cards" were given out. Cards carried spaces for selected pictures, names and addresses of patrons voting, and on other side copy on the "week." Three cash prizes were given employees turning in the greatest number of filled-in cards over half of which were returned. Gooch reports that each of the staff had about six people helping in the distribution which resulted in the unprecedented total of returns. The selection idea was further used in the regular weekly programs and many of these also were brought in by patrons. Libraries, churches and schools were contacted to the point where leading minister plugged the week in his regular sermon and aided in distributing the request cards to the congregation. School principals and librarians also cooperated, as did various clubs, scout organizations and Y.M.C.A.

Letters were written to patrons making request by mail and enclosed were programs of the week with the selected pictures circled. Leaders of women's clubs were similarly contacted. Local newspaper aided with daily stories among which was a listing of some 50 pictures supposed to be voted upon. Top window display in bookstore exhibited many books from which the hit pictures were made with tiein copy included.

Gooch reports that he had other smart ideas to use but which would have entailed more than he had available to spend. He reports the above, all in the low-cost and no-cost field, helped to give him a week's business that otherwise would have been below normal.

Merchant Ad on Photos

Another neat way of promoting free autographed star photos is Frank Boucher's idea, most recently used on "Rainbow on the River" at Warners' Metropolitan, Baltimore. At top of reverse side of the Bobby Breen photos, theatre ad is carried in a neat box and similar setup is planted at the bottom with the merchant's ad. Bishop Sells Insurance Men

Hal Bishop, RKO Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Canada, for "Gold Diggers" sent letters to all local insurance men reading, "When an insurance man tries to sell a theatre manager—that's not news. But when a theatre manager tries to sell an insurance man—THAT'S NEWS," followed by the information that Dick Powell, star in the picture, sells insurance and succeeds in putting over a $1,000,000 policy.

ANOTHER GOOD ANGLE ON DRAMATIZATIONS

Where there are no broadcasting stations and theatres thus cannot avail themselves of the free radio scripts, an idea of exploiteer Bill Bishop, described in MGM's bi-weekly campaign service bulletin may be found adaptable.

Bishop arranges for high school senior classes to present these dramatizations weekly providing the scripts are suitable. Students rig up school auditorium stages to resemble broadcasting rooms and put on the show with proper credits for the company and theatre. In return, exhibitor invites cast to see the picture so amateurs can compare their performances with the stars.

Makes Ace Tieins At Rural Schools

Told in "Contact," ace Warner Theatres Cleveland zone house organ, is how Kroger Babb, Warner-Chakeres circuit ad head, in Springfield, Ohio, has effected a plan to contact teachers in the county rural schools for the purpose of building interest in houses nearest the schools.

Babb saw the county superintendent of schools in the theatre's drawing area and obtained from him a list of all the teachers in that county, by school, the names embracing, grade, junior high and high schools. Then to each teacher in one of the schools of the total number in the area was mailed one pass good on Sunday, the opening day. As there were 12 schools contacted in all, that meant each teacher would see a show on the house at least every twelfth week. The slant worked out well enough so that after it got going, Babb found the response very satisfactory and was in the lobby to greet his guests when they attended to make the personal contact that was later to pay good dividends.

This works out when pictures with especial historical or other school angles are booked and which need an extra boost. Kroger then advises the teachers of these dates and finds that the teachers in appreciation of his courtesies lend aid and help to arrange group attendance among pupils. The first test of this brought an estimated 95 per cent of possible student attendance.

And also of note is that once the teachers come in as guests of the theatre many return and often with friends which brings a lot of extra admissions that the house was not getting previously.

Changes Matinee Schedule On "Romeo" for Students

Complete sellout for "Romeo and Juliet" several days before the picture opened was realized by Roscoe Drissel, manager of Loew's Parkway, Wilmington, Del., recently when Pierre S. duPont, chairman of the board of the duPont Company purchased the entire block of reserved tickets for an evening performance. The block comprised 1,024 tickets, every seat in the house. Mr. duPont presented the tickets to the University of Delaware as a gift. Students, faculty members, their wives and administrative officials of the university attended the showing.

On request of public school authorities the matinee time for "Romeo and Juliet" was changed in order that school children might attend. Notices on the bulletin boards of all Wilmington schools announced to the students the time and information concerning the picture, and special attention was given the senior high school students as the picture is in direct relationship with their language arts studies. Private showing of the film was given by Manager Drissel in the Tower Hill School in Wilmington for some 300 members of the Tower Hill faculty and English, language, art, and social science teachers, and librarians of the Wilmington public, parochial and private schools.

A ROOTES' ANIMATION

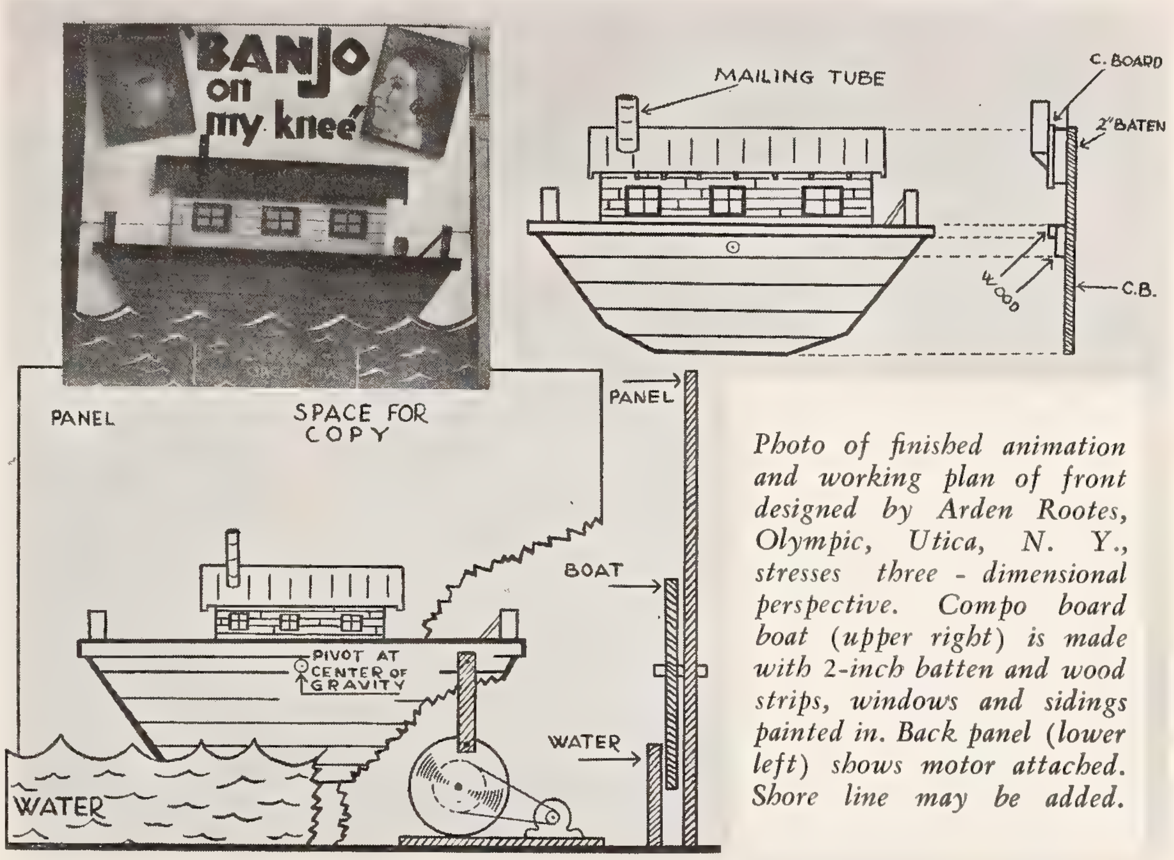

Photo of finished animation and working plan of front designed by Arden Rootes, Olympic, Utica, N. Y., stresses three-dimensional perspective. Compo board boat (upper right) is made with 2-inch batten and wood strips, windows and sidings painted in. Back panel (lower left) shows motor attached. Shore line may be added.

"Come and Get It" Heralds Distributed at Steel Mills

Special circus heralds were printed for "Come and Get It" and distributed to workers of local steel companies by Lawrence Thompson, Loew's Theatre, Canton, Ohio. Beauty salon featured a "Frances Farmer bob" as a weekly special, using art and title as their lead off in their ads, and department store used "Come and Get It" as the lead line in double truck page of weekly shopping news distributed to every home in city.

Bookmarks were planted in public libraries, radio station gave fifteen minutes on production notes and stars of the picture, drug store plugged a "Come and Get It" milk shake, special drinks were featured in restaurant bar and local jeweler devoted window to display of replica of jewels worn in picture.

ICE CREAM WEEK STARTS APRIL 18

Activities of one kind and another are slated for Ice Cream Week, April 18 to 24, sponsored by Ice Cream Review, industry trade journal, and local manufacturers. Picture tieups, radio programs, newspaper advertising and publicity are among the things listed. Suggestions are made by the committee that theatremen and ice cream people get together locally for discussions on cooperations of mutual benefit.

House Personnel Takes Over During "Personality Month"

Catching up a bit on his membership obligations, W. Bennett, from the Empress, in Vernon, British Columbia, reports the successful operation last year of a "Personality Month" in which each week, one member of the house staff was appointed to act as manager and allowed to make tieups, stage extra attractions, put on contests, etc. Bennett of course stood by to insure that everything would move smoothly. Among the ideas executed by the assistant manager, head usher and cashier respectively during their terms were fashion shows, co-op pages, promotion of birthday cakes.

Found profitable also by Bennett is a series of vest and pocket-size programs running up to 14 pages. These carry monthly programs, stories and cuts on coming attractions, institutional copy to build up local business generally and sufficient merchants' ads to hold down printing and distributing costs. The theatreman also publishes these for single big pictures and writes that he finds business men always ready to come in with him. Copy in the single pamphlets include shopping talk and as the literature is distributed in a 30-mile radius, results prove that they draw people in to patronize participating stores as well as attend the Empress.

Kendall Finishes First

Exceeding his quota by the largest percentage, Manager Rex Kendall, Patee, Lawrence, Kans., led managers in the recently completed 13-week Commonwealth circuit contest to straighten returns during the preholiday period. Glenn Deeter, Royal, Hoisington, Kans., placed second with third going to Ray Holmes, Dreamland, Harington, Kans.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

M. D. BUNDT

manages the Dyckman Theatre in New York City, having started in showbusiness at the Fox Walker Theatre in Brooklyn as doorman and was later made assistant. When Randforce took over the house he left and become manager of the Cross Bay in Ozone Park, L. I. From there Bundt joined Rapf and Rudin at the Arcadia Theatre, in the city and thence to his present assignment.

is in Watertown, S. D., managing the Lyric Theatre for the Minnesota Amusement Co., has been with the circuit about eight years, starting as doorman of the Huron, Huron, S. D., and then manager of the State there before coming to the Lyric. Since his circuit is well represented in our section we are glad to add his name to our list and look forward to contributions from him.

acts as assistant advertising manager of MGM in Sydney, Australia, and since all of our brother members are interested in what goes on overseas we shall await with interest accounts of Tinkler's recent theatre activities for reproduction in our pages.

with the recent acquisition by the Wometco Theatres of the State Theatre in Miami, Fla., Charlie was made manager after having spent five years as assistant manager to John Cunningham. Guess that about ties that circuit up 100 per cent Round Table, but you'll have to keep in touch with us, Charlie, and report from time to time on what's going on down your way.

manages the Lincoln Theatres in Danville, Ill., having started as usher at the Palace there, then chief of service at the Fischer, assistant and then manager at the Lincoln. Don's hobby is photography and we're hoping that he'll forward us some pictures of his outstanding lobbies for reproduction here.

is the resident manager of "La Scala" in Manchester, England, having started as assistant manager at the Piccadilly, then appointed publicity chief for Stolls Theatres at Manchester and to various other houses, but all in Manchester. Hadfield has handled grand opera, variety, revues, circus, silent and talkies, in fact, as he says, "everything from the back to the front of the house." We are always interested in reporting stunts from overseas so look forward to hearing from you, Chris.

out in Long Beach, Cal., manages the Palace Theatre for Fox West Coast. We first find Forrest ushering at the Palace in Dallas, Tex., then to St. Louis, Mo., for RKO as exploitation manager and then to the RKO Mainstreet as assistant and left that outfit three years ago to join Fox West Coast.

LIONEL HANSHER

manages the Radio City Theatre in Toronto, Canada, starting as usher with Loew's and after six months promoted to Chief of Service. With Canada signed up almost solidly Round Table, we shall look forward to hearing from you at frequent intervals.

W. VERNON PATTERSON

is the publicist for the State and Roxy Theatres, Marshall, Minn., for the Marshall Theatres Corp., working under W. R. Hiller. Pat has been projectionist at the Roxy and says he has been an enthusiastic reader of this department, but promises from now on shall keep in touch. Okay, Pat, show us!

PHILIP HENRY HAYWARD

is managing director of the Tudor Cinema in Auckland, N. Z., and comes of a family of show people, his father being in the business "since it was one at all and before that in the theatrical end of it." Phil has been at it for over 29 years, having started as projectionist. He has also been in the film exchange business and connected with the building and altering of large theatres in his country. We shall be interested in hearing from you Hayward, so drop us a line.

manages the Sam Harris Theatre in New York City, just a few blocks from club headquarters, so we're expecting a visit any day now. Peter recently left the Ritz Theatre in Lyndhurst, N. J., for this job, having formerly managed the Comet for Sam Harris and also was connected with Fox and Pantages.

manages Warner's Rex Theatre in Sheboygan, Wis., has been in showbusiness fifteen years and has worked for Publix, Skouras Bros. and Warners. Harvey started as treasurer, assistant manager and then managerial job and he must know that joining the club means that he obligates himself to contribute to our section, so we are anticipating word from him shortly.

manages the Florida and Lyric Theatres in Daytona Beach, Fla., for Sparks. Bob started as usher at the Tampa Theatre in Tampa, later becoming doorman and assistant manager. From that spot he was made advertising manager for seven of the Sparks theatres in Tampa and was then transferred to his present Daytona Beach assignment.

is the assistant manager of the Wometco Mayfair Theatre in Miami, Fla., and started as usher at the Grand under O. G. Finley, now at the Park. Earl left showbusiness for a while, but found the lure too great and returned to the fold, working under various of our members and now assists Mark Chartrand who, incidentally, we haven't heard from in some time. How about you boys?

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.
